The minor love interest is carried by James Morrison and Charlotte Merriam. Morrison has a difficult role which he handles amiably, and Charlotte Merriam indicates that she will soon be one of the shining lights of filmdom.

Columns might be written commenting upon the work of such favorites as Wilfrid North, Templar Saxe, Allan Forrest, Bertram Grassby, Henry Hebert, Otis Harlan, Otto Matiesen Jack Curtis, Joseph Rickson and a score of others. Each fits into the role with kid glove exactness, leaving nothing to be desired.

The intense dramatic action is relieved by patches of humor in sequence with Otis Harlan, Wilfrid North and Templar Saxe. These touches are capably handled by skilled artists and enhance the entertaining value of the picture a hundredfold.

The photography and art titles are excellent and the entire gem a credit to the masterly direction of David Smith. The massive scenes in which hundreds of players are used, and there are a number, are classics in the way of direction. The sinking of the Arabella is one of the best pieces of screen technic to be shown in a film.

Rafael Sabatini's famous love story has been closely followed with the result that the author's hand is revealed in every sequence. This tends to prove that the closer a company adheres to the original story the better the resultant production. "Captain Blood" may be safely recommended to those who enjoy good photoplays.

The Border Legion Is Belle Attraction

The "Old West" has come back! Once again in the far North country where Zane Grey wrote the novel "The Border Legion," cowboys in picturesque garb ride through the great stretches where wire fences have not come.

Once again the tinkle of spurs and the creak of saddle leather break the lazy hush of midday.

Once again, in a cloud of dust that darkens the sun, great herds of cattle move through the sagebrush wilderness with the steady rumble of a thousand hoofs.

Once again the rolling hills hear the shrill "coo-ee" of the cowboys, riding herd with one knee thrown nonchalantly over the saddle horn.

The old west was reborn for Paramount's picturization of "The Border Legion," in locations personally selected by Zane Grey. Far in the North country, a selected cast of Paramount players headed by Antonio Moreno, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockcliffe Fellows and Gibson Gowland, brought to life the characters that lived long ago.

Approximately 100 minor players, chiefly cowboys, take part in the spectacular production, directed by William Howard.

"The Border Legion" which opens at the Belle Theatre on Monday was filmed true to life.

The story, adapted to the screen by George Hull, has to do with the activities of a band of ruthless outlaws who preyed upon settlers and gold towns in the early days of Idaho.

A replica of one of the great cattle drives of the early days is a striking sight.

Here is, perhaps, one of the greatest of all Zane Grey tales, produced as is fitting such a story, with a cast that approaches perfection. Moreno and Miss Chadwick have featured roles, and others, besides those already mentioned, include Charles Ogle, James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

PLAN GLASS ROOFS FOR RAILWAY CARS

Christiania, Feb. 14.—On the new railway line through the Romsdal recently opened by King Haakon in Norway, the state is considering the building of special railway carriages with glass roofs in addition to the glass sides now in use on observation cars. This will enable tourists to view from their seats the neighboring mountains which rise to several thousand feet and often hang over the line. The new line links up the Fjord districts of Molde with the lines running to Christiania or Oslo, as this ancient city is now called, and will traverse by fjords, water falls and mountains establishing one of the most picturesque routes in the entire country.

CORBYVILLE 2 PLUMBERS 1 ; WOLVES 3 NAT. CASTINGS 2 ; PARKDALE IN PLAY-OFFS

Two Classy Games City League Hockey

Corbyville Defeats Plumbers, and National Castings Lose First

Jack is back—that is Jack Frost—and assisted by manager Arnott and his men, placed a fairly good sheet of ice at the disposal of the four city league hockey teams which lined up at the Turnbull street arena last evening. Though a bit shelly, the ice held out well and two nifty hockey games held the attention of a crowd of rabid fans for the evening's duration.

Probably last night's games produced the season's closest scores in city league, for Corbyville just nosed the Plumbers out in the first game by 2-1, and in the second game, Wolves of the North "oosed" National Castings out by one goal in ten minutes overtime. The final score was 3-2. This is National Castings' first defeat of the season.

The Plumbers have a "bone to pick" with referee Hen Colling, and he will be lucky if he does not require their services as plumbers this winter. They might present him with a bill longer than a stork's. Plumbers claim that the game they played was strong enough to defeat the boys from the Red Mill out Moira way, had it not been for two occurrences. When the game was started and the puck was faced off, it had not been in play half a minute until a Corbyville player took a long shot and "shimmied" the twine. Plumbers claim he was off side a mile (more or less) and rumor has it that the Red Mill manager admitted the "theft" of the goal. Colling allowed it.

Well there was something thought and said too about the Corbyville goalie throwing out the puck after it had passed the score line in the net. That was in the third. This was not counted for the Plumbers. The period scores were 2-0, 2-0, and 2-1, the Plumbers running their lonely one in near the end. They figure the "dope" should be Plumbers 2, Corbyville 1, but the City League Records will not show it that way.

A Real Hummer

The second game between the National Castings and the Wolves, was a "humdinger" to stoop to vernacular, and tho' the steel workers held the "Pests" down very good, the Wolves had a lead of 2-0 until the last five minutes to go in the last period when the Steel workers tied the score, they finally decided to play five minutes over time. There was no score in the first five minutes of the overtime but in the last five minutes one of the Wolves scored on a long shot. The game ended 3-2 for the Wolves of the North.

The city league hockey is coming along fine and those who are missing it are missing some real good hockey. Only two games have been dropped as a result of Jack Frost's "spree", and the schedule will be carried right out.

The formal opening of the new hospital building at Goderich, has been set for February 18, Wednesday of next week, when the building will be open from 3 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. adn a program given.

Queen Victoria Boys Win Hockey Shield

Defeated King George School in Play-off Last Night

On Friday night at the arena the schedule for Public School Hockey Shield came to its conclusion when King George and Queen Victoria Schools played off their scoreless tie of a previous date. The game was fast and well contested, both teams showing some surprisingly good combination. The masterly manipulation of Latchford and the stone-wall goal-tending of McConnachie featured the proceedings. The only counter was annexed by Q.V.S. in the first period, and thus they become holders of the shield on an unbeaten record for the season.

St. Michael's finish second in the race and King George third. The thanks of all concerned are due to the gentlemen who have so kindly refereed games during the competition.

If Your Skin Breaks Out Use Sulphur

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

TRENTON LOST OUT TO BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 14—Trenton juniors went down to defeat by 2 goals to 0 here last night at the hands of Brockville, who won out on the round by 6 goals to 3, having trimmed Trenton on the latters ice on Friday last. Both teams showed the effect of an enforced lay-off of a week through lack of ice following the mild spell, but nevertheless the game was a hard-fought affair, with Brockville having an edge on their opponents. The good work of Lewis in goal for Trenton prevented Brockville from making the defeat more decisive. The locals will now meet Peterboro in the O. H. A. play-offs.

Mort Kennedy, Brockville's star right wing man, was responsible for the two goals, both coming as a result of individual play. The first was scored 17 minutes after the start of the second period, and the other two minutes from the start of the final frame.

Trenton put up a hard checking game but lacked team play in their efforts. The game was well handled by Armstrong of Toronto, and the teams were as follows:

Trenton—Lewis, goal; Allore and G. Bowen, defence; Bernard, centre; Perry and Anderson, wings; J. Bowen and Purdy, subs.

Brockville—Machon, goal; Sheridan and Woodcock, defence; H. Garand, centre; Kennedy and McInbue, wings; F. Garand and Walsh, subs.

For Trenton Bernard and Lewis were the outstanding players while Kennedy and Sheridan were Brockville's best.

PARKDALE GETS IN PLAY-OFFS BY WIN

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Scoring the tieing goal with forty seconds to go in the final period Parkdale Canoe Club defeated Aura Lee, 4 to 3, in a ten minute overtime senior O. H. A. game at the Arena last night and clinched a place in the play-off with Peterboro for group honors. It was Harry Watson, nursing an injured shoulder, that would have kept the majority of players on the bench, who snarled up the Aura Lee team fighting desperately to hold its small lead, slipped inside the defence, tricked Alfie Moore out of position and flipped in the goal that sent the game into extra play. And with Tracy Shaw serving a penalty Scotty Cawkell passed to Jeffrey for the wininng score after four minutes and thirty seconds of overtime had been played. Aura Lee tried hard to again knot the game, Burke, Cook and Shaw getting inside the defence in the last couple of minutes, but without success. Parkdale will play Peterboro on Wednesday or Thursday, and Saturday of next week and the winner plays either Stratford or Niagara Falls in the finals for the O.H.A. championship and the right to enter the Allan Cup playdowns.

PETERBORO TAKES LAST LEAGUE GAME

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 14.—Peterboro scored seven goals in the final senior O. H. A. fixture here last night with Hamilton Rowing Club but they counted only five of them on the right side of the ledger. One was deflected into the Peterboro net by McLeod for the locals only tally of the game, and the other, a perfect goal, was disallowed by a goal judge, who was ousted from his position immediately after. Two goals, however, were enough to beat the struggling Oarsmen, who, in spite of trying their best through the three periods, were unable to show to advantage against the faster and more experienced Petes.

Mrs. Wm. Armstrong, wife of Chief of Police Armstrong, of St. Thomas, had the misfortune to faill and break her arm at the wrist on the slippery sidewalk on Talbot street.

"Y" Reds Set Another Single game Record

De Throne Printers But Beat Bowlers' Record To Do It

Last night at the Y alleys two games were staged, the first being a challenge game between the Bellevues' Ladies and the Wolves of the North. The Wolves were to spot the Bellevues 250 pins and the loser to buy the supper for the winners. The Bellevues winning out by 124 pins and also winning the supper. The ladies had some of the Wolves' goats which helped them win and of course the railbirds were all for the ladies. Miss Lafferty had the high single and three string of the evening with 253 and 565, thus earning the "Dead-eye Dick" honors of the evening.

In the second game the Printers and Y Reds met in a league fixture, the Reds winning out by 240 pins. The Reds set an awful pace in the first game when they were just 6 pins off beating the alley record. They set a new league record for the single game of 1096 formerly held by the Bowlers. The best performance of the evening was made by M. Hall when he also broke the league record for the single game, rolling 360, being also the high single and three string of the evening with 360 and 677.

DEAN OF CATHEDRAL LIKES THE TRIFLES

Lincoln, Eng., Feb. 14—The appearance of the death-watch beetle in the timbering of one of the towers of Lincoln Cathedral is causing the dean much trouble, but he is equally disappointed with what he calls the stinginess of English people in sending funds to assist in combatting the work of the beetle, and in the restoration of the cathedral.

The generosity of American money, he points out, has enabled nearly half the work to be done, and by the end of the year he expects to have enough American dollars to pay for the reparation of the central tower and two transepts.

Scores of English tourists visit the cathedral but few of them go to him with a ten pound note, as the Americans do, and say "here is a trifle for your fund," according to the dean.

CONVICT IN VIENNA MURDERER AT 73

Vienna, Feb. 14—After an argument over a sum equivalent to $7. Karl Ziedler pensioner, aged 73, yesterday took his landlord's 18-month-old daughter to a bridge over the Danube, flung the baby to her death in the river, and then gave himself up to the police.

An investigation of Zeidler's record shows that he had once been condemned to death, sentence being commuted to 25 years' imprisonment, which he served. On another occasion he was given a short sentence for manslaughter.

Capt. John Ross Roach whose team tackles Hamilton Tigers in Toronto tonight is one of the most important games of the season.

FOUND ORIGINAL BEETHOVEN SCRIPT

Leipsic, Feb. 14—The original manuscript of a Beethoven wedding song was recently found attached to another manuscript in the possession of the firm of Breitkopf & Haertel Beethoven's musical publishers.

The song was composed on the occasion of the marriage, Feb. 6, 1819, of the daughter of Giannatanasio del Rio principal of the boarding school attended by Beethoven's nephew Carl.

All trace of the song had been lost until an employe of Breitkopf & Haertel searching for Beethoven's piano concertos written in the master's hand. The song was fastened to one of them by a clip.

Her 91st Birthday

Congratulations from a host of friends and relatives are this week being showered upon Mrs. Philip Harper, 43 Colborne street east, Oshawa who on Tuesday celebrated her 91st birthday. In previous years the occasion of Mrs. Harper's birthday was celebrated with a party, but last year and this were quietly observed but many of her friends thoughtfully called to tender their happy respects, while a wreath of flowers was received besides many telegrams and messages of congratulation.

Mrs. Harper has spent practically all of her life in this district. She was one of a family of eight and was born in East Whitby Township about a mile east of Columbus. Of the family this lady is the only surviving member. Her marriage took place in Columbus in 1854 to Mr. Philip Harper and following the marriage they lived near Cartwright for the first four and a half years. The Township of East Whitby has been the surroundings where Mrs. Harper has lived except for that short space of time.

Before Chrysler engineers achieved the new good Maxwell, every car buyer had to determine whether to pay a high premium for power and performance, or to pay less for mediocre performance.

In the good Maxwell of today, Chrysler engineers, working with Maxwell's fine manufacturing facilities, have solved the problem completely and unquestionably.

They have solved it by engineering into the good Maxwell a combination of four-cylinder performance capacity and operating-maintenance economy wholly new to the motoring public.

In this latest product of the great Maxwell organization and factories expect a new degree of four-cylinder power, speed, flexibility and vibrationless operation which surpasses these qualities even as Maxwell previously expressed them.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

The major heaved a sigh. It seemed to him a dreadful waste of money.

"Dear me," he said regretfully, "and I might have pulled off the stakes! That would have been ten or twelve pounds, at least. A good deal can be done with ten or twelve pounds my dear. It's a great pity."

"So it is," said Elaine, suppressing a smile. "But you weren't sure of winning it, you know."

"No, no, that's true," assented the major reluctantly. "But I might, I might, my dear. Well——" he paused and looked round the room and out at the window again helplessly. "If you haven't got it I can't have it, can I?"

"I'm afraid not," she said. Never mind, dear, try and think you would be sure to have lost it, and that will console you."

The major accepted the suggestion rather doubtfully.

"Yes, oh, yes," he said. Then, after a pause, "I—I think I'll just run down to the club again Elaine. You don't care to walk down as far with me, do you?"

"I do care very much dear," she replied. "But I've got the pudding to make, and my dress to alter, and your coat to mend, and—oh, half a hundred things to do!"

"Always busy, always busy, Elaine!" said the major, with that cheerfulness which characterizes idle people when they are commending the industry of others. "Just like your mother my dear. Ah, dear me!" and he sighed— comfortably —and shook his head. "And you get more like her in face and figure, too," he added. "She was a very beautiful woman, Elaine."

Elaine's face had grown graver and their close she bent forward and put her white arm—not her floury hand, however—round his neck and kissed him.

The major patted her cheek lovingly, then in a lighter tone said:

"By the way, has young Sherwin called this afternoon?"

A blush so faint as scarcely to be called a blush rose to Elaine's face.

"Captain Sherwin has not been today, papa; no," she said, not exactly with coldness, but with reserve.

"That's strange," said the major. "He offered to play me two hundred up—billiards, you know, my dear—this afternoon, and I thought he'd call on his way to the club. By gad, perhaps he's waiting for me there." And he took up his hat—the major would under no circumstances have been guilty of keeping it on in his daughter's presence—and settled it jauntily on his grimyish white hair. "Capital fellow, Charlie——"

"Meaning Captain Sherwin, papa?" said Elaine, balancing a spoon on her taper finger.

"Eh? Of course. Didn't you know his name was Charles?" replied the major.

"I know nothing about him," said Elaine, "excepting that you have brought him home to dinner once or twice."

"Oh, I though you and he were rather good friends," said the major carelessly "He's a capital young fellow. Good looking—don't you think so?"

Elaine raised her eyes from the spoon, and fixed them vacantly on the view that was framed by the window; a view worthy of the pencil of Turner—a lovely little valley wih a tree-clad hill behind, a tiny river running in between and winding round a rambling old mansion whose time-worn stone gleamed in the sunlight where it was not hidden by the ivy and the trees.

She was silent a moment, then she said slowly.

"Yes—I suppose he is good looking papa. I had never thought of it before."

The major laughed slightly.

"I thought it was the first thing you women noticed, my dear," he remarked.

"Some women, perhaps," assented Elaine dreamily.

"Well, Sherwin is good looking anyway," resumed the major, smoothing on his gloves—he always wore gloves, although he might be only going down the town and back. "And, by George, he is confoundedly well off; at least, he has expectations. Uncle a rich cotton spinner, or ironmaster, or something of that kind, I believe. Wish my uncle had been in trade and I'd been his heir." aded the major pathetically.

Elaine smiled. She was fully aware of her father's pride in their ancestry.

"You'd have filled your proper position then, my dear, and moved in your proper circle, instead of—of—living in a miserable village, in a miserable twopenny-halfpenny town among a lot of second-rate provincials."

Elaine smiled consolingly.

"Never mind dear. They are very nice people, and we are very happy, aren't we? If there were no bakers' and butchers' bills we should be quite happy, shouldn't we?" and she sighed.

"Ah, those butchers and bakers!" said the major. "I declare whenever I see one of their wretched red-covered books my heart sinks into my boots and—Why, confound it, that wild devil is down here again!" he broke off leaning across the table, and staring out of the window.

Elaine looked in the same direction There was no human being in sight, and the only alteration that had taken place in the view was a slight one that might well have escaped notice. It was this: While the major had been inveighing against tradesmen's books a red flag had glided up the flag-post rising from the tallest turret of the house in the hollow and was now flying lazily in the soft breeze.

"I—I beg your pardon my dear," he said, apologizing for the strength of his language. "That flag wasn't hoisted when I came in, was it?"

"No," said Elaine. "It has only just this moment gone up."

The major looked at it with undisguised interest.

"Oh, yes, he's back. There are only two families rightly privileged to fly a flag when they are in residence; and the Nairnes are one. The right was granted by Henry VIII.—the old scamp!—and this wild dev—and Nairne always does it. I wonder how long he is gong to stay. A couple of hours, perhaps, certainly not more than a day or two."

They stood looking at the house in silence for quite a minute, then Elaine said:

"Have you ever seen the marquis, papa?"

The major shook his head.

"No, never; and am never likely to, I should say!"

"He never comes into the town?"

The major shook his head again.

"I don't think so; at any rate, no one has ever seen him. They say that he doesn't leave the Castle grounds when he is down here, or if he does that it is only after dark. The rector told me he once met him tramping along Warden's Lane at two o'clock in the morning——"

"What was the rector doing out at that ghostly hour?" asked Elaine with a smile.

"Been to see a sick parishioner, I suppose; and that's the only time he has been seen in the place. I beleve though they tell all sorts of wild stories about his driving tandem through the streets after dark."

"He must be a strange man," said Elaine thoughtfully. "Is he—mad, papa?"

NATURE LORE

THE CANADIAN WAXWING

The Bohemian Waxwing, the cousin of the Cedar Waxwing, is truly an all Canadian Bird and should be called the Canadian Waxwing.

The thought that I would be given such a nice treat at the sight of a Bohemian Waxwing at close quarters had never entered my mind.

It was one terrible blustery day. It had snowed for two days, almost without letup. The streets of Westmount, Quebec, were piled high with drifts and the wind whistled through the streets and made life a great burden for old folks.

The lunch table we had put in our garden was covered with snow almost every hour, though we tried to keep it clear. Some birds came to dine but not many.

"Daddy," said Joe. "aren't the birds hungry?"

"Yes, indeed they are, Joe," said I.

"Well, why don't they come and get something to eat?" asked our little bird man.

"They are afraid to come down off the mountain, for it is too dangerous in this cold storm," said I.

Joe wanted to know more so I told him. And the truth is, that the birds may get something to eat in a storm but they do not get much and if the storm is long and cold they very often die of hunger or perish trying to get food. That is why it is such a nice thing to have places among the trees where the lunch table is sheltered from the storm. The birds can enjoy life, if they have a nice dinner handy in a safely sheltered place, even in a very very bad storm. It is well to have the lunch table in a sheltered place but with clear space and clear vision all around, so no cats can approach unseen. It is a bad thing to coax the birds to a place where cats can get a chance to murder them.

Well, that was the situation. We had a lunch table but it was too exposed to the storm and we went to bed very sorry for the birds up on the mountain.

Next morning was Sunday and it was still cold and blowing, but the sun was trying hard to appear.

Joe was up early and at the window looking out to see if any birds had come to the table and he came running into our room. "Oh, Daddy, get up and see this bird." I got up and looked. There was a poor little chicadee hopping about on the snow covered table and not getting a single thing. He looked cheeky but he looked sad too and Joe said maybe an owl sent him to see if we were on the job, for owls are wise and hungry birds don't want to all come if nothing is on the table.

While I was wondering all about the birds and the storm, it must have been a bird fairy voice, for I am sure I heard something say, "The birds trust you and now they need you, why don't you go?"

Then another voice said, "I will show you pretty things, if you only will help the birds."

So Joe and I got a very early breakfast and we also got a big paper bag full of broken bread and lots of seeds of all kinds and some suet and out we went, to make dinner tables for the birds on the mountain, among the trees.

Once on the mountain, among the trees, we had no trouble finding birds They were all staying close to home and were hungry. We put some sunflower seeds in the rough bark and suet also and the bird that found it, a noisy nuthatch made so much noise that he brought all of Birdland, it seemed to us. We made three places for food and were coming down the road. I was quite sure that the bird fairy had played a trick on me, for I did not see any pretty sights, but Joe said something about a flock of birds eating red berries and sure enough, there they were, a big flock of Waxwings.

Of course I thought they were only Cedar Waxwings at first, but when I saw their lovely yellow and white markings, I knew I was looking at a wonderful sight from fairyland to be sure.

It was not far down the mountain to home and I knew those berries would keep the birds around for a while, so I ran home and yelled in the front door to my wife, "Be-hee-meeann Waxwings" and when I got an answer tore up the hill again. Mrs Robb was not far behind me and we stayed with that flock all morning, just as close as it is possible to get without stepping on them, for they were too hungry to care much for us. The fairy certainly kept her word and she will do so with you, too, if you do kind acts. We have never seen any Canadian Waxwings since and we will always be glad we fed the birds after the storm. Joseph has seen the Bohemian Waxwing, think of it.

Answers to Correspondents

Student—I recognised your writing as having written under the name of "Curious" before. Am I correct? The poem is by Rudyard Kipling and has been set to music. It is as follows:—

MOTHER O' MINE

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were damned of body and soul,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine.
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

—Rudyard Kipling.

E. G. H.—I cannot recommend any toilet ware in this page, but I can give you a splendid recipe for a cream for the hands to make at home. Fry out a piece of mutton fat; strain and cool. When hard, measure four heaping tablespoonfuls, put in a small pan and warm. When quite liquid, add 1 tbspn of glycerine, juice of one lemon, 1-2 tspn borax and 6 drops tincture bensoin. Beat constantly until cool and creamy. Pour into a jar and apply nightly to the hands, wearing a pair of large gloves to protect the bed covering. This will keep your hands smooth and white during the "chapping" days.

FALSE GAIETY

"There is nothing wrong fundamentally with young people to-day," writes Lady Angela Forbes in the "Royal Magazine;" "their exuberance of spirits may lead them to do foolish things, but they are no worse than young people of any preceding generation. They ride, they shoot, they play golf as well as the youth of an earlier day. They can be very serious and they can also be domestic; that Victorian virtue mourned as dead, is quite as much alive to-day as ever it was.

"They are certainly more capable than their predecessors. There is probably too much cocktail drinking, too much dancing, and too much night life. Entertaining in restaurants and night clubs instead of at home has deprived all hospitality of any individuality, and what is lacking in quality must be made up in quantity. The real trouble with young people today is their apparent inability to get to bed at a reasonable hour. They must keep going till daylight breaks, and beauty sleep is unheard of.

"There is nothing to indicate that constitutions are stronger, than they were, and it is on hygienic principles as well as on moral grounds that one deplores the incessant round of restless activity which constitutes social life to-day. How will the present generation look and feel after all this night life when middle age descends upon it? We know that the young are scornful of the middle-aged, but it is the scorn of ignorance, for young hearts can beat even in middle-aged bodies, and the tragedy of life is when health and heart do not keep pace.

"The war-time spirit of 'Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die,' is still in the air, and there is a false air about much of contemporary gaiety, but against all this we find quite as good wives and mothers as devoted as those in the last generation."

A Happy Childhood Is A Matter Of Health

Little children quickly get out of sorts but by prompt treatment they can just as quickly be set right again. Most of their troubles arise in the first place from the stomach and bowels; that is why a good clearing out is the first thing the doctor prescribes. Mothers, why not let Baby's Own Tablets keep your children well. Unlike that ill-smelling, rank tasting castor oil so dreaded by most children, the Tablets are pleasant to take and their action, though thorough, is gentle and causes no discomfort to either the baby or the growing child. Baby's Own Tablets are a never failing remedy for relieving constipation and indigestion; thus they break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms and make the teething period painless. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

This Lassie Has Her Colds "Rubbed Away"

The mother of this attractive little girl, Mrs. E. E. Emmans, of 215 Seventh Ave., N. E., Portage La Prairie, Man., is one of the many Canadian mothers who are enthusiastic about the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, for treating children's colds. Mrs. Emmans writes: "My little girl had croup at night pretty badly and Vicks did her a lot of good. I have also used it with very satisfactory results for head and chest colds."

Vicks is just "rubbed on" for sore throat, tonsilitis, bronchitis, croup or deep chest colds. When so applied, Vicks has a double direct action: internally medicated vapors are inhaled while, at the same time, externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin.

The Perfect Theatre

I think the following from "Judge" will appeal to many devotees of the theatres:

"My first move," said Blotter, "will be to do something about chronic coughers. I expect to install throat clinics in the lobby of each theatre, and force everyone to undergo a thorough examination by a competent doctor before he is led to his seat. As for the theatre gossips who whisper to each other during the play, I shall require each member of the audience to render a sworn statement signed by a notary public that he has said everything he wants to say to his neighbour until eleven o'clock that night."

In the same efficient manner Dr. Blotter has met the problem of people who bring candy to the theatre that is enclosed in a tissue paper that crackles when it is opened. Tackling the problem at its source, he went to the candy companies and stuffed all the chocolates wrapped in crinkly paper with a quaint East Indian poison. In this way Blotter hopes to be rid of the nuisance by Christmas.

"For the benefit of the people who giggle out loud whenever anyone swears on the stage," he concluded, "I have installed under each seat a small trapdoor letting down onto a number of long iron spikes. These trapdoors are operated by a small lever in the hands of an attendant overlooking the theatre. At the first sign of a giggle—" Blotter smacked his lips—"he will release the trap!"

"And after you have secured the perfect audience?" I asked.

"Then I'll start to look for a play worth their seeing," he replied.

Some of the above might be equally effective in our moving picture theatres.

Professor Blotter might then turn his attention to offenders who read the captions aloud and to those youngsters at matinees who stand up behind and chew gum in your ear.

DIET FOR CHILDREN

Value of Fruits and Vegetables

No diet is well planned that eliminates fruits and vegetables, and they are especially necessary for children. Fresh vegetables contain vitamines, which are the means whereby the body cells obtain proper nutrition from the other classes of food. Of particular value in this regard are spinach, turnip tops, dandelions, and other forms of 'greens.'

Oftentimes hunger is due to lack of vegetables in the diet. Children may crave more food when apparently they have eaten abundantly, because their bodily needs are actually not satisfied, and the giving of vegetables frequently alleviates this craving. The system was crying out for elements which it needed, and which the vegetables supply.

The great danger in giving vegetables to children is due to the fact that they are often imperfectly prepared. They should be cooked until they are tender. The green vegetables require very little water. When served to children under seven they should be mashed or rubbed through a coarse sieve. The best methods of cooking vegetables are baking, boiling, and stewing. They should never be given fried or raw until the child is ten years old.

The same discretion in preparing vegetables for the child's menus is necessary in the matter of fruits. This vitally necessary class of foodstuffs is also not without its dangers. This is especially true of raw fruit. Washing does not destroy the germs; they can only be got rid of by boiling; moreover, fruit is less digestible raw than cooked. Cooking breaks up the minute cells, and permits the easy access of the digestive juices.

Raw fruit when given to children should be perfectly fresh. In stale fruit chemical changes occur which cause intestinal troubles, such as diarrhoea and vomiting, and so forth. Children should never eat unripe fruit. More extensive use should be made of stewed dried fruits. They contain the food elements of fresh fruit.

The one fruit juice that babies under one year of age can take raw without danger and with benefit is orange juice A tablespoonful of orange juice should be given daily to every artifically fed baby after the fourth month. This can be increased after ten months so that a child of three can take the juice of a whole orange. A young child should not eat the pulp of the orange, and this is avoided by straining the juice. Closely allied to orange juice is grape fruit juice. This can be given to children over two.

Raw apples should not be given to children under four, and then they should be peeled with a clean knife. Baked or stewed apples, however, are excellent for children over two years of age, and even a little younger. All stewed fruits can be given after the second year if seeds and skins are removed by straining.

Raw bananas should not be given to a child under ten. Bananas are not thoroughly ripe until they have brown spots on the skin. If served before this stage they should be baked or boiled. They are of great food value, but not easily digested. Grapes and melons should not be given to children under seven. Even older children should remove the seeds of grapes before swallowing. Berries, cherries, pineapple, and plums are not permitted before the age of seven, but between the ages of five and seven peaches, pears, oranges, apples, and rhubarb may be taken. All stewed or baked fruits, however, may be given at four years of age.

POEMS Old And NEW

MY WAY

By Clarible Weeks Avery

I do my work; I wash and mend the stockings;
I scrub the stove and floors;
I bake the bread. I've learned to love my kitchen
As well as out-of-doors.
But if I wear an orchid-colored apron,
And set a nodding rose upon my shelf
Between the lamp and two-legged clock it matters
To no one but myself.

JACK-FROST

By Alix Thorn

I went to bed one winter night
And not a person was in sight
Outside my window sill.
I'm very sure I gave a peep
Before I went so fast to sleep,
And all the world was still.

I never heard him silent come,
All quiet was my little room,
Maybe the moon might know.
How fast he worked, my funny guest,
And carefully, to do his best,
But no one saw him go.

Yet there upon the glass he drew
Such pictures as I never knew,
Great towers and splendid trees.
And gallant knights and ladies fair,
Broad roads a-winding here and there
Like fairy tales were these.

How did he find a little boy,
And try to give him so much joy?
I think he's really fine.
He'll come again, our house he knows
He's just an elf, I do suppose,
Yet he's a friend of mine.

LONDON

Romance has set her castle here, where beats
The heart of England; hither no winds blow
But sing of youth; long since the Bells of Bow
Called Whittington; here Milton, Lamb and Keats
Once bowed the knee to her; and he that meets
In some pale dawn that gallant band shall know
Her secret, and why Shakespeare long ago
Still when the moth of twilight flutters down
Poets and kings and sages long since dust
Leave Paradise to gather at her gate;
These gave their lives as jewels for her crown,
Left us this London as a holy trust,
Bidding us keep their faith inviolate.

"Worth $100 to Me Relieved Eczema and Piles"

Mrs. Peter A. Palmer, Saltburn, Sask., writes:

"Dr. Chase's Ointment has completely relieved me of eczema and piles. I also used this Ointment for my baby, who broke out in eczema. A few applications were all that was necessary in her case. Dr. Chase's Ointment has been worth a hundred dollars to me,—before using it I had spent a great deal more than that in unsuccessful treatment from doctors. We have also used Dr. Chase's other medicines, the Nerve Food having restored my health after suffering from severe nerve trouble when a girl."

Set Fair Dates

At the meeting of the directors of the Kingston Fair Association held yesterday afternoon the dates of the 1925 Exhibition were definitely fixed for Sept. 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19. The opening day being the third Tuesday in September, and the Fair running in full swing until the following Saturday night.

Thickest of Season

The thickest snowstorm of this season struck Kingston yesterday and continued for some time, covering the ground to the depth of several inches with a fleecy down mantle of whiteness. Falls of more or less intensity continued during the afternoon and added to the fleecy covering, but not enough had fallen at press time to make any kind of sleighing.

Formerly of Napanee

The death occurred at Dresden, on Tuesday of a well-known and esteemed resident, Mrs. Ann Jane Carscallen, relict of the late Isaac N. Carscallen, after a serious illness of a week's duration. Deceased was born at Napanee in 1839, and was before her marriage Miss Ann Jane Wilde. She had resided in Dresden for over half a century. Her husband predeceased her twelve years ago. She is survived by four sons, Andrew B., police magistrate at Wallaceburg; H. M. of Toronto; Stanley N., of Calgary; Rev. Charles R., of Cheng Tu, China. A daughter Mrs. (Dr.) Thornton predeceased several years ago.

Good Hopes of Recovery

James Moulton, the C.P.R. shopman of Carleton Place, seriously injured by having his body crushed in the side by a snowplow, is progressing favorably in the Smith's Falls Public Hospital. At first no hopes were entertained for his recovery, the injured man not regaining consciousness for days after the accident. During the week-end, Mr. Moulton rallied so much that hope is now held out for his recovery. Outside of several bones being broken, it is believed that internal injuries will prove minor. Mr. Moulton is fortyeight years of age and has a family of seven children. He has been an employee of the C.P.R. for twenty years.

News of Deseronto

Deseronto, Feb. 14.—The icy condition of all roads is proving a boom to the blacksmiths, all farmers hastening to town for a sharp shoeing. The merchants in general also are receiving good business from the visitations.

Mr. R. Goodrich of Kingston was a social caller to Deseronto on Thursday and for attendance at the "Fun Review of 1925."

Several carloads of canned goods have been shipped from the storeroom of the E. C. Metcalfe Canning Co. The popularity of the company's pack is evidenced by the patronage of the best trade throughout Canada, and large shipments have been made to the United States. Last season's pack was the largest in the history of the Company and is all sold, awaiting order for delivery. Acreage has been largely increased for the coming season which indicates a largely increased pack. The activities of the company mean much to the manufacturing and commercial life of Deseronto.

Mr. W. Gould of the Bay territory was a business caller to Deseronto on Thursday. Mr. Gould reports preparations underway for the placing of the Government pound nets in the Bay for the pickerel spawning season.

A number from Deseronto visited Belleville on Thursday evening for attendance at Griffin's Theatre for the appearance of Blackstone the Magician.

From "Fifty Doctors Against Alcohol

"Alcohol brings many patients to the doctors, but it is really the doctor's greatest enemy in performing cures. It is the doctor's duty and desire to get his patients well and to keep them well; alcohol helps thwart him in all his efforts to this end. It renders his patient more susceptible to the attacks of disease, and when they are ill, it is much more difficult to cure them. From the health point of view, it is good economy to be a total abstainer."

RHEUMATISM AND LUMBAGO

ARE BANISHED BY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality—and more.

Some diseases give immunity from another attack, but rheumatism and lumbago (which is really muscular rheumatism) work just the other way. Every attack invites another.

There is scarcely any disease which physicians find more difficult to treat successfully than rheumatism. Long study, however, has shown that the seat of the disease is in the blood. By maintaining the quality of the blood, you are doing the best possible thing to prevent and combat rheumatism.

That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has proved successful in thousands of cases of rheumatism and lumbago. These pills enrich the blood and enable it to throw off the poisons of the diseases. And so long as the blood is kept pure and rich, there need be no fear of a return of the trouble.

Mrs. Annie Wright, Woolchester, Alta., says:—"I was a sufferer from rheumatism for six years and most of that time my life was one of misery. I tried several doctors but never got more than temporary relief. The trouble seemed to affect my whole system. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and through these I found complete relief. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this trouble."

OLD LONDON HOLDS RECORD FOR PARKS

London, Feb. 14.—London now claims to have more parks, public gardens and open spaces than any other city in the world. One visitor recently who had thought of the English capital as a dingy town of smoke, back yards and streets, found he could travel three miles through four of the royal parks, only crossing a street twice. Within seven miles of the heart of London begins the wild tradition-haunted forests of Epping, where kings and queens for a thousand years have roamed and hunted and where today it is possible to wander for a week amid majestic ancient oaks and beeches.

Worn Out

[illegible] to show that his understanding of life is risky.

Now that the school children have been sent home to worry their pas and mas instead of their teachers, and the gulls are full of peanuts and the pelican full of fish I will wander back into the desert and proceed to prove to you that I am not full of [illegible] at least, not on the desert, for that is the sweet lovely if mean territory.

From here to Beersheba, across the desert on an auto trip, is a trail of dead rabbits, worn out tires, worn out [illegible] and nails.

The spirit of the scenes is getting into my blood. It is the same devilish spirit that got into everything we did on the trip. I see red once again. It is the sunset red of The Home Town. Why some silly empty heads will rise with the dawn and stand on the brink of the Grand Canyon of Arizona and gasp and gabble about it and the sunrise, the noble shafts of which lend that dump of dirt a light is more than I can see. It is their open confession that they lie abed at home and come out on the desert and shiver on the brink of a fearsome hole and discover what white rat lives they live at home and what an easy matter it is to feed the pelican this mess of magnificent words, joined into awe inspiring phrases for us humble stay at homers to swallow, so that we are discontented. The Grand Canyon is the mud manicured [illegible]. I have seen the sun rise and [illegible] in Canada there many times and I [illegible] more interested in the self deceiver who stood on the edge of nature's infinity of nothingness and praised only their own exposure than I was in the sun kissed mud hole before me.

Nothing from nothing leaves this nothingness subtracted from the desert. It is a work of the devil, to laugh back at man and make him feel a fool. Or is it a work of God to make man turn his thoughts inward to the light of his own soul which he has kept a mere smudge at home? After I got rid of the muckers in mud who come to damn with empty praise and then run home to a can [illegible] breakfast too soon, I sat me down on the Grand Canyon of Arizona to see what it is all about.

Here is a valley in the face of the desert, which looked to me like the exact negative of mountains. Instead of a photograph of mountains, we have the negative. It is as though the die from which great chains of mountains had been cast, had been forgotten and left by the Maker one of His tools ungathered. He, the Great Painter of Hills, has dropped His Rocky Mountain brush.

One does not stand on the brink and jingle words of wonder and think at the same time. One must first be dumb with awe, then silent of choice, then thoughtful.

Surely, it is more than a poetic fancy, when I stand before this work, and instead of asking myself to look at it and see how small I am, I ponder on the faith the Maker of such a sublime subtraction must have in Man, that He makes us living Gods on the face of this dead magnificence, this awful searching creation. And then I turn and see some of the Man Gods who so lately praised, filling their wordy mouths with beans. ::: ??? Let us go back to the desert.

Out on the desert! Now, Mrs. Robb says the way this is being written clearly shows that she should have pushed me into the Grand Canyon and settled the matter much as the Pelican did.

"Go back and tell about our trip", says Mrs. Robb. Well, for the love of Mike?, isn't the Grand Canyon and all that, what made up the trip?

"Yes," says my director, "but not that stuff about gossip and pelicans, Belleville gets enough of that, they are interested in the trip."

Very well! Here comes the trip.

Weeks too late, too overloaded for safety but not half well enough equipped and with everything we had no use for and a great unreasonable faith, we pulled ourselves out of comfort into 'the gaping unknowable until you run up against it.'

Fancy crossing a continent without rhyme or reason, with three weeks wasted in Chicago trying on hats or some such foolery and nothing to go by and everyone going by that, and no time to lose and everyone losing it and finally getting to California with a record of only one half hour of rain on the whole trip. Here come my wife! I will have to get back to the beginning.

We were visited by a skunk in Le Roy, N.Y., just the second night out. What a lovely playful kitten he is among the eggs. Mrs. Robb absolutely refused to chase him out, so I had to let them have their way and that little vaudeville midnight act cost half a dozen eggs but we got off cheaply.

Great pains in preparation of sleeping quarters in our hybrid auto (but man! it proved a thoroughbred in disguise) made painless sleeping. That great secret of a trip is the whole trip.. One can stand slander and insult and anything short of flies, if sweet sleep is certain at night. All the way, folk inspected our layout and it came in for much praise, I take all the credit myself, except when my wife is present.

At Chicago, we got tin bread boxes to carry grub and piled on more load and set our jaws and took a run at the hurdles. Life is only what one makes it. We had a fine time. To bed at five minutes after six and up at five or five-thirty. I was the cookee. I could lick all comers and victory put me near the food pot. Our kitchen worked like magic but the good soul who shined the pots before I got them, set me a rotten holiday example, for they shone like silver and I had to spend most of my time trying to keep them that way. Rise at five. Light oil stove. Lose bravery and jump back into bed again. Get up later and put on porridge and complain that the others should have been up long ago. Bacon and eggs need no yeast to make the camper rise. I saw many dawns and sunrisings that make me glad of the trip. Gas stoves make camping easy and hot water is always within reach, so we really camped and lived much as one does at home and saw very few cans of food indeed. We were nearly to Los Angeles before I discovered we had not had a can of beans on the trip, so we tried them and they went fast.

Most of the towns have campsites and running water and it is no hardship to travel this way, if the preparations have been carried on with thoughtfulness. It is true, the desert is long and, coming after a very long prairie country, does not particularly fill one with bubbling joy, but it is a trip made with no dangers, no worries, no discomforts and much worth while pleasure.

We met folks on the way at different places, folks, we met back on the trip somewhere. We made acquaintances and learned, how punk was the place they were fleeing from but no such thought was so in our case. We just listened.

A big tent made to go on the side of our car, served as a mess tent. Sleeping in the auto, I had not far to go to cause heat and get the breakfast started. About every fourth day, we took a day off, just to count noses and have time to read a little and have a bath, a matter so simple that it would make you laugh if you could have seen it but it was a matter of an all closed in tent, in the warm sunshine of mid day and I truthfully may say that it is very pleasant but what it would be like on a dull cold day, I never want to find out.

The scenery was fine and we had little to worry us in the mountain passes. But who is he so bold as to try to describe what we have seen. If the Grand Canyon is mud, it may be grand mud. It will take whatever measure is brought to it, depending upon the looker and how many times he has seen God in His own home town and country.

We got into a desert sandstorm and ate sand in our butter and while the rest of the party grumbled, seeing and feeling nothing but grit, my wife and I held our peace, content to view Nature's bombardment of the hills, literally a sand blasting process, one of the chief forces of erosion, in another attack upon the fortress that defends the little warm strip of coast line in California, from the cold eastern winds.

SUGGESTS REDUCTION OF MEMBER'S PAY

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—Herbert Marler, Liberal member for St. Lawrence-St. George, Montreal, suggested in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the House should give the lead in reducing expenditures by consenting to a reduction in sessional indemnities.

"To what extent would you suggest our indemnities be reduced?" questioned Miss Agnes McPhail.

Mr. Marler: "I would reduce them to the pre-war basis."

Mr. Marler explained that more than $1,00,00 would be saved if the indemnities of the Senate and the House were reduced to the prewar figure.

Letters To The Editor

ASSESSMENT OF CONGREGATIONS

To the Editor:
Sir:

Much is being made by anti-Unionists of the clause in the Basis of Union referring to the Benevolent Funds,—"the collecting of contributions, which shall be obligatory on all local churches based upon the equitable allocation or assessment under the rules to be formulated by the General Council, etc., etc." Surely the anti-Unionists have forgotten the report presented concerning the Benevolent Funds of the General Assembly of 1923, (see Appendix, page 243) in which the following was proposed as one of the sources of revenue:

"An assessment to be made upon every congregation to be based upon the stipend paid by the congregation such assessment together with the stipend, to be a first charge upon the revenue of the congregation."

It is very interesting to note that the names attached to the report containing this recommendation are those of Thomas McMillan Secretary, and Rev. D. T. L. McKerroll, Chairman, both of whom are leading anti-Unionists, and members of the Presbyterian Church Association. The motion by which the Assembly adopted the report was made by Rev. Dr. D. R. Drummond of Hamilton and seconded by Rev. A. I. Burch, who are also outstanding opponents of Church Union.

DO NOT INTEND TO BUY KAISER A HORSE

Berlin, Feb. 13.—"Tell North America we have not the slightest intention of buying a white charger for Kaiser Wilhelm II. and letting him ride through the Brandenburg gates in the near future," declared Baron Von Lindeiner, head of the Prussian Monarchist organizations, in an exclusive interview yesterday.

He was replying to reports of renewed royalist activity for the restoration of the imperial dynasty.. He explained neither the former Crown Prince nor his wife is seeking to resurrect a monarchical regime. As head of the Hermannbund, an allegedly reactionary society to which the Crown Princess gave her patronage, the Baron said her interest lay entirely in its humanitarian philanthropic work.

GUNMEN HALT TRUCK; DRIVE LOAD AWAY

Detroit, Feb. 13.—After kidnaping the driver and two messengers, four gunmen Thursday drove off with an American Express Company's motor truck carrying merchandise worth between $10,000 and $15,000. The exact amount of merchandise which was consigned will not be known until a check has been made of the load. When the stolen truck was found by the police, employes of the company ascertained that 123 packages that left the express office were missing.

The truck was on its way to Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railway Junction, outside the city when four thugs in an automobile commanded the driver to halt at Baker and Seventeenth streets.

BRITAIN HALTS SHIP BUILDING; WATCH STATES

Government Hopes Republic Will Call Disarmament Conference

OPPOSITE VIEWS

Churchill Banks on Results Of Parley to Support Him

(Canadain Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 14.—Hope by the British Government that the new disarmament conference will be called before long, and preferably by the United States, is believed to be causing the cabinet to delay its decision regarding a fresh war ship construction. The position outlined in previous despatches with the Treasury resisting an increase of nearly ten million pounds in naval estimates, said to have been demanded by the admiralty, has not yet been cleared, although it has been discussed at length by the cabinet.

Political gossips from time to time have given currency to stories that a compromise had been reached regarding the estimates, but these stories have not been borne out, and it now is stated that the cabinet committee is to examine the whole question of imperial defense before final decision is taken.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of exchequer, who is credited with opposing the admiralty's demand for an increased building program, is said to be banking on the prospect of another disarmament conference to strengthen his viewpoint which it is stated, has the support of several of his colleagues The question of American participation in the conference is regarded as of paramount importance, such participation being generally considered indispensible. Political writers today strongly emphasize this point and refer to recent statements in the American Senate as hopeful auguries.

Sale Of Valentines Record This Year

Merchants Report Unusually Heavy Sale; Increase Over Past

Hands up! those who received a "beautiful" colored photograph on cheap paper this morning—like the "funnies"? Nobody? Well, such secrets must pass into history.

No one evidently wishes to "show" their "likeness" to anyone epecially when the sender has not disclosed his or, her identity, and so there is a "spooky" air of romantic mystery about this annual Valentine Day.

Seriously speaking though, there are some real lovely Valentines. Pretty pictures of no one in particular on "sincere" paper with blood red hearts, jingling verses 'n everything.

That oodles of Valentines—wise and otherwise—have been purchased in Belleville shops for 'home circulation' and mailing, is corroborated by the statements of dealers who all agreed when interrogated by the Intelligencer this morning, that this year's Valentine business was wonderful All dealers, when queried, informed the Intelligencer that business had been fine in Valentines, and better than last year. One Front street dealer told of having been practically sold out as early as Thursday last, and reports the traffic in Valentines this year as eceeding any previous record in his memory of many years spent in the drug and stationery trade.

"We sold a lot of funny ones," he explained, "But the great bulk of Valentines sold, are mostly for children."

DEMONSTRATION WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

The chassis demonstration given in the T. J. Warren show rooms last night, was witnessed by some seventy-five people who are interested in the new models of Chevrolet cars, in which 83 distinct changes have been made, and into which many parts found in the high price cars have been introduced.

The demonstration was a huge success as was the dealers' meeting held Friday, which was attended by dealers from the Belleville-Peterboro district. Dealers who attended were:

W. S. Houston, Peterboro; C. H. Hess, Hastings; C. A. Wiseman, Napanee; M. O. Vanduzen, Picton; E. Bailey, Stirling; E. Maxwell, Bancroft; M. Maloney, Marmora; Chas. Davidson, Campbellford; T. G. Alexander, Arden; W. Graham, Trenton; S. Dudley, Colborne.

Worn Out Tires, Nerves And Nails Describe This Motor Trip On Desert

Canadian Had Most Interesting Journey to California

STOPPED AT CHICAGO

Where Trying on Hats Was Part of the Program

The following is an article written by Wallace Havelock Robb, well known Belleville Old Boy, on his trip by motor to the Sunny South recently:

'Write an account of the trip for The Intelligencer, eh? Very well, we will begin.

Most writers begin their story at the terrible very beginning, thus showing how much they don't know, including the fact that they don't know they don't know, for nothing begins at the beginning.

We began once already to-day and down the street came a whole school with teachers tacked on, looking at birds. Now, when a perfectly orderly writer begins to begin at the beginning and human nature cracks his bean with something more interesting, things get a bit twisted

I was about like this. Scratch head, fiddle with typewriter, wish the Intelligencer had been stolen along with all other forms of reading and writing, clear throat, get a drink of water begin to begin, begin—"We left Cazenovia, N.Y., that lovely, little village of quaint homes, in the year of unworthy galavanting, 1924 and"—??? What! A lot of kids coming?

And down the street of Long Beach, Calibejiggersandfornia, came a whole school, out looking at birds.

So we grabbed our camera and ran out to photograph the children and got home many hours afterward.

Our journey will begin at the tail end. It will be the tail end of a bird, for, if I left a lot of queer birds at home, I have seen the Pelican here.

We will meet the beginning of this story somewhere between Belleville taxes and Bullville Texas, but I cannot go back there till I get rid of this Pelican. He eats fish and insists on hearing me memorizing all the best gossip of The Home Town, which he swallows whole, along with his fish. It is funny how much like folks the birds can be.

This old swallower hangs about the pier at the shore and looks wise and has plenty of people to pay him homage. He took a piece of meat I gave him and spit it out onto the pier, with a look of disgust. "you cheap skate, get me a fish!" said he.

With some smelts in a paper, I again advanced. A man headed me off, picked up the meat and gave it to the pelican again. The old scamp backed over to the edge of the pier, turned his back on us, dumped the piece into the sea and turned again to us, "There," (said his actions and looks) "that settles that, now bring on your fish."

The gulls eat peanuts. Now, that old pelican will never bat an eye all day no matter how many peanut bags are opened and emptied but just et someone start to open an unshapely piece of paper and he is as much alive and as lovely in action as some old women with their hair bobbed.

Yes and he can tell a poor fish when he sees one to and at quite a distance I held up a smelt once when some Marines were telling him about who won the war and, although the smelt was small and far away, he did not

CORBYVILLE CLUB HOLD MASQUERADE

The social club of the Consolidated Distilleries Limited at Corbyville held an enjoyable masquerade dance at the G.W.V.A. auditorium last evening, and the event proved to be one of the most enjoyable functions ever attempted by the aggressive club officials.

The majority of the guests were in costume, a gentleman representing "Father Time" winning first prize; and a "Ballot Dancer" ladies' first. There was also a prize waltz.

A dainty lunch was served during the evening, and music for dancing was supplied by the Club orchestra.

Pope Celebrated Third Anniversary

Men and Women Were Separated; Warm Ovation Given

Rome, Feb. 14—Pope Pius celebrated the third anniversary of his coronation, but it was observed that he appeared sad, though robust. It is said the withdrawal of the French Embassy to the Vatican weighs heavily on his mind.

One innovation was introduced in this morning's function. Men and women were separated, even the members of the 'black' aristocracy which remains faithful to the Papal ideas of temporal power. One of the guards had considerable difficulty explaining to the wife of a foreign diplomat that she could not sit beside her husband.

The aristocracy and diplomatic corps has rows of benches opposite the Papal throne instead of occupying the boxes built for the occasion.

The Pontiff received his warmest ovation from about 1,000 pilgrims from his former diocese of Milman.

Hamilton—War on hand book fraternity has checked operations in Hamilton.

DISTRICT STAFF VISITS FRANKFORD

Last night Bro. J. Duckworth, D.D. G.M. of the I.O.O.F. accompanied by the District Staff officially visited Frankford Lodge No. 382. The Noble Grand, Bro. G. A. Simmons in welcoming the visitors assured them that Frankford Lodge was already to give them a hearty welcome. As another instance of the D.D.G.M.'s popularity he was as usual met with a large attendance of members who were well repaid by listening to an eloquent speech appertaining to the good of the Order and especially Frankford Lodge. Refreshments were served and a social time spent before leaving the hall. The journey to Frankford was safely negotiated by way of Trenton and the D.D. "Henry Ford" reached home safe in the early hours of this morning.

Industrial conditions in Hamilton are improving. The entire staff of the P. B. Yates Machine Co. has returned to work, and the firm has found it necessary to operate on Saturday afternoon.

Miss Kathleen Daisy Doughty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Doughty, died at her home in Chatham. Miss Doughty, who was 21 years of age, had been in poor health for several weeks.

BELIEVE STORY OF MINER THAT COLLINS LIVES

Claims He Heard Prisoner Cough or Groan Through Crevice

NEARING THE CAVERN

Only Few Feet of Earth Separates The Rescue Party

Canadian Press Despatch)

Cave City, Feb. 14.—Only a few feet of earth to-day separated the sand cave rescue party from the cavern they believe will lead to Floyd Collins, imprisoned in a sand hole for two weeks by a boulder on his feet.

The shaft was more than fifty-five down and at sixty feet, a diamond core drill has indicated a cavern approximately nine feet high, although the depth of the shaft is small, due to an accumulation of mud and sand.

Collins is still alive, members of the States military board declared last night. One of the miners on the rescue squad said he heard a cough or groans from him through a crevice located yesterday morning in the shaft wall and two men heard them from the upper side of cave-in down in the sand hole.

Ed. Brenner and Alex Bailey convinced General Denhardt that they had really heard these sound from Collins and the court, colelctively and individually, expressed their convictions that Collins was alive.

The last official word of the situation at the bottom of the shaft said that it was 52 feet deep and three feet more was about to be timbered.

Charles Dolan Is Chamber Director

Takes Place of H. E. Fairfield Who Has Resigned

Mr. H. E. Fairfield has resigned as director of the Chamber of Commerce and Mr. Chas. T. Dolan, the well-known druggist, has been elected in his stead.

Because of pressing business duties Mr. Fairfield very reluctantly has severed his connection with the Board He has been and will remain one of the best friends the Chamber of Commerce has had.

Mr. Dolan, who was the next in order at the election held at the beginning of the year, was, according to the usual practice, appointed to fill out Mr. Fairfield's term of office. He is one of Belleville's younger business men but has already made for himself a foremost place in that group. His great geniality, breadth of mind and spirit of progressiveness have likewise combined to make him one of our most popular citizens. He will make a welcome addition to the Board of Directors.

Rotarians Invaded Town Of Cobourg

Party of Twenty-six From Belleville Report Rare Time

No happier party ever pulled into Belleville than the returning Rotarians who took in the Cobourg Rotary Club Minstrel Show last night. There were twenty-six in the crowd—enough to make their presence felt in the Cobourg theatre with their Rotary choruses.

In the unavoidable absence of President Charlie Reid, Rotarian "Scottie" ably shepherded his crew. Rotarian Dan MacMillan saw to it that the C.N.R. provided perfect accommodation and proved an ideal host during the trip away and back again.

The Rotary Minstrels of the Horse Show Town put on a creditable show, but the real concert of the evening was staged on the train coming back. Charlie Dolan told a lot of good stories as only Charlie can, and a dozen good singers enlivened the journey. No party could be dull which includes Dr. Haffner, Al Stillman, Jimmy Bankier, Fred Burke, Harry Moorman and Harold Saunders.

At Cobourg, Belleville's famous Radio Four, Dr. Haffner, Al Stillman, Harry Moorman and Fred Burke filled in on the program with some splendid singing and were one of the big attractions.

BELLEVILLE ELKS ARE FULL OF PEP

The Belleville Order of Elks held a very successful meeting last night in the Forresters Hall Front street with Mr. A. E. LaRoche, Exalted Ruler, in the chair, and a determined effort will be made by the Belleville Order of Elks to introduce some big special features during the Old Boys Reunion The Elks all over Canada and the United States are credited with introducing some great novelties durign their celebrations, and while the Belleville Elks are a young organization they are confident they will do something that will wake up the town and will put pep in the celberation.

Former Belleville Girl Now Becomes Lady Peel By Reason Of Father's Death

New York, Feb. 14—Beatrice Lillie, Canadian girl, who is now one of the leading commediennes on the stage has become Lady Peel by the death in England yesterday of her father-in-law, Sir Robert Peel, baronet and grandson of the famous prime minister. Miss Lillie's husband, whose name also is Robert, is a revue manager and is now in Australia. Miss Lillie is now appearing in an English revue in Chicago. They have a four-year-old son, Robert, who has been living with his grandparents in London. Miss Lillie won instant popularity as a comeddienne when she appeared here. She was born in Toronto and began her stage career in London.

Belleville Lady Is Post-graduate

Mrs. Darlington of Ritchie's Successful in Toronto Course

Success in a new, but most important line of study has come to a Belleville lady, Mrs. M. Darlington of the Ritchie Company Limited. Mrs. Darlington has just returned from Toronto where she was successful in completing a postgraduate course at the School of Corsetry. She obtained her diploma in the regular way last year.

Belleville ladies will share in Mrs. Darlington's success, as modern medical science has shown that the art of corset fitting is necessary for the promotion of good health and beauty of figure. Doctors are paying more and more attention to this.

Mrs. Darlington says that one of the most essential features of the post graduate course was the stress laid on medical fittings.

Deseronto Man Is Sentenced Friday

Richard MacVicar Sold "Moonshine" and Pays Dearly Now

Richard McVicar, who pleaded guilty in police court at Deseronto Friday afternoon, when charged with selling "moonshine" was fined $500 and costs and was in addition sentenced to serve three months in jail. If the fine is not paid—and there is slight chances of it being paid—he will also serve an additional three months. In addition he was sentenced to another term of three months by reason of the fact that the "moonshine" sold was illegally manufactured without a government license. This is MacVicar's second offence.

Arthur Fraser, also charged with selling "moonshine" was defended by E. J. Butler of Belleville, but the charge against him was withdrawn when MacVicar pleaded guilty.

The arrests followed a raid which was made on MacVicar's Thomas street home in Deseronto by Headquarter's staff officers of the Provincial police here on Thursday night last.

Police Magistrate Henry Bedford of Deseronto presided, and County Attorney B. C. Donnan conducted the prosecution. Sergeant E. A. Rae and Constable Elliot of Provincial Police represented the police headquarters at the trial.

Charge Government Neglecting Work

Continual Tariff Reductions Responsible for Canadian Exodus

Ottawa, Feb. 14.—In a series of sparkling speeches, members of the Conservative party in the House of Commons yesterday flatly charged the Government with neglecting to work for the best interests of Canada, and showed that continual tariff reductions, with threats of more to come, were responsible for the general exodus of Canadians to the United States, the widespread talk of a solution of the national problems in annexation with that country and for the fact that capital, nervous of home conditions, was flowing out of countries where it could be put to work with a greater degree of safety.

Hon. R. J. Manion, of Fort William and Rainy River, T. E. Simpson, of Algoma West, Hugh A. Stewart of Leeds, Frank White of London, General A. E. Ross of Kingston and others united in the drive against the Administration.

The unease on the treasury benches and frequent denials from the Ministers was evidence of the success of their efforts, and of the fact that a suspicion of the truth is beginning to percolate through the Ministerial brains.

The attack followed the reinstatement of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, which came after general explanations from the leaders of the two older parties and after the Progressive chiftain allowed appreciation of princiiple to submerge his original objections.

IS COMMITTED ON A SERIOUS CHARGE

Cobalt, Ont., Feb. 14.—Philip Usoff, who has been wanted by the police for over six months, following an alleged shooting episode in a restaurant at Ansonville last Summer, has been committed for trail on a charge of attempted murder. It is claimed Usoff shot at and missed his wife, from whom he had been separated, and a man in whose company he found her. He disappeared and was not located until recently.

Change In Prices Were Very Slight

Attendance at Market Good For This Time of Year

While the market to-day was by no means a large one it was fairly well attended for this time of the year. There were but few changes to note in prices as compared with a week ago.

Fresh dairy butter was quite plentiful and fairly reasonable in price, namely 38c. and 40c. a pound.

The ruling price for special eggs was 50 cents per dozen, whilst fresh sold at 48c. per dozen.

Dressed chicken commanded a good figure despite the fact that many were offered for sale. They ranged in price from $1.50 to $2.25 a pair, a few were sold at a sligtly lower figure. Ducks sold at $1.30 and $1.40 each and $3.00 each were asked for geese offered for sale.

Cream sold at 25 cents a pint vegetables were plentiful and fairly reasonable in price. Potatoes sold at 80c. and 85c. a bag.

The ruling prices for apples were 50c. and 60c. per peck according to quality.

Meat was cut up in considerable quantities and many purchasers were about the various stalls. Beef ranged in price from 10c. to 18c. a pound and pork from 15c. to 22c., according to cuts.

Beef by the hindquarter sold at 9c. per pound and foreuarters 7c., dressed pork $15.50 hundred weight.

Unemployed Were Well Entertained

True Blues Put on Fine Dinner and Program of Music

Derry Lodge of True Blues entertained at dinner Friday night in the refreshment rooms of the Lodge, a large number of citizens who are unemployed, and their families. A bounteous meal was provided, in the serving of which Mayor Mikel acted as chief waiter, assisted by members of the Lodge. After dinner an enjoyable musical program was rendered by Mr. B. Tapp, Lou Marsh, E. W. Ryckman, Tom Mason, Harry Eaves and Pete Maraskas, of Belleville, and Sam Harris, of Toronto. An unexpected meeting took place between Mr. B. Tapp and Mr. Sam Harris, who saw each other while Mr. Harris was singing for the first time since they served overseas in the same company. It so affected Mr. Harirs that he could not continue his song.

Mayor Mikel acted as chairman, and in a short address said that while the True Blue Lodge was one of the smallest in the city and composed of persons with limited means, they had nevertheless big sympathetic hearts and every man and woman among them was a booster, and the city should be proud of them. The committee that made the dinner and entertainment a success, consisted of W. Ruttan, B. McConnell, W. Gould, and Mrs. Ald. Harrow, and all the members worked well.

CORRESPONDENTS AT BLAME, IS CLAIM

Dublin, Feb. 14.—In the Dail Eireann Friday, Tom Johnston, Opposition leader, raised the question of distress in the west of Ireland, declaring that special correspondents by international propaganda were spreading exaggerated and unjustified reports of conditions. He assured the Government of support in its measures and of a special vote if one were needed.

Patrick Hogan, Minister of Agriculture, said press correspondents had been exploiting this question for their own purposes. There was no abnormal distress this year, he declared. There was always distress in those districts and this year conditions in some areas were worse than last, and in some were better. There was no failure of potatoes, except in limited areas.

GIVES IMPRESSIONS TO Y'S MEN CLUB

There was a good attendance at the weekly luncheon last evening of the Y Men's Club, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. held in the Association building. Mr. S. License, president, presided. Mr. R. Home of Toronto and Mr. D. McFarlane of this city, were guests. Mr. F. E. O'Flynn gave a brief resume of his impression of the world's missionary conference held recently at Washington. On motion of Mr. B. Rofe a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. O'Flynn.

RECEIVE CLUE THIS MORNING ABOUT WIDOW

Mrs. Gilbert Mason of Cannifton Supplies Information Wanted

IS RELATIVE

Late M. W. Caniff Was Cousin of the Informant

On Monday, the Intelligencer received a letter from John C. Vanek, manager of The Assets Realization Company, Suite 820, Black Building, Los Angeles, Cal., asking the newspaper to attempt to locate Mrs. Helen Caniff, widow of the late M. W. Caniff, who lived in Los Angeles between the years 1909-1913.

This morning, Mrs. Gilbert Mason of Cannifton walked into the editorial offices and supplied the clues which it is hoped will result in Mrs. Caniff or her heirs-at-law communicating with the Los Angeles company whose manager has located some property which is in need of attention of the widow or her heirs-at-law.

Mrs. Helen Caniff, the woman sought, is the widow of the late M. Wellington "Well" Caniff formerly of Cannifton, who early in life went to Winnipeg with a brother MacKenzie and when the west was younger and opportunities greater. In the hotel business the brothers made big money but are supposed to have spent their money freely as many people did in the west at that time.

Seventeen years ago he and his wife left Winnipeg after having lived there continuously since leaving their Cannifton home in his early life. Wellington Caniff died in Los Angeles in 1914 Mrs. Mason believes, though she could not find the newspaper clipping of his obituary which she has kept in her home. She was unable therefore to name the date, but was almost sure the year was 1914.

Whether his widow, Mrs. Helen Caniff—known here as Nell Caniff, is now living if she is still alive, Mrs. Mason was unable to say, but she will write to a woman who will know and who, if Mrs. Caniff is dead, will be the next heir. This woman is Mrs. John Boskell, who lives on a farm about twenty-five miles out from Winnipeg at a place called Wavey Bank. Mrs. Boskell is a sister of the late Wellington Caniff. Mrs. Boskell and Mrs. Mason correspond frequently.

"As far as I know, Mrs. Helen Caniff is still alive," exclaimed Mrs. Mason, "but Mrs. Boskell will know all about her."

MacKenzie Caniff, brother of Wellington, died with influenza the first year of the plague, and his wife and ten children live in the United States Mrs. Mason had forgotten the name of the city in which Mrs. MacKenzie Caniff lived, but could find out if she were at her home she said, where she could consult documents which would give her the information.

"Mrs. Helen Caniff may have had one daughter," said Mrs. Mason, when asked, "but I am not sure of that." She also believes that the first initial "M" was incorrect but the initials in the letter received by the Intelligencer were M. W. Caniff.

M. W. Caniff, after whose family name the village of Cannifton derived its name, was a nephew of Sir MacKenzie Bowell, former owner of the Intelligencer, and MacKenzie Caniff his brother, was named after Sir MacKenzie. Mrs. Jonas Caniff, mother of Wellington and MacKenzie Caniff was a sister of Sir MacKenzie Bowell. Mrs. Mason's grandmother Hicks, is a sister of Jonas Caniff, father of Wellington Caniff, so she is related to the Caniffs and knows considerable about their whereabouts.

Mrs. Mason was born near Plainfield, and when the Caniff families came from the west for a visit they always visited her people at Plainfield.

PROSPERITY AND MORALS

In a recent sermon a well-known clergyman is reported to have said: "We are apparently on the eve of unprecedented prosperity and I tremble to think what may be its effects on the morals of the country." This observation may be regarded as needlessly borrowing trouble, yet is worthy of consideration.

This country was never more prosperous than it was during the World War, and immediately after. Everybody made big money and many accumulated vast fortunes. As money came easy it went easy, and while there had been thrift there succeeded wild extravagance. Men and women indulged in pleasures that they never before had been tempted to indulge in. The country ran wild, divorces multiplied at an alarming rate, crime increased by leaps and bounds. The morals of the people were lowered to the point where they winked when formerly they had frowned.

Political, social, and financial conditions called for readjustment. Money accumulated continued to be spent. Even congress and state legislatures could not affect plans for economy and continued to increase taxes. The cost of living still climbed, finally reaching the point where there was general protest. After ineffective protest came more deliberate consideration of expenditure. Society began to reckon more carefully, political parties were forced to demand retrenchment. Yet morals were not revised, and have not been entirely revised to date, although the tendency is more hopeful of normal conditions.

If the people have learned their lesson this tendency will continue; if they have not, it will have reaction under returning prosperity, especially if prosperity be extraordinary. The question is—have they learned their lesson? On the answer depends the conclusion as to whether the clergyman was borrowing trouble or sounding a warning.—Williamsport Grit.

"IN GOD WE TRUST"

There is a phrase used on many of the United States coins which causes frequent comment from reverence to ridicule. Probably few among our neighbors could tell offhand the story of the words "In God We Trust," on their coins. Yet it is a story, as told in a recent number of Collier's of simplicity and patriotism. During the Civil War, it appears, when the clouds were blackest for the Nation, a small-town clergyman named Watkinson wrote to Salmon P. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, a letter which contained the suggestion that the words, "God, Liberty, Law," be placed on the country's coinage, and which read in part:

"You are probably a Christian. What if our Republic were now shattered beyond reconstruction? Would not the antiquarian of succeeding centuries rightly reason from our past that we were a heathen nation?" This letter, we are told, moved Secretary Chase to instant action. He wrote at once to the director of the mint urging him to cause a device to be prepared without unnecessary delay with the motto expressing in the fewest and tersest words possible the national recognition that the trust of the American people is in God. The reason he advanced was that no nation can be strong except in the strength of God, or safe except in His defense. It was Chase himself, however, who finally selected the phrase, "In God We Trust," taking it from a line in the national anthem.

Press Opinions

NOTHING ABOUT PEARLS

(Detroit Free Press)

It's a somewhat weird yarn, that story from Portland, Oregon, about the "pearl necklaces" made of "solidified alcohol" which, as the story goes, are being smuggled in from the orient, and which being unstrung, provide the "makings" for a number of drinks with kicks in them, equal to the number of individual "pearls."

However, the collector of customs at the port seems to take stock in the story and says he is on the lookout for contraband goods. But suppose he finds them what is he going to do with them, beyond holding them as pieces of jewelry upon which the duty has not been paid.

The Eighteenth amendment prohibits the manufacture, sale, transportation, and import and export of intoxicating liquors. But we find nothing in it about the import and sale of pearl necklaces because they happen to be made of a hardened composition of alcohol. However, if the pinch comes, the enforcement agents may be able to get around the point.

"BUYING" WHEAT

(Montreal Gazette)

People who never owned a bushel of wheat and would be embarrassed if a hundred bushels were delivered to them bought tens and hundreds of thousands of bushels on margin by putting up with a broker five to ten cents a bushel to protect him and by waiting and watching the market realised profits that made them greedy for more.

The result is a situation that seems to alarm even those closest to the market. Brokers are asking twenty-five cents a bushel as margin in buying the more speculative grades, a figure that only the stoutest-hearted of the bull speculators can stand. It is safe to say that the advance in prices will soon be checked, and that the general effect will be satisfactory.

THE ROADS OF QUEBEC

(Le Soleil, Quebec)

If foreign motor cars in their thousands enter the province of Quebec each summer, leaving their marks behind them, should we not pay strict attention to our good roads policy? The multitude of visitors who come from afar and traverse our country, pay their expenses as they go from place to place, in towns and villages, and thus distribute on their transit sum large enough to compensate us in full for the capital applied to the construction and maintenance of our highways. No man of intelligence can fail to appreciate these advantages which, in addition to many others, make our road system one of the most valuable elements in our provincial prosperity.

THE NEW MARKERS

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

As the new automobile markers are becoming more numerous, it is evident that those in charge of issuing these very necessary strips of metal had an eye for beauty. The 1925 markers, with figures of a pleasing greenish-yellow color on a back background, are much less offensive to the eye than the yellow and black markers of last year. But this much is certain—the new markers cannot be read with the same ease or at as great a distance as the old markers. The yellow and black may have given areas where motor cars were the thickest the appearance of a smallpox epidemic, but they were serviceable. We have sacrificed just a little of this service for art's sake.

SMALL PROFIT THIS YEAR

(Montreal Herald)

Unusual interest attaches to the annual report of the Massey-Harris Company just issued. In 1921, the company had a deficit of one and a half million dollars. In 1922 there was a deficit of $643,000; in 1923, the deficit was $409,578. In the year just closed the company's earnings showed an improvement of no less than half a million dollars and, instead of a heavy deficit there were profits of $87,711.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

The Unescapable Self

THERE is one person we can never get away from, and that is one's self.

There is a story told of Shelley that he had a dream in which he saw a man who thwarted his every purpose. He caused his business plans to fail, he interfered whenever he was on the point of success in a literary way, he did all he could to annoy and frustrate him. Finally Shelley was about to marry a beautiful girl, and when the minister at the altar asked if anyone could show cause why they two should not be joined together the stranger stepped forward. He had always worn a veil over his face so that Shelley could not see him. Angered by his interference Shelley leaped forward and tore the veil from his face. He discovered that it was himself.

So the man that is always getting in our way and frustrating our endeavors is our self.

Men take drink or drugs in the effort to escape from themselves. For a while they are another creature. But the old self eventually comes back.

A man committed a crime some years ago in New Jersey. On account of it he left his wife and family and finally settled in Detroit. There under an assumed name he married again and achieved success. He was a highly respected citizen until the detectives found him and taxed him with his old criminal record. He escaped self for many years, but it finally found him.

In one of Oscar Wilde's plays the man asks the woman to run away with him. They would go to some distant place. "For," he says in urging her, "the world is wide." "No," she replies, "the world is not wide for me. It has shrunk to a palm's breadth."

There is an oriental proverb to the effect that a man may sail the seven seas, but he will not escape from himself.

It is a common delusion of people to think that they can be happy somewhere else. But happiness does not depend upon the place you are. Even heaven cannot assure us happiness by the simple means of transporting us to another place; our characters must also be transformed.

There is a legend of a monkey in the hand of Buddha. He tried to escape and jumped farther than any monkey had jumped before, but he still found himself in Buddha's hand.

So we may go to the end of the earth, to the bottom of the sea, or to the stars in heaven. We shall not escape our selves.

District Meetings Guarding O.T.A.

Enthusiastic Gatherings are Held at Tweed and at Shannonville

Tweed, Feb. 14.—A meeting in the interest of temperance was held on Tuesday afternoon in the township hall Tweed.

Rev. L. S. Wight was the chairman and gave a report of the recent meeting in Belleville which was called for the purpose of organising the riding to support Premier Ferguson and his government in their efforts to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act.

It was put on record that those present heartily endored the Premier and his government in their efforts to support the Ontario Temperance Act.

It was suggested that the local member Mr. Hill be notified of the action taken at this meeting.

The following delegates were appointed to attend the convention in Toronto on February 17 and 18:

Rev. L. S. Wight, W. S. Gordon, S. B. McGee, S. G. Way, W. E. Rummon, John Sager and W. A. Donnelly, delegates from Tweed village.

Rev. Mr. Poulter, delegate from Thomasburg; J. H. Foster, delegate from Chapman; Mr. Frank Cotton, and Rev. Mr. Waite, delegates from Sulphide; Hector Wood, and Mr. Mitts, delegates from Ivanhoe.

The following men were suggested to form a vigilance committee, and were requested to call a meeting in the interests of law enforcement. They were given power to add to their number. These men were S. G. Way, W. S. Gordon, Mr. Burgoyne, Mr. William Morton, Thomasburg, W. H. Seyers, Fred Blakely, J. H. Foster, Geo. Gordon, and W. H. Montgomery.

Crows were heard in this vicinity for the first time yesterday morning when in a gathering, and it sounded to some as if a good number had already returned from the south.

Shannonville, Feb. 14.—Representatives of the Prohibition Union of the southern part of this riding assembled in convention in the Methodist church this afternoon. Rev. J. O. Totton, pastor of the Convention church was elected chairman, and Rev. R. G. Thompson of Plainfield was appointed to act as secretary. The chairman called upon Rev. J. M. Fraser of Melrose to lead in prayer. After explaining briefly why the convention had been called, Mr. Totton asked Rev. Dr. McTavish of Belleville to explain in more detail the issues that faced us now as advocates of prohibition. Dr. McTavish endeavored to trace the influence behind the recent proposal to double the strength of beer that might be legally sold under the Ontario Temperance Act. He declared that such beer was undoubtedly intoxicating for the average man, and for any man a poisoner of the brain. It was pointed out that different functions of brain and nerve react quite differently to the stimulus of alcohol and the speaker pleaded for an increasing campaign to educate old and young in regard to the pernicious effect of this poison.

Some mention was made of the abuse caused by the free traffic in alleged native wines. There are scientific grounds for believing that genuine native wines could not ferment beyond the strength of 13 per cent, yet samples analyzed have proved just double this strength and paralyzing to the consumer.

Finally Dr. McTavish insisted that prohibition being a nation-wide issue, must be forced into Federal politics. When a majority of prohibition advocates sit in the Ottawa House, no longer will we have the scandal of custom officers freeing a vessel for Cuba and re-loading the same vessel in three days—neither will brewery licenses be issued in communities where the people are opposed to them.

Resolutions were passed affirming the unanimous attitude of the convention on these different points, and forwarded to Premier Ferguson, to Mr. J. F. Hill, M.L.A., and as memorial to the secretary of the provincial convention to be held next week. Reverend J. O. Totton and Mr. G. W. Collins of Plainfield were elected delegates to the latter gathering. Also the following appointments were made to the executive of the local prohibition union—G. W. Collins, Plainfield, convenor; E. W. Brown, Corbyville; George Badgley, Corbyville; Arthur McKinney, Melrose; Rev. W. D. Harrison, Deseronto; and Rev. R. G. Thompson, Sec. Treas., Plainfield.

More than 100 cases of champagne and choice whiskey were seized in the Canadian Pacific Railway yards at Windsor, by Ontario Provincial Police. The goods were packed in three large packing boxes.

LaBarge—Ervine

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnised at St. Edmund's church, Stoco on Tuesday morning, February 10th, when Miss Francis LaBarge, daughter of Mr. Peter LaBarge was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. John Ervine, of Stoco. Rev. Father Cullinane officiated.

Deaths And Funerals

JOSEPH KENNEDY

From the residence of Mr. William Kennedy, 20 Moira street east, the funeral took place yesterday afternoon of his brother, Joseph Kennedy, who passed away in Toronto. Rev. Capt. H. B. Kenny of the Tabernacle church officiated at the house and interment at Belleville cemetery. A number of floral tributes were evidences of sympathy. Bearers were, J. Walsh, S. Cross, C. Reid, W. Latta, B. Robinson and J. Howe.

WALTER CAHILL

A well-known citizen and a former efficient and popular C.N.R. engineer passed away last evening at the family residence, 50 Geddes street. Deceased was born in this city where he had resided all his life. For fifty years Mr. Cahill was a G.T.R. engineer, being superannuated a year ago. During all his career as an engineer Mr. Cahill was never in any serious accident. He was deservedly popular with his fellow employes. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's Church and a member of the K. of C. society. A widow, formerly Miss Catherine Hannahan and five daughters survve. The daughters are Mrs. Jas. E. Larkin, Mrs. Walter Zimmer and Miss Kathryn of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Jos. H. Long of Kitchener, and Miss Mabel of this city.

PRINCE EDWARD DRYS SEND RESOLUTION

A convention of the Prince Edward County Branch of the Ontario Prohibition Union was held in Bloomfield this week. A. A. Morden, the county president, occupied the chair and R. W. Ireland acted as secretary of the convention. There were representatives from every municipality in the county but one. A very enthusiastic gathering discussed the present temperance situation. Several short addresses were delivered. A delgate from every municipality in the riding was appointed to attend the Provincial Conventioin to be held in Toronto in Massey Hall on the 17th and 18th of February. The delegates appointed are as follows:

A. A. Morden, the county.
Picton, H. G. Blakely.
Bloomfield, Rev. G. C. R. McQuade.
Wellington, Rev. W. J. H. Smythe.
Ameliasburg, J. L. Gerow.
Hillier, R. W. Ireland.
Hallowell, Clarence Mallory.
Sophiasburgh, T. F. Spafford.
North Marysburgh, Frank Eaton.
South Marysburgh, Stephen Dulmage.
Athol, James Fennell.
For the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Dora Thompson.

The following resolution was carried by a unanimous standing vote:

"That this conventioin place itself on record.

(1) As appreciating the stand taken by Premier Ferguson, that in the event of the O. T. A. being endorsed by the electorate as expressed in the recent Government of this Province would consider it as any other piece of legislation and seek to strengthen its weaknesses from time to time; (2) That we pledge our loyal support to Premier Ferguson and his Government in the maintenance and enforcement of the O. T. A.; (3) That we pledge ourselves to vigorously oppose any endeavor to thwart the will of the majority of the celectorate as expressed in the recent plebiscite."

English Fireplace Does Big Damage

Tons of Soot Float in Air Over London, England

London, Feb. 14.—Londoners have tackled with renewed energy this winter the problem of reducing their fog bill which often causes a loss to the community of $5,000,000 a day.

Scientists have concluded that while it was impossible altogether to abolish fogs, as provided by nature, it is possible to have comparatively cleaner ones by doing away with the soft coal smoke evil caused by some 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 smoking chimneys.

Officials of the Coal Smoke Abatement Society estimated recently that there were 600,000 inhabited houses in London nearly every room of which including the kitchen, has its open fire place by which the homes are heated. These fires pour their quota of dirt and soot into the air all day long and far into the night. Ordinarily the soot is carried off by the elements, but when a heavy fog sets in the particles remain suspended in the atmosphere, shutting out the sun entirely, and turn daylight into darkness. Clean fogs could not do this.

During a recent fog here, which lasted the better part of three days, as most of them do, scientists estimated that there were from 250 to 300 tons of soot floating about in the air within the London area. Statistics have been compiled showing that London's annual soot fall amount to something like 75,000 tons.

Every individual in the city is affected, more or less, by the heavy fogs and smoke nuisance. Traffic sometimes comes almost to a standstill, and shop dealers often close up their stores because of lack of business. During the fog season this winter alone it has been estimated that the loss to the community has been at least $35,000,000.

By a system of education, promoters of the idea of a cleaner fog hope eventually to do away with the open smokey coal fire place for heating. These would be replaced by gas, electricity, central heating or the use of stoves burning anthracite instead of the bituminous fuel which has caused so much of the trouble.

Dr. John S. Owens, who has taken a leading part in the smoke abatement movement for more than 30 years, says that within 10 or 15 years virtually all the open fire places will have been done away with. Broadly speaking London will then be virtually a smokeless city, and when the fogs do come, they will at least be clean.

MANY PORTUGESE NOT ABLE TO READ

Lisbon, Feb. 14.—So many people in Portugal cannot read, the percentage of illiterates is given as 78, that were it not for Brazil and the colonies, the book industry here could scarcely survive. Also Portuguese authors rarely live on the income derived from literary production; they all do something else.

The government is seeking to overcome the lack of primary education by more schools, but progress is very slow. In the larger towns there is a certain literary culture, but in the provinces the people live much as they did in past ages, isolated from the progressive world.

Books are so expensive that only the relatively wealthy can afford to buy them.

Patrick Scully, son of Mrs. Alfred Scully, of Inkerman street, London, died at his mother's home, in his fifth year, of sleeping sickness. The child contracted the disease quite recently. His father died a few months ago.

NERVES AND FAINTING SPELLS

Sent Woman to Bed. Great Change After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sarnia, Ontario.—"After my girlie was born I was a wreck. My nerves were too terrible for words and I simply could not stand or walk without pains. I suffered with fainting spells until I was no longer any good for my household duties and had to take to my bed. The doctor said I should have an operation, but I was not in a fit condition at that time. My neighbor said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? I am sure it will do you good and will save those doctor's bills.' So I was advised by my husband to try it after I told him about it. I am very thankful to say that I was soon able to take a few boarders for a while as rooms were scarce at that time. My baby is 17 months old now and I have not yet had an operation, thanks to your medicine. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to a few people I know and have told them the good it has done me. I know I feel and look a different woman these last few months and I certainly would not be without a bottle of your medicine in the house. You can use this letter as you see fit, as I should be only too glad for those suffering as I have to know what it has done for me."—Mrs. ROBERT G. MACGREGOR, R. R. No. 2, Sarnia, Ontario.

A recent canvass of women users of the Vegetable Compound report 98 out of 100 received beneficial results. This is a remarkable proof of its merit. C

Feels ten years younger

—and recommends Gin Pills for Kidney Trouble

Do you think there is any chance that you, too, have kidney trouble? Are you bothered by continual headaches, agonising pains in the back, rheumatism, swollen hands and joints?

Read this letter from one who found a happy release from terrible suffering by taking Gin Pills—

> "I suffered terribly with my kidneys. When I would stoop down I would have to get down on my knees before I could get up again. I tried Gin Pills, and got relief after taking a few pills. When I had taken two boxes, I felt myself again, and have not had a pain since. I feel ten years younger. I advise anyone suffering from kidneys to take Gin Pills. I cannot praise them enough."

Captain Blood Is Real Good Picture

Love Interest Well Handled and Scenes are Spectacular

Movies have been described in such glowing terms that there scarcely seems to be words left to describe a really good picture. It is not until the reviewer sees a production like Rafael Sabatini's "Captain Blood," which is the attraction at the Griffin Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday that he wishes he had been more conservative in describing other photoplays.

There is art, acting, action and merit in "Captain Blood." It is different from other films and contains a wealth of those features that have made the photoplay a chief factor in the world's amusement attractions. After witnessing a score of average film productions it is as refreshing as an oasis in the desert to see one of the calibre of "Captain Blood."

From the first when Peter Blood is arrested and sent a slave to be sold at Barbadoes, to the final scene when, as Governor of the island, he wins the hand of Arabella Bishop, there is not a dull moment. The slave market, the insurrection of the slaves, the attack on Georgetown, the capture of the Arabella by Blood and his fellow rebels-convict, the encounter with the French fleet, duels between Blood and a pirate chef, and with a Spanish officer; the burning of a ship and the sinking of the Arabella are a few of the spectacular highlights in the production. These follow each other in rapid succession.

The love interest is well handled, the major thread being carried in commendable manner by J. Warren Kerrigan as Peter Blood and Jean Paige as Arabella Bishop. Kerrigan has a role different than any he had previously essayed in his long and varied career. Those who admire this versatile actor will surely enjoy his work in the production. Jean Paige has lost none of her charm and ability during her brief absence from the screen. If anything she has returned with more grace and charm.

The minor love interest is carried by James Morrison and Charlotte Merriam. Morrison has a difficult role which he handles amiably, and Charlotte Merriam indicates that she will soon be one of the shining lights of filmdom.

Columns might be written commenting upon the work of such favorites as Wilfrid North, Templar Saxe, Allan Forrest, Bertram Grassby, Henry Hebert, Otis Harlan, Otto Matiesen Jack Curtis, Joseph Rickson and a score of others. Each fits into the role with kid glove exactness, leaving nothing to be desired.

The intense dramatic action is relieved by patches of humor in sequence with Otis Harlan, Wilfrid North and Templar Saxe. These touches are capably handled by skilled artists and enhance the entertaining value of the picture a hundredfold.

The photography and art titles are excellent and the entire gem a credit to the masterly direction of David Smith. The massive scenes in which hundreds of players are used, and there are a number, are classics in the way of direction. The sinking of the Arabella is one of the best pieces of screen technic to be shown in a film.

Rafael Sabatini's famous love story has been closely followed with the result that the author's hand is revealed in every sequence. This tends to prove that the closer a company adheres to the original story the better the resultant production. "Captain Blood" may be safely recommended to those who enjoy good photoplays.

The Border Legion Belle Attraction

The "Old West" has come back! Once again in the far North country where Zane Grey wrote the novel "The Border Legion," cowboys in picturesque garb ride through the great stretches where wire fences have not come.

Once again the tinkle of spurs and the creak of saddle leather break the lazy hush of midday.

Once again, in a cloud of dust that darkens the sun, great herds of cattle move through the sagebrush wilderness with the steady rumble of a thousand hoofs.

Once again the rolling hills hear the shrill "coo-ee" of the cowboys, riding herd with one knee thrown nonchalantly over the saddle horn.

The old west was reborn for Paramount's picturization of "The Border Legion," in locations personally selected by Zane Grey. Far in the North country, a selected cast of Paramount players headed by Antonio Moreno, Helene Chadwick, Charles Ogle, Rockcliffe Fellows and Gibson Gowland, brought to life the characters that lived long ago.

Approximately 100 minor players, chiefly cowboys, take part in the spectacular production, directed by William Howard.

"The Border Legion" which opens at the Belle Theatre on Monday was filmed true to life.

The story, adapted to the screen by George Hull, has to do with the activities of a band of ruthless outlaws who preyed upon settlers and gold towns in the early days of Idaho.

A replica of one of the great cattle drives of the early days is a striking sight.

Here is, perhaps, one of the greatest of all Zane Grey tales, produced as is fitting such a story, with a cast that approaches perfection. Moreno and Miss Chadwick have featured roles, and others, besides those already mentioned, include Charles Ogle, James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

PLAN GLASS ROOFS FOR RAILWAY CARS

Christiania, Feb. 14.—On the new railway line through the Romsdal recently opened by King Haakon in Norway, the state is considering the building of special railway carriages with glass roofs in addition to the glass sides now in use on observation cars. This will enable tourists to view from their seats the neighboring mountains which rise to several thousand feet and often hang over the line. The new line links up the Fjord districts of Molde with the lines running to Christiania or Oslo, as this ancient city is now called, and will traverse by fjords, water falls and mountains establishing one of the most picturesque routes in the entire country.

CORBYVILLE 2 PLUMBERS 1; WOLVES 3 NAT. CASTINGS 2; PARKDALE IN PLAY-OFFS

Two Classy Games City League Hockey

Corbyville Defeats Plumbers, and National Castings Lose First

Jack is back—that is Jack Frost—and assisted by manager Arnott and his men, placed a fairly good sheet of ice at the disposal of the four city league hockey teams which lined up at the Turnbull street arena last evening. Though a bit shelly, the ice held out well and two nifty hockey games held the attention of a crowd of rabid fans for the evening's duration.

Probably last night's games produced the season's closest scores in city league, for Corbyville just nosed the Plumbers out in the first game by 2-1, and in the second game, Wolves of the North "nosed" National Castings out by one goal in ten minutes overtime. The final score was 3-2. This is National Castings' first defeat of the season.

The Plumbers have a "bone to pick" with referee Ken Colling, and he will be lucky if he does not require their services as plumbers this winter. They might present him with a bill longer than a stork's. Plumbers claim that the game they played was strong enough to defeat the boys from the Red Mill out Moira way, had it not been for two occurrences. When the game was started and the puck was faced off, it had not been in play half a minute until a Corbyville player took a long shot and "shimmied" the twine. Plumbers claim he was off side a mile (more or less) and rumor has it that the Red Mill manager admitted the "theft" of the goal. Colling allowed it.

Well there was something thought and said too about the Corbyville goalie throwing out the puck after it had passed the score line in the net. That was in the third. This was not counted for the Plumbers. The period scores were 2-0, 2-0, and 2-1, the Plumbers running their lonely one in near the end. They figure the "dope" should be Plumbers 2, Corbyville 1, but the City League Records will not show it that way.

A Real Hummer

The second game between the National Castings and the Wolves, was a "humdinger" to stoop to vernacular, and tho' the steel workers held the "Pests" down very good, the Wolves had a lead of 2-0 until the last five minutes to go in the last period when the Steel workers tied the score, they finally decided to play five minutes over time. There was no score in the first five minutes of the overtime but in the last five minutes one of the Wolves scored on a long shot! The game ended 3-2 for the Wolves of the North.

The city league hockey is coming along fine and those who are missing it are missing some real good hockey. Only two games have been dropped as a result of Jack Frost's "spree", and the schedule will be carried right out.

The formal opening of the new hospital building at Goderich, has been set for February 18, Wednesday of next week, when the building will be open from 3 p.m. to 9.30 p.m. adn a program given.

Queen Victoria Boys Win Hockey Shield

Defeated King George School in Play-off Last Night

On Friday night at the arena the schedule for Public School Hockey Shield came to its conclusion when King George and Queen Victoria Schools played off their scoreless tie of a previous date. The game was fast and well contested, both teams showing some surprisingly good combination. The masterly manipulation of Latchford and the stone-wall goal-tending of McConnachie featured the proceedings. The only counter was annexed by Q.V.S. in the first period, and thus they become holders of the shield on an unbeaten record for the season.

St. Michael's finish second in the race and King George third. The thanks of all concerned are due to the gentlemen who have so kindly refereed games during the competition.

If Your Skin Breaks Out Use Sulphur

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

TRENTON LOST OUT TO BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 14—Trenton juniors went down to defeat by 2 goals to 0 here last night at the hands of Brockville, who won out on the round by 6 goals to 3, having trimmed Trenton on the latters ice on Friday last. Both teams shewed the effect of an enforced lay-off of a week through lack of ice following the mild spell, but nevertheless the game was a hard-fought affair, with Brockville having an edge on their opponents. The good work of Lewis in goal for Trenton prevented Brockville from making the defeat more decisive. The locals will now meet Peterboro in the O. H. A. play-offs.

Mort Kennedy, Brockville's star right wing man, was responsible for the two goals, both coming as a result of individual play. The first was scored 17 minutes after the start of the second period, and the other two minutes from the start of the final frame.

Trenton put up a hard checking game but lacked team play in their efforts. The game was well handled by Armstrong of Toronto, and the teams were as follows:

Trenton—Lewis, goal; Allore and G. Bowen, defence; Bernard, centre; Perry and Anderson, wings; J. Bowen and Purdy, subs.

Brockville—Machon, goal; Sheridan and Woodcock, defence; H. Garand, centre; Kennedy and McInbue, wings F. Garand and Walsh, subs.

For Trenton Bernard and Lewis were the outstanding players while Kennedy and Sheridan were Brockville's best.

PARKDALE GETS IN PLAY-OFFS BY WIN

Toronto, Feb. 14.—Scoring the tieing goal with forty seconds to go in the final period Parkdale Canoe Club defeated Aura Lee, 4 to 3, in a ten minutue overtime senior O. H. A. game at the Arena last night and clinched a place in the play-off with Peterboro for group honors. It was Harry Watson, nursing an injured shoulder, that would have kept the majority of players on the bench, who snarled up the Aura Lee team fighting desperately to hold its small lead, slipped inside the defence, tricked Alfie Moore out of position and flipped in the goal that sent the game into extra play. And with Tracy Shaw serving a penalty Scotty Cawkell passed to Jeffrey for the wininng score after four minutes and thirty seconds of overtime had been played. Aura Lee tried hard to again knot the game, Burke, Cook and Shaw getting inside the defence in the last couple of minutes, but without success. Parkdale will play Peterboro on Wednesday or Thurday, and Saturday of next week and the winner plays either Stratford or Niagara Falls in the finals for the O.H.A. championship and the right to enter the Allan Cup playdowns.

PETERBORO TAKES LAST LEAGUE GAME

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 14.—Peterboro scored seven goals in the final senior O. H. A. fixture here last night with Hamilton Rowing Club but they counted only five of them on the right side of the ledger. One was deflected into the Peterboro net by McLeod for the locals only tally of the game, and the other, a perfect goal, was disallowed by a goal judge, who was ousted from his position immediately after. Two goals, however, were enough to beat the struggling Oarsmen, who, in spite of trying their best through the three periods, were unable to show to advantage against the faster and more experienced Petes.

Mrs. Wm. Armstrong, wife of Chief of Police Armstrong, of St. Thomas, had the misfortune to falll and break her arm at the wrist on the slippery sidewalk on Talbot street.

"Y" Reds Set Another Single game Record

De Throne Printers But Beat Bowlers' Record To Do It

Last night at the Y alleys two games were staged, the first being a challenge game between the Bellevues' Ladies and the Wolves of the North. The Wolves were to spot the Bellevues 250 pins and the loser to buy the supper for the winners. The Bellevues winning out by 124 pins and also winning the supper. The ladies had some of the Wolves' goats which helped them win and of course the railbirds were all for the ladies. Miss Lafferty had the high single and three string of the evening with 253 and 565, thus earning the "Dead-eye Dick" honors of the evening.

In the second game the Printers and Y Reds met in a league fixture, the Reds winning out by 240 pins. The Reds set an awful pace in the first game when they were just 6 pins off beating the alley record. They set a new league record for the single game of 1096 formerly held by the Bowlers. The best performance of the evening was made by M. Hall when he also broke the league record for the single game, rolling 360, being also the high single and three string of the evening with 360 and 677.

DEAN OF CATHEDRAL LIKES THE TRIFLES

Lincoln, Eng., Feb. 14—The appearance of the death-watch beetle in the timbering of one of the towers of Lincoln Cathedral is causing the dean much trouble, but he is equally disappointed with what he calls the stinginess of English people in sending funds to assist in combatting the work of the beetle, and in the restoration of the cathedral.

The generosity of American money, he points out, has enabled nearly half the work to be done, and by the end of the year he expects to have enough American dollars to pay for the reparation of the central tower and two transepts.

Scores of English tourists visit the cathedral but few of them go to him with a ten pound note, as the Americans do, and say "here is a trifle for your fund." according to the dean.

CONVICT IN VIENNA MURDERER AT 73

Vienna, Feb. 14—After an argument over a sum equivalent to$7. Karl Ziedler pensioner, aged 73, yesterday took his landlord's 18-month-old daughter to a bridge over the Danube, flung the babe to her death in the river, and then gave himself up to the police.

An investigation of Zeidler's record shows that he had once been condemned to death, sentence being commuted to 25 years' imprisonment, which he served. On another occasion he was given a short sentence for manslaughter.

Capt. John Ross Roach whose team tackles Hamilton Tigers in Toronto tonight is one of the most important games of the season.

FOUND ORIGINAL BEETHOVEN SCRIPT

Leipsic, Feb. 14—The original manuscript of a Beethoven wedding song was recently found attached to another manuscript in the possession of the firm of Breitkopf & Haertel Beethoven's musical publishers.

The song was composed on the occasion of the marriage, Feb. 6, 1819, of the daughter of Giannatanasio del Rie principal of the boarding school attended by Beethoven's nephew Carl.

All trace of the song had been lost until an employe of Breitkopf & Haertel searching for Beethoven's piano concertos written in the master's hand. The song was fastened to one of them by a clip.

Her 91st Birthday

Congratulations from a host of friends and relatives are this week being showered upon Mrs. Philip Harper, 43 Colborne street east, Oshawa, who on Tuesday celebrated her 91st birthday. In previous years the occasion of Mrs. Harper's birthday was celebrated with a party, but last year and this were quietly observed but many of her friends thoughtfully called to tender their happy respects, while a wreath of flowers was received besides many telegrams and messages of congratulation.

Mrs. Harper has spent practically all of her life in this district. She was one of a family of eight and was born in East Whitby Township about a mile east of Columbus. Of the family this lady is the only surviving member. Her marriage took place in Columbus in 1854 to Mr. Philip Harper and following the marriage they lived near Cartwright for the first four and a half years. The Township of East Whitby has been the surroundings where Mrs. Harper has lived except for that short space of time.

3 Qualities No Other Four Possesses

Before Chrysler engineers achieved the new good Maxwell, every car buyer had to determine whether to pay a high premium for power and performance, or to pay less for mediocre performance.

In the good Maxwell of today, Chrysler engineers, working with Maxwell's fine manufacturing facilities, have solved the problem completely and unquestionably.

They have solved it by engineering into the good Maxwell a combination of four-cylinder performance capacity and operating-maintenance economy wholly new to the motoring public.

In this latest product of the great Maxwell organization and factories expect a new degree of four-cylinder power, speed, flexibility and vibrationless operation which surpasses these qualities even as Maxwell previously expressed them.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

The major heaved a sigh. It seemed to him a dreadful waste of money.

"Dear me," he said regretfully, "and I might have pulled off the stakes! That would have been ten or twelve pounds, at least. A good deal can be done with ten or twelve pounds my dear. It's a great pity."

"So it is," said Elaine, suppressing a smile. "But you weren't sure of winning it, you know."

"No, no, that's true," assented the major reluctantly. "But I might, I might, my dear. Well——" he paused and looked round the room and out at the window again helplessly. "If you haven't got it, I can't have it, can I?"

"I'm afraid not," she said. Never mind, dear, try and think you would be sure to have lost it, and that will console you."

The major accepted the suggestion rather doubtfully.

"Yes, oh, yes," he said. Then, after a pause, "I—I think I'll just run down to the club again Elaine. You don't care to walk down as far with me, do you?"

"I do care very much dear," she replied. "But I've got the pudding to make, and my dress to alter, and your coat to mend, and—oh, half a hundred things to do!"

"Always busy, always busy, Elaine!" said the major, with that cheerfulness which characterizes idle people when they are commending the industry of others. "Just like your mother, my dear. Ah, dear me!" and he sighed— comfortably —and shook his head. "And you get more like her in face and figure, too," he added. "She was a very beautiful woman, Elaine."

Elaine's face had grown graver and their close she bent forward and put her white arm—not her floury hand, however—round his neck and kissed him.

The major patted her cheek lovingly, then in a lighter tone said:

"By the way, has young Sherwin called this afternoon?"

A blush so faint as scarcely to be called a blush rose to Elaine's face.

"Captain Sherwin has not been today, papa; no," she said, not exactly with coldness, but with reserve.

"That's strange," said the major. "He offered to play me two hundred up—billiards, you know, my dear—this afternoon, and I thought he'd call on his way to the club. By gad, perhaps he's waiting for me there." And he took up his hat—the major would under no circumstances have been guilty of keeping it on in his daughter's presence—and settled it jauntily on his grimyish white hair. "Capital fellow, Charlie——"

"Meaning Captain Sherwin, papa?" said Elaine, balancing a spoon on her taper finger.

"Eh? Of course. Didn't you know his name was Charles?" replied the major.

"I know nothing about him," said Elaine, "excepting that you have brought him home to dinner once or twice."

"Oh, I though you and he were rather good friends," said the major carelessly "He's a capital young fellow. Good looking—don't you think so?"

Elaine raised her eyes from the spoon, and fixed them vacantly on the view that was framed by the window; a view worthy of the pencil of Turner—a lovely little valley wih a tree-clad hill behind, a tiny river running in between and winding round a rambling old mansion whose time-worn stone gleamed in the sunlight where it was not hidden, by the ivy and the trees.

She was silent a moment, then she said simply:

"Yes—I suppose he is good looking papa. I had never thought of it before."

The major laughed slightly.

"I thought it was the first thing you women noticed, my dear," he remarked.

"Some women, perhaps," assented Elaine dreamily.

"Well, Sherwin is good looking anyway," resumed the major, smoothing on his gloves—he always wore gloves, although he might be only going down the town and back. "And, by George, he is confoundedly well off; at least, he has expectations. Uncle a rich cotton spinner, or ironmaster, or something of that kind, I believe. Wish my uncle had been in trade ,and I'd been his heir," aded the major pathetically.

Elaine smiled. She was fully aware of her father's pride in their ancestry.

"You'd have filled your proper position then, my dear, and moved in your proper circle, instead of—of—living in a miserable village, in a miserable twopenny-halfpenny town among a lot of second-rate provincials."

Elaine smiled consolingly.

"Never mind, dear. They are very nice people, and we are very happy, aren't we? If there were no bakers' and butchers' bills we should be quite happy, shouldn't we?" and she sighed.

"Ah, those butchers and bakers!" said the major. "I declare whenever I see one of their wretched red-covered books my heart sinks into my boots and—Why, confound it, that wild devil is down here again!" he broke off leaning across the table, and staring out of the window.

Elaine looked in the same direction There was no human being in sight, and the only alteration that had taken place in the view was a slight one that might well have escaped notice. It was this: While the major had been inveighing against tradesmen's books a red flag had glided up the flag-post rising from the tallest turret of the house in the hollow and was now flying lazily in the soft breeze.

"I—I beg your pardon my dear," he said, apologizing for the strength of his language. "That flag wasn't hoisted when I came in, was it?"

"No," said Elaine. "It has only just this moment gone up."

The major looked at it with undisguised interest.

"Oh, yes, he's back. There are only two families rightly privileged to fly a flag when they are in residence; and the Nairnes are one. The right was granted by Henry VIII.—the old scamp!—and this wild dev—and Nairne always does it. I wonder how long he is gong to stay. A couple of hours, perhaps, certainly not more than a day or two."

They stood looking at the house in silence for quite a minute, then Elaine said:

"Have you ever seen the marquis, papa?"

The major shook his head.

"No, never; and am never likely to, I should say!"

"He never comes into the town?"

The major shook his head again.

"I don't think so; at any rate, no one has ever seen him. They say that he doesn't leave the Castle grounds when he is down here, or if he does that it is only after dark. The rector told me he once met him tramping along Warden's Lane at two o'clock in the morning——"

"What was the rector doing out at that ghostly hour?" asked Elaine with a smile.

"Been to see a sick parishioner, I suppose; and that's the only time he has been seen in the place. I believe though they tell all sorts of wild stories about his driving tandem through the streets after dark."

"He must be a strange man," said Elaine thoughtfully. "Is he—mad, papa?"

THE CANADIAN WAXWING

The Bohemian Waxwing, the cousin of the Cedar Waxwing, is truly an all Canadian Bird and should be called the Canadian Waxwing.

The thought that I would be given such a nice treat at the sight of a Bohemian Waxwing at close quarters had never entered my mind.

It was one terrible blustery day. It had snowed for two days, almost without letup. The streets of Westmount, Quebec, were piled high with drifts and the wind whistled through the streets and made life a great burden for old folks.

The lunch table we had put in our garden was covered with snow almost every hour, though we tried to keep it clear. Some birds came to dine but not many.

"Daddy," said Joe. "aren't the birds hungry?"

"Yes, indeed they are, Joe," said I.

"Well, why don't they come and get something to eat?" asked our little bird man.

"They are afraid to come down off the mountain, for it is too dangerous in this cold storm," said I.

Joe wanted to know more so I told him. And the truth is, that the birds may get something to eat in a storm but they do not get much and if the storm is long and cold they very often die of hunger or perish trying to get food. That is why it is such a nice thing to have places among the trees where the lunch table is sheltered from the storm. The birds can enjoy life, if they have a nice dinner handy in a safely sheltered place, even in a very very bad storm. It is well to have the lunch table in a sheltered place but with clear space and clear vision all around, so no cats can approach unseen. It is a bad thing to coax the birds to a place where cats can get a chance to murder them.

Well, that was the situation. We had a lunch table but it was too exposed to the storm and we went to bed very sorry for the birds up on the mountain.

Next morning was Sunday and it was still cold and blowing, but the sun was trying hard to appear.

Joe was up early and at the window looking out to see if any birds had come to the table and he came running into our room. "Oh, Daddy, get up and see this bird." I got up and looked. There was a poor little chicadee hopping about on the snow covered table and not getting a single thing. He looked cheeky but he looked sad too and Joe said maybe an owl sent him to see if we were on the job, for owls are wise and hungry birds don't want to all come if nothing is on the table.

While I was wondering all about the birds and the storm, it must have been a bird fairy voice, for I am sure I heard something say, "The birds trust you and now they need you, why don't you go?"

Then another voice said, "I will show you pretty things, if you only will help the birds."

So Joe and I got a very early breakfast and we also got a big paper bag full of broken bread and lots of seeds of all kinds and some suet and out we went, to make dinner tables for the birds on the mountain, among the trees.

Once on the mountain, among the trees, we had no trouble finding birds They were all staying close to home and were hungry. We put some sunflower seeds in the rough bark and suet also and the bird that found it, a noisy nuthatch made so much noise that he brought all of Birdland, it seemed to us. We made three places for food and were coming down the road. I was quite sure that the bird fairy had played a trick on me, for I did not see any pretty sights, but Joe said something about a flock of birds eating red berries and sure enough, there they were, a big flock of Waxwings.

Of course I thought they were only Cedar Waxwings at first but when I saw their lovely yellow and white markings, I knew I was looking at a wonderful sight from fairyland to be sure.

It was not far down the mountain to home and I knew those berries would keep the birds around for a while, so I ran home and yelled in the front door to my wife, "Bo-hee-meeann Waxwings" and when I got an answer, tore up the hill again. Mrs Robb was not far behind me and we stayed with that flock all morning, just as close as it is possible to get without stepping on them, for they were too hungry to care much for us. The fairy certainly kept her word and she will do so with you too, if you do kind acts. We have never seen any Canadian Waxwings since and we will always be glad we fed the birds after the storm. Joseph has seen the Bohemian Waxwing, think of it.

Answers to Correspondents

Student—I recognized your writing as having written under the name of "Curious" before. Am I correct? The poem is by Rudyard Kipling and has been set to music. It is as follows:—

MOTHER O' MINE

If I were hanged on the highest hill,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose tears would come down to me,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

If I were damned of body and soul,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine.
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
  Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

—Rudyard Kipling.

E. G. H.—I cannot recommend any toilet ware in this page, but I can give you a splendid recipe for a cream for the hands to make at home. Fry out a piece of mutton fat; strain and cool. When hard, measure four heaping tablespoonfuls, put in a small pan and warm. When quite liquid, add 1 tbspn of glycerine, juice of one lemon, 1-2 tspn borax and 6 drops tincture benzoin. Beat constantly until cool and creamy. Pour into a jar and apply nightly to the hands, wearing a pair of large gloves to protect the bed covering. This will keep your hands smooth and white during the "chapping" days.

FALSE GAIETY

"There is nothing wrong fundamentally with young people to-day," writes Lady Angela Forbes in the "Royal Magazine;" "their exuberance of spirits may lead them to do foolish things, but they are no worse than young people of any preceding generation. They ride, they shoot, they play golf as well as the youth of an earlier day. They can be very serious and they can also be domestic; that Victorian virtue, mourned as dead, is quite as much alive to-day as ever it was.

"They are certainly more capable than their predecessors. There is probably too much cocktail drinking, too much dancing, and too much night life. Entertaining in restaurants and night clubs instead of at home has deprived all hospitality of any individuality, and what is lacking in quality must be made up in quantity. The real trouble with young people to-day is their apparent inability to get to bed at a reasonable hour. They must keep going till daylight breaks, and beauty sleep is unheard of.

"There is nothing to indicate that constitutions are stronger than they were, and it is on hygienic principles as well as on moral grounds that one deplores the incessant round of restless activity which constitutes social life to-day. How will the present generation look and feel after all this night life when middle age descends upon it? We know that the young are scornful of the middle-aged, but it is the scorn of ignorance, for young hearts can beat even in middle-aged bodies, and the tragedy of life is when health and heart do not keep pace.

"The war-time spirit of 'Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die,' is still in the air, and there is a false air about much of contemporary gaiety, but against all this we find quite as good wives and mothers as devoted as those in the last generation."

A Happy Childhood Is A Matter Of Health

Little children quickly get out of sorts but by prompt treatment they can just as quickly be set right again. Most of their troubles arise in the first place from the stomach and bowels; that is why a good clearing out is the first thing the doctor prescribes. Mothers, why not let Baby's Own Tablets keep your children well. Unlike that ill-smelling, rank tasting castor oil so dreaded by most children, the Tablets are pleasant to take and their action, though thorough, is gentle and causes no discomfort to either the baby or the growing child. Baby's Own Tablets are a never failing remedy for relieving constipation and indigestion; thus they break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms and make the teething period painless. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

This Lassie Has Her Colds "Rubbed Away"

The mother of this attractive little girl, Mrs. E. E. Emmans, of 215 Seventh Ave., N. E., Portage La Prairie, Man., is one of the many Canadian mothers who are enthusiastic about the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, for treating children's colds. Mrs. Emmans writes: "My little girl had croup at night pretty badly and Vicks did her a lot of good. I have also used it with very satisfactory results for head and chest colds."

Vicks is just "rubbed on" for sore throat, tonsilitis, bronchitis, croup or deep chest colds. When so applied, Vicks has a double direct action: internally medicated vapors are inhaled while, at the same time, externally, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin.

JUST IN PASSING

Books

Books are keys to wisdom's treasure;
Books are gates to lands of pleasure;
Books are paths that upward lead;
Books are friends. Come, let us read.

The Perfect Theatre

I think the following from "Judge" will appeal to many devotees of the theatres:

Professor Blotter, who was elected to the advisory board of the Producing Managers Association following his invention of the perfect theatre, is at present giving his attention to securing the perfect audience.

"My first move," said Blotter, "will be to do something about chronic coughers. I expect to install throat clinics in the lobby of each theatre, and force everyone to undergo a thorough examination by a competent doctor before he is led to his seat. As for the theatre gossips who whisper to each other during the play, I shall require each member of the audience to render a sworn statement signed by a notary public that he has said everything he wants to say to his neighbour until eleven o'clock that night."

In the same efficient manner Dr. Blotter has met the problem of people who bring candy to the theatre that is enclosed in a tissue paper that crackles when it is opened. Tackling the problem at its source, he went to the candy companies and stuffed all the chocolates wrapped in crinkly paper with a quaint East Indian poison. In this way Blotter hopes to be rid of the nuisance by Christmas.

"For the benefit of the people who giggle out loud whenever anyone swears on the stage," he concluded, "I have installed under each seat a small trapdoor letting down onto a number of long iron spikes. These trapdoors are operated by a small lever in the hands of an attendant overlooking the theatre. At the first sign of a giggle—" Blotter smacked his lips—"he will release the trap!"

"And after you have secured the perfect audience?" I asked.

"Then I'll start to look for a play worth their seeing," he replied.

Some of the above might be equally effective in our moving picture theatres.

Professor Blotter might then turn his attention to offenders who read the captions aloud and to those youngsters at matinees who stand up behind and chew gum in your ear.

DIET FOR CHILDREN

Value of Fruits and Vegetables

No diet is well planned that eliminates fruits and vegetables, and they are especially necessary for children. Fresh vegetables contain vitamines, which are the means whereby the body cells obtain proper nutrition from the other classes of food. Of particular value in this regard are spinach, turnip tops, dandelions, and other forms of 'greens.'

Oftentimes hunger is due to lack of vegetables in the diet. Children may crave more food when apparently they have eaten abundantly, because their bodily needs are actually not satisfied, and the giving of vegetables frequently alleviates this craving. The system was crying out for elements which it needed, and which the vegetables supply.

The great danger in giving vegetables to children is due to the fact that they are often imperfectly prepared. They should be cooked until they are tender. The green vegetables require very little water. When served to children under seven they should be mashed or rubbed through a coarse sieve. The best methods of cooking vegetables are baking, boiling, and stewing. They should never be given fried or raw until the child is ten years old.

The same discretion in preparing vegetables for the child's menus is necessary in the matter of fruits. This vitally necessary class of foodstuffs is also not without its dangers. This is especially true of raw fruit. Washing does not destroy the germs; they can only be got rid of by boiling; moreover, fruit is less digestible raw than cooked. Cooking breaks up the minute cells, and permits the easy access of the digestive juices.

Raw fruit when given to children should be perfectly fresh. In stale fruit chemical changes occur which cause intestinal troubles, such as diarrhoea and vomiting, and so forth. Children should never eat unripe fruit. More extensive use should be made of stewed dried fruits. They contain the food elements of fresh fruit.

The one fruit juice that babies under one year of age can take raw without danger and with benefit is orange juice A tablespoonful of orange juice should be given daily to every artifically fed baby after the fourth month. This can be increased after ten months so that a child of three can take the juice of a whole orange. A young child should not eat the pulp of the orange, and this is avoided by straining the juice. Closely allied to orange juice is grape fruit juice. This can be given to children over two.

Raw apples should not be given to children under four, and then they should be peeled with a clean knife. Baked or stewed apples, however, are excellent for children over two years of age, and even a little younger. All stewed fruits can be given after the second year if seeds and skins are removed by straining.

Raw bananas should not be given to a child under ten. Bananas are not thoroughly ripe until they have brown spots on the skin. If served before this stage they should be baked or boiled. They are of great food value, but not easily digested. Grapes and melons should not be given to children under seven. Even older children should remove the seeds of grapes before swallowing. Berries, cherries, pineapple, and plums are not permitted before the age of seven, but between the ages of five and seven peaches, pears, oranges, apples, and rhubarb may be taken. All stewed or baked fruits, however, may be given at four years of age.

Sinical Sadie Sees

Valentine Greetings! Your heart's desires be with you!

To the Ladies

Has your husband offered himself as a test for the new 5% beer?

An Empty Heart

This house is to let, for life or years,
  Her rent is sorrow, and her income
    tears;
Cupid, it has long stood void; her bills make known.
  She must be dearly let, or let alone.

Newest Schoolboy Howler

A myth is a female moth.

Chemists say there are all sorts of terrible things in bottled liquor.

"But", as our make-up man says: "what's in the stuff ain't near as important as who it's in".

No, no, Nannette, the "make-up" man on a newspaper has nothing to do with cosmetics.

We wonder if any Belleville teachers get as exasperated as the colleged professor who recently dismissed his class thus:—"Please don't flop your ears as you pass out."

A Howling Success

A Baby Show.

Oh, Min!

Some men admire Moses who instituted the old law; some, Paul, who spread the new law. But Sinical Sadie says the character in the Bible with the most following amongst the men is Ananias!

An ornithologist states that birds have accents according to the part of the country they found in. Say, how would you like to have a parrot that had been brought up in Billingsgate?

"Mac" says the nerviest man he saw this week was the one who took shelter in the umbrella store without buying one.

Most men still look upon their wives as a combination of an houri and the manageress of a restaurant.

A charming young lady named
    Nellie,
Once danced herself near to a jelly;
  The doctors declared
  That her life might be spared
If she stayed for a week at Pwllheli.

Rigid Economy

The canny Scot was not quite sure whether business would keep him away from his evening meal, "Jeanie, ma lass," said he to his wife before he left home in the morning, "if I'm no' able to be hame I'll ring ye up at six precisely. Dinna tak' the receiver off, and then I'll no' hae to pit in ma twopence."

POEMS Old And NEW

MY WAY

By Clarible Weeks Avery

I do my work; I wash and mend the stockings;
  I scrub the stove and floors;
I bake the bread. I've learned to love my kitchen
  As well as out-of-doors.
But if I wear an orchid-colored apron,
  And set a nodding rose upon my shelf
Between the lamp and two-legged clock it matters
  To no one but myself.

JACK FROST

By Alix Thorn

I went to bed one winter night
And not a person was in sight
  Outside my window sill.
I'm very sure I gave a peep
Before I went so fast to sleep,
  And all the world was still.

I never heard him silent come,
All quiet was my little room,
  Maybe the moon might know.
How fast he worked, my funny guest,
And carefully, to do his best,
  But no one saw him go.

Yet there upon the glass he drew
Such pictures as I never knew,
  Great towers and splendid trees.
And gallant knights and ladies fair,
Broad roads a-winding here and there
  Like fairy tales were these.

How did he find a little boy,
And try to give him so much joy?
  I think he's really fine.
He'll come again, our house he knows
He's just an elf, I do suppose,
  Yet he's a friend of mine.

LONDON

Romance has set her castle here, where beats
The heart of England; hither no winds blow
But sing of youth; long since the Bells of Bow
Called Whittington; here Milton,
    Lamb and Keats
Once bowed the knee to her; and he that meets
In some pale dawn that gallant band shall know
Her secret, and why Shakespeare long
    streets.
Still when the moth of twilight flutters down
Poets and kings and sages long since dust
Leave Paradise to gather at her gate;
These gave their lives as jewels for her crown,
Left us this London as a holy trust,
Bidding us keep their faith inviolate.

"Worth $100 to Me Relieved Eczema and Piles"

Mrs. Peter A. Palmer, Saltburn, Sask., writes:

"Dr. Chase's Ointment has completely relieved me of eczema and piles. I also used this Ointment for my baby, who broke out in eczema. A few applications were all that was necessary in her case. Dr. Chase's Ointment has been worth a hundred dollars to me,—before using it I had spent a great deal more than that in unsuccessful treatment from doctors. We have also used Dr. Chase's other medicines, the Nerve Food having restored my health after suffering from severe nerve trouble when a girl."

Set Fair Dates

At the meeting of the directors of the Kingston Fair Association held yesterday afternoon the dates of the 1925 Exhibition were definitely fixed for Sept. 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19. The opening day being the third Tuesday in September, and the Fair running in full swing until the following Saturday night.

Thickest of Season

The thickest snowstorm of this season struck Kingston yesterday and continued for some time, covering the ground to the depth of several inches with a fleecy down mantle of whiteness. Falls of more or less intensity continued during the afternoon and added to the fleecy covering, but not enough had fallen at press time to make any kind of sleighing.

Formerly of Napanee

The death occurred at Dresden, on Tuesday of a well-known and esteemed resident, Mrs. Ann Jane. Carscallen, relict of the late Isaac N. Carscallen, after a serious illness of a week's duration. Deceased was born at Napanee in 1839 and was before her marriage Miss Ann Jane Wilde. She had resided in Dresden for over half a century. Her husband predeceased her twelve years ago . She is survived by four sons, Andrew B., police magistrate at Wallaceburg; H. M. of Toronto; Stanley N., of Calgary; Rev. Charles R., of Cheng Tu, China. A daughter Mrs. (Dr.) Thornton predeceased several years ago.

Good Hopes of Recovery

James Moulton, the C.P.R. shopman of Carleton Place, seriously injured by having his body crushed in the side by a snowplow, is progressing favorably in the Smith's Falls Public Hospital. At first no hopes were entertained for his recovery, the injured man not regaining consciousness for days after the accident. During the week-end Mr. Moulton rallied so much that hope is now held out for his recovery. Outside of several bones being broken, it is believed that internal injuries will prove minor. Mr. Moulton is fortyeight years of age and has a family of seven children. He has been an employee of the C.P.R. for twenty years.

News of Deseronto

Deseronto, Feb. 14.—The icy condition of all roads is proving a boom to the blacksmiths, all farmers hastening to town for a sharp shoeing. The merchants in general also are receiving good business from the visitations.

Mr. R. Goodrich of Kingston was a social caller to Deseronto on Thursday and for attendance at the "Fun Review of 1925."

Several carloads of canned goods have been shipped from the storeroom of the E. C. Metcalfe Canning Co. The popularity of the company's pack is evidenced by the patronage of the best trade throughout Canada, and large shipments have been made to the United States . Last season's pack was the largest in the history of the Company and is all sold, awaiting order for delivery. Acreage has been largely increased for the coming season which indicates a largely increased pack. The activities of the company mean much to the manufacturing and commercial life of Deseronto.

Mr. W. Gould of the Bay territory was a business caller to Deseronto on Thursday . Mr. Gould reports preparations underway for the placing of the government pound nets in the Bay for the pickerel spawning season.

A number from Deseronto visited Belleville on Thursday evening for attendance at Griffin's Theatre for the appearance of Blackstone the Magician.

From "Fifty Doctors Against Alcohol

"Alcohol brings many patients to the doctors, but it is really the doctor's greatest enemy in performing cures. It is the doctor's duty and desire to get his patients well and to keep them well; alcohol helps thwart him in all his efforts to this end. It renders his patient more susceptible to the attacks of disease, and when they are ill, it is much more difficult to cure them. From the health point of view, it is good economy to be a total abstainer."

RHEUMATISM AND LUMBAGO

ARE BANISHED BY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality—and more.

Some diseases give immunity from another attack, but rheumatism and lumbago (which is really muscular rheumatism) work just the other way. Every attack invites another.

There is scarcely any disease which physicians find more difficult to treat successfully than rheumatism. Long study, however, has shown that the seat of the disease is in the blood. By maintaining the quality of the blood, you are doing the best possible thing to prevent and combat rheumatism.

That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills has proved successful in thousands of cases of rheumatism and lumbago. These pills enrich the blood and enable it to throw off the poisons of the diseases. And so long as the blood is kept pure and rich, there need be no fear of a return of the trouble.

Mrs. Annie Wright, Woolchester, Alta., says:—"I was a sufferer from rheumatism for six years and most of that time my life was one of misery. I tried several doctors but never got more than temporary relief. The trouble seemed to affect my whole system. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and through these I found complete relief. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to anyone suffering from this trouble."

OLD LONDON HOLDS RECORD FOR PARKS

London, Feb. 14.—London now claims to have more parks, public gardens and open spaces than any other city in the world. One visitor recently who had thought of the English capital as a dingy town of smoke, back yards and streets, found he could travel three miles through four of the royal parks, only crossing a street twice. Within seven miles of the heart of London begins the wild tradition-haunted forests of Epping, where kings and queens for a thousand years have roamed and hunted and where today it is possible to wander for a week amid majestic ancient oaks and beeches.

Worn Out

By [illegible]

hesitate to show that his understanding of life is fishy.

Now that the school children have been sent home to worry their pas and mas instead of their teachers, and the gulls are full of peanuts and the pelican full of fish I will wander back onto the desert and proceed to prove to you that I am not full of prunes, at least, not on the desert, for that is one sweet lovely [illegible] territory.

From beer to Beersheba, across the desert on an auto trip is a trail of dead rabbits, worn out tires, worn out nerves and nails.

The spirit of th ecasse is getting into my blood. It is the same devilish spirit that got into everything we did on the trip. I see red once again. It is the sunset red of The Home Town. Why some silly empty heads will rise with the dawn and stand on the brink of the Grand Canyon of Arizona and gasp and gabble about it and the sunrise, the noble shafts of which lend that dump of dirt a light is more than I can see. It is their open confession that they lie abed at home and come out on the desert and shiver on the brink of a fearsome hole and discover what white rat lives they live at home and what an easy matter it is to feed the pelican fish made of magnificent words, joined into awe inspiring phrases for us humble stay at homers to swallow, so that we are discontented. The Grand Canyon is the mud manicured bunk. I have seen the sun rise and set in Canada there many times and I was more interested in the self deceivers who stood on the edge of nature's infinity of nothingness and praised only their own exposures than I was in the sun kissed mud hole before me.

Nothing from nothing leaves this nothingness subtracted from the desert. It is a work of the devil to laugh back at man and make him feel a fool. Or is it a work of God to make man turn his thoughts inward to the light of his own soul which he has kept a mere smudge at home? After I got rid of the muckers in mud who come to damn with empty praise and then run home to a can begotten breakfast too soon, I sat me down on the Grand Canyon of Arizona to see what it is all about.

Here is a valley in the face of the desert, which looked to me like the exact negative of mountains. Instead of a photograph of mountains, we have the negative. It is as though the die from which great chains of mountains had been cast, had been forgotten and left by the Maker one of His tools ungathered. He, the Great Painter of Hills, has dropped His Rocky Mountain brush.

One does not stand on the brink and jingle words of wonder and think at the same time. One must first be dumb with awe, then silent of choice, then thoughtful.

Surely, it is more than a poetic fancy, when I stand before this work, and instead of asking myself to look at it and see how small I am, I wonder on the faith the Maker of such a sublime subtraction must have in Man, that He makes us living Gods on the face of this dead magnificence, this awful searching creation. And then I turn and see some of the Man Gods who so lately praised, filling their wordy mouths with beans.!!! ??? Let us go back to the desert.

Out on the desert! Now, Mrs. Robb says the way this is being written clearly shows that she should have pushed me into the Grand Canyon and settled the matter much as the Pelican did.

"Go back and tell about our trip", says Mrs. Robb. Well, for the love of Mike?, isn't the Grand Canyon and all that, what made up the trip?

"Yes," says my director, "but not that stuff about gossip and pelicans, Belleville gets enough of that, they are interested in the trip."

Very well! Here comes the trip.

Weeks too late, too overloaded for safety but not half well enough equipped and with everything we had no use for and a great unreasonable faith, we pulled ourselves out of comfort into 'the gaping unknowable until you run up against it.'

Fancy, crossing a continent without rhyme or reason, with three weeks wasted in Chicago trying on hats or some such foolery and nothing to go by and everyone going by that, and no time to lose and everyone losing it and finally getting to California with a record of only one half hour of rain on the whole trip. Here come my wife! I will have to get back to the beginning.

We were visited by a skunk in Le Roy, N.Y., just the second night out. What a lovely playful kitten he is among the eggs. Mrs. Robb absolutely refused to chase him out, so I had to let them have their way and that little vaudeville midnight act cost half a dozen eggs but we got off cheaply.

Great pains in preparation of sleeping quarters in our hybrid auto (but man! it proved a thoroughbred in disguise) made painless sleeping. That great secret of a trip is the whole trip. One can stand slander and insult and anything short of flies, if sweet sleep is certain at night. All the way, folk inspected our layout and it came in for much praise, I take all the credit myself, except when my wife is present.

At Chicago, we got tin bread boxes to carry grub and piled on more load and set our jaws and took a run at the hurdles. Life is only what one makes it. We had a fine time. To bed at five minutes after six and up at five or five-thirty. I was the cookee. I could lick all comers and victory put me near the food pot. Our kitchen worked like magic but the good soul who shined the pots before I got them, set me a rotten holiday example, for they shone like silver and I had to spend most of my time trying to keep them that way. Rise at five. Light oil stove. Lose bravery and jump back into bed again. Get up later and put on porridge and complain that the others should have been up long ago. Bacon and eggs need no yeast to make the camper rise. I saw many dawns and sunrisings that make me glad of the trip. Gas stoves make camping easy and hot water is always within reach, so we really camped and lived much as one does at home and saw very few cans of food indeed. We were nearly to Los Angeles before I discovered we had not had a can of beans on the trip, so we tried them and they went fast.

Most of the towns have campsites and running water and it is no hardship to travel this way, if the preparations have been carried on with thoughtfulness. It is true, the desert is long and, coming after a very long prairie country, does not particularly fill one with bubbling joy, but it is a trip made with no dangers, no worries, no discomforts and much worth while pleasure.

We met folks on the way at different places, folks we met back on the trip somewhere. We made acquaintances and learned how punk was the place they were fleeing from but no such thought was so in our case. We just listened.

A big tent made to go on the side of our car, served as a mess tent. Sleeping in the auto, I had not far to go to cause heat and get the breakfast started. About every fourth day, we took a day off, just to count noses and have time to read a little and have a bath, a matter so simple that it would make you laugh if you could have seen it but it was a matter of an all closed in tent, in the warm sunshine of mid day and I truthfully may say that it is very pleasant but what it would be like on a dull cold day, I never want to find out.

The scenery was fine and we had little to worry us in the mountain passes. But who is he so bold as to try to describe what we have seen. If the Grand Canyon is mud, it may be grand mud. It will take whatever measure is brought to it, depending upon the looker and how many times he has seen God in His own home town and country.

We got into a desert sandstorm and ate sand in our butter and while the rest of the party grumbled, seeing and feeling nothing but grit, my wife and I held our peace, content to view Nature's bombardment of the hills, literally a sand blasting process, one of the chief forces of erosion, in another attack upon the fortress that defends the little warm strip of coast line in California, from the cold eastern winds.

SUGGESTS REDUCTION OF MEMBER'S PAY

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—Herbert Marler, Liberal member for St. Lawrence-St. George, Montreal, suggested in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon that the House should give the lead in reducing expenditures by consenting to a reduction in sessional indemnities.

"To what extent would you suggest our indemnities be reduced?" questioned Miss Agnes McPhail.

Mr. Marler: "I would reduce them to the pre-war basis."

Mr. Marler explained that more than $1,00,00 would be saved if the indemnities of the Senate and the House were reduced to the prewar figure.

Letters To The Editor

ASSESSMENT OF CONGREGATIONS

To the Editor:
Sir:

Much is being made by anti-Unionists of the clause in the Basis of Union referring to the Benevolent Funds,—"the collecting of contributions, which shall be obligatory on all local churches based upon the equitable allocation or assessment under the rules to be formulated by the General Council, etc., etc." Surely the anti-Unionists have forgotten the report presented concerning the Benevolent Funds of the General Assembly of 1923, (see Appendix, page 243) in which the following was proposed as one of the sources of revenue:

"An assessment to be made upon every congregation to be based upon the stipend paid by the congregation such assessment together with the stipend, to be a first charge upon the revenue of the congregation."

It is very interesting to note that the names attached to the report containing this recommendation are those of Thomas McMillan, Secretary, and Rev. D. T. L. McKerroll, Chairman, both of whom are leading anti-Unionists, and members of the Presbyterian Church Association. The motion by which the Assembly adopted the report was made by Rev. Dr. D. R. Drummond of Hamilton and seconded by Rev. A. L. Burch, who are also outstanding opponents of Church Union.

DO NOT INTEND TO BUY KAISER A HORSE

Berlin, Feb. 13.—"Tell North America we have not the slightest intention of buying a white charger for Kaiser Wilhelm II. and letting him ride through the Brandenburg gates in the near future," declared Baron Von Lindeiner, head of the Prussian Monarchist organizations, in an exclusive interview yesterday.

He was replying to reports of renewed royalist activity for the restoration of the imperial dynasty. He explained neither the former Crown Prince nor his wife is seeking to resurrect a monarchical regime. As head of the Hermannbund, an allegedly reactionary society to which the Crown Princess gave her patronage, the Baron said her interest lay entirely in its humanitarian philanthropic work.

GUNMEN HALT TRUCK; DRIVE LOAD AWAY

Detroit, Feb. 13.—After kidnaping the driver and two messengers, four gunmen Thursday drove off with an American Express Company's motor truck carrying merchandise worth between $10,000 and $15,000. The exact amount of merchandise which was consigned will not be known until a check has been made of the load. When the stolen truck was found by the police, employes of the company ascertained that 123 packages that left the express office were missing.

The truck was on its way to Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railway Junction, outside the city when four thugs in an automobile commanded the driver to halt at Baker and Seventeenth streets.

CORBY LIBRARY GREAT MECCA FOR READERS

Over Fifty-five Thousands Adult Fiction Loaned Alone

MANY NEW BOOKS

Sum of $2,351.85 Spent During the Past Year

During the year 1924 there were 55,646 books of fiction taken from the public Library in circulation among adults. This number may seem surprisingly large, but it is vouched for by the annual report of our Local Library. In comparison with the amount of fiction read; the 8,207 books of non-fiction looks proportionally small. This would seem to bear out the criticism heard from time to time, especially from professors and learned men who address the literary clubs in the city, that most of the reading done now is very light.

The children take an active interest in books. There were no less than 13,122 works in circulation among the younger people last year.

In 1923 the Library contained 13,586 books and last year 1540 were added. Of these 850 were withdrawn so that there is the commendable number of 14,376 books at present on the shelves of the library.

Besides the books, there are 54 magazines and newspapers provided in the reading rooms for the 6,003 borrowers from the library, and many others as well who make use of these rooms.

Considerable Expense

This large number of books entails considerable expense, and last year the amount spent on magazines and books totalled $2351.33. Of this amount $1,209.99 was received from the interest on the endowment from the late Senator Corby, which was left for the purchase of books only. The largest expenditure was an adult fiction amounting to $887.28, while on non-fiction was $713.98. For juvenile fiction and non-fiction $404.54 and $67.82 was spent respectively, and magazines and papers make up the total with $217.73.

Mrs. Lillian Walker is the capable chief Librarian, assisted by Miss Clara C. Yeoman's.

Every Saturday morning Miss Jessie Tuite conducts a "Story Hour" at the Library for the little people.

This Year's Board

The board for this year is composed of Mayor Mikel (ex-officio), and S. H. Lazier, H. F. Ketcheson, F. D. Diamond, appointed by the City Council; C. N. Sulman, A. C. Wilkin, H. J. Clarke, appointed by the Board of Education; E. O'Leary, F. P. Carney, appointed by the Separate School board.

Mr. F. P. Carney was elected chairman, and Mr. H. J. Clarke, B. A. was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

The Public are requested to suggest to the Book Committee, through the Librarian, any book that they consider should be in the library, and if it is possible, it will be secured, if considered suitable for a public library.

CONTRIBUTE COPPERS ACCORDING TO AGE

On Friday evening last a pleasing function took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes, Front of Sidney, it being in the nature of a birthday party under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Wesley Methodist Church.

There was a large attendance and an evening of rare enjoyment was participated in by all present. The home was tastefully decorated with Valentines and Mr. and Mrs. Denyes proved to be ideal hosts. A large birthday cake had been provided and candles upon it represented birthdays of some of those in attendance. These birthdays were in four months of last year. Those whose birthdays occurred in the months designated were asked to contribute one cent for each year of their age. Mr. Philip Denyes contributed 82 cents that being his age and also had the honor of igniting the large candle placed in the centre of the cake. The smaller candles were ignited by others commemorating their birth anniversary. During the evening an interesting program was carried out after which refreshments were served.

DOMESTIC PUPILS SHOW THEIR SKILL

At the Prince of Wales school on the evening of Valentine Day, the Domestic Science teacher with her capable pupils entertained at a Valentine tea, the members of the school board with their wives and the teaching staff.

The occasion was a splendid tribute to the ability of the teacher, Miss Irene Young and a testimony to her skill. This Department in the school work inaugurated only three months ago has been making wonderful strides. The scholars displaying great enthusiasm and the department seems destined to be equal with that of any city school. The Prince of Wales School has been pronounced by a representative of the Department as the best rural school in Ontario. It is situated at College Hill, Thurlow.

With a vote of 12 to 8, the congregation of New St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Dover township, decided against church union. There were 33 names on the voters' list. Rev. D. James McCrea is pastor of the church.

Pastor Took A Monkey Into His Pulpit And Issued Challenge To Congregation

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 16.—A monkey tethered a few feet from the pulpit as an exhibit against the evolution theory, cast quizzical glances over an overflowing congregation in Park Avenue Baptist church here last night, while Rev. Dr. Floyd Holland preached a sermon on "Man or Monkey."

The climax for the congregation, and the monkey, came when he was held aloft in the pulpit a stern finger thrust toward him, and the pastor challenged anybody in the church to stand up and concede common ancestry with the simian.

Nobody stood up.

The minister explained that his theme and a live exhibit from the zoo was prompted by the introduction of a bill in the North Carolina legislature to prohibit the teaching of the evolution theory in state supported schools.

Conservatives at Bancroft Organize

A. Ely is Chosen President; Vote Confidence in Leaders

At a largely attended meeting, a fair percentage of ladies, the Bancroft Liberal-Conservative Association met in the Council Chamber of the Community Hall for re-organization purposes and election of officers in connection with newly formed riding of Hastings-Peterborough for Federal purposes on Friday night last.

Mr. D. Fuller, President, assumed the chair and after a short discourse on the need of organization, the minutes of a former meeting were read and adopted.

After some seventy-five members had enrolled, the election of officers was proceeded with resulting as follows:

Hon. Presidents—Hon. Robert Cooke, M.L.A.; T. H. Thompson, M.P.; E. Guss Porter, D. Fuller and Dr. A. T. Embury.

Pres.—I. A. Eby.

1st Vice-Pres.—W. E. Wiggins.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. F. A. Towle,

Sec.Treas.—H. M. Price.

Executive Com.—The President, Vice-Presidents, Rev. N. R. Stout, Rev. Wm. Hall, Ed. Maxwell and Ed. Dowd.

A resolution of confidence in the present Leaders of the Conservative Party, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. Howard Ferguson, was unanimously carried and copy of resolution forwarded both leaders.

The ladies purpose meeting for organization in about a week's time.

A committee room in a central location will be fitted up immediately, where both organizations will meet regularly to discuss the political issues of the day.

"On to Ottawa" will be the slogan of the Bancroft Liberal-Conservative Association.

The assembly expressed their appreciation of the past services of the retiring President, Mr. D. Fuller, by three cheers.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save The King."

Quacks And Quackery is Subject Of Talk

Dr. Austin of Queen's Speaker at Rotary Club To-day

Dr. J. L. Austin of Queen's University talked to the Rotary Club on "Quacks and Quackery" at noon today. The patent medicine industry was not too gently handled. Dr. Austin classifying their products generally as drugs which have no particular effect and drugs which are a menace to the public.

Advertised cures for cancers, for venereal diseases and concoctions containing cocaine and alcohol in large quantities the doctor thought should be banned altogether and their producers brought under the penal laws.

Some remedies advertised for specific complaints were often valuable, the speaker said.

Dr. Austin traced some of the history of medicine from the days of the early Egyptians.

THIS IS LAST WEEK FOR AUTO LICENSE

Already a number of autos seen in the streets bear the new 1925 license plates, though the weather beaten 1924 plates are still in the majority.

This will be the last week for the 1924 license plates in Belleville streets however according to a statement given out by the city police department here this afternoon. Commencing next Monday, then it will be a case of "watch your step", for the person driving a car bearing the old plates, for the car owner will be liable.

In Toronto, cars which do not bear the new plates will be liable after today, but that does not govern this city where car owners will be given the balance of the week as well as this warning.

This of course applies to trucks, motorcycles and all motor vehicles.

SERGE TKATCH TO COME UP MARCH 10

Mild Sickness Here Keeps Nurse Busy

Miss Shand Reports Increased Interest in Her Work

A mild type of influenza has been prevalent in Belleville during the winter months, according to the January report of the Victorian Order Nurse, Miss L. Shand. Otherwise the work has been much the same. Miss Shand says:—

"So far most of the visits are to the Metropolitan policy holders altho, the other citizens are by degrees getting used to the nursing service. Again I think it well to mention here that the nursing service is for the benefit of all—the poor getting first attention, but that certainly doesn't exclude those in more fortunate circumstances. Any questions about the work or the nursing service will be gladly answered by me by phoning 195w or 1360j.

"This month 181 visits were made, an increase of 40 over last month, 132 of these were Metropolitan visits, 25 educational visits were made including infant welfare, pre-natal, post-natal and others. The fees amounted to $88.06."

Neighbour's Fight Ends In Tragedy

Toronto Man Locked up Facing Charge of Murder

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Ernest Charles Owens aged 44, of 395 Westmoreland Avenue, is dead, and Frank Stagg, aged 42, of 397 Westmoreland Avenue, is locked up in Ossington Avenue Police Station on a charge of murder, as the result of a fight between the two men in the backyard of Stagg's home yesterday afternoon. Stagg was taken into custody by Detective Todd after an investigation of the case was made. Owen's body was removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be held by Coroner Crawford. Apparently Owen died of injuries sustained when he was kicked in the stomach by Stagg. Stagg, the police say, admits the kicking, but pleads in extenuation that Owen was the aggressor.

The immediate cause of the fatal quarrell between the two men, who had been neighbors for about fifteen years, is stated to have been that Stagg complained to the police that Owen had caused a disturbance Sunday afternoon by loud hammering. A policeman investigated, but apparently found no ground for complaint. Information given Coroner Dr. Crawford was that Owen had spent a short time repairing rubber heels on the shoes of one of his little girls. After the policeman had gone, Owen went to Stagg's back door to protest, and the fight began and was continued through the side alleyway to the street. Stagg is said to have admitted that, besides kicking Owen, he had shouted to his 12-year-old son to do so, and the boy had complied.

Died Before Doctor Arrived

While he refused to say much about the fight when questioned by the police Stagg admitted that there had been bad blood between him and Owen for the past two years, and that they had not spoken to each other for that period. About four o'clock on Sunday afternoon, Stagg said that Owen entered his backyard where he was standing and make some remarks which started a quarrel. Hot words led to a fight, in which Owen received the kick. At the time he did not seem to be seriously hurt, for he walked around for a while, then partook of supper. About eight o'clock, however, he was seized with violent pains in the abdomen. Dr. Hardy, of Dunvegan Road, was called, but before he arrived Owen was dead. Ossington Avenue police were notified and Detective Todd was detailed to make an investigation.

The tragedy has caused a sensation in the neighborhood in which the two families reside. Both men were married, Stagg having six children and Owen five. Stagg is employed by the C. P. R. as a checker. Owen was employed in the factory of the Gutta Percha Rubber Company.

OTTAWA CHURCHES CELEBRATED UNION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—Large congregations, striking addresses and a fitting ceremonial marked the inaugural and dedication services of the First United church of Ottawa which were held yesterday at the former First Congregational Church, where congregations of former Westminster Presbyterian church and First Congregational church united. The occasion marked the union of congregations as one under the basis of the United Church of Canada.

Something Pupils May Worry About

June Examinations Start on Monday, June 22 this Year

The June High School examinations this year will commence on Monday, June 22nd, and continue until the 7th of July. For local scholars, however, the exams will finish on the 3rd of July, as the 6th and 7th are taken with Greek and Spanish Authors and Composition.

This is according to the 1925 timetable issued by the Ontario Department of Education.

The Entrance exams commence on Wednesday the 24th of June, with Grammar and Writing in the morning, and Geography in the afternoon, Arithmetic and Literature are on Thursday; and Composition, Spelling and History on Friday the 26th.

Lower School exams start on Tuesday the 23rd with Canadian History, English Grammar and Latin Grammar.

The Middle and Upper Schools begin on the 22nd with Chemistry and Composition.

This gives eighteen weeks from today in which to prepare for the first of those trials. That is something to worry about!

Most Are Prompt In Paying Up Tax

City Assessor Asks Delinquents to Hurry It Along

City Income Tax forms are being returned in numbers which are very satisfactory, so the Intelligencer was informed this afternoon by City Assessor T. E. Ketcheson.

Of course there are a number of those who received forms who have not yet made returns but Mr. Ketcheson feels assured they will come along.

"Is this the last day during which returns may be made?" he was asked.

"Well, it is the last day according to the date which I printed on the face of the forms sent out," the City Assessor answered.

"Will you give delinquents a few days grace?" further queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes, we will give people a chance for a few days."

Mr. Ketcheson is desirious of receiving the forms as early as possible, however, and delinquents should not take advantage of his fair attitude.

GROCER IS VICTIM OF ARMED THUGS

Toronto, Feb. 16—Brampton citizens were treated to a thrill on Saturday night, when two desperadoes, believed to be Toronto men, invaded the town in a stolen motor car, and, after holding up William Dawson, who has a grocery and fruit business on the west side of Main Street, and binding and gagging him, rifled Dawson's pockets and the cash register of the day's business takings, amounting to $100. The motor car, which is the property of M. F. Spencer, 74 Glenholme Avenue, and which was stolen from outside the John Northway store, Yonge and Louisa Streets, on Saturday evening was recovered in Orchard Grove Park, near Port Credit, later its hood riddled with small shot and its metal rear dented by four bullet marks. Whether or not either of the men who participated in the robbery was wounded is not yet known. The last seen of them was when they were heading in the direction of Lakeview afoot. No arrests have yet been made.

Last night's fall of snow was greatly welcomed by Brant farmers, who declare it was just what was needed to protect the Winter wheat, which was beginning to show through. The Fall wheat this year is looking exceptionally well in that district.

Mr. Wm. Gilbert Jr., returned from Detroit, Mich., Sunday morning.

HEADWAY SLOW DOWN LATERAL AT CAVE CITY

Have Reached the Roof of Cavern Where Collins Lies

DANGEROUS WORK

Falls Become Hazard as Sand Strata is Reached

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cave City, Kentucky, Feb. 16.—Progress was slow on the sloping lateral at the base of the sand cave rescue tunnel early today. Every bit of rock and dirt had to be passed back from hand to hand into the main shaft and great care was exercised to prevent a serious cave in of soft wet clay. Slow but steady progress was reported early today by miners coming from the shaft.

The worst of excavation work incident to the rescue of Collins from his sand cave prison is behind, it was learned from good authority today.

Progress made during the night revealed that the lateral from the main shaft has wound around and appeared beyond the dangerous rock strata which caused numerous slides and has reached the roof of the avenue in which the entombed man is believed to lie.

Sand, instead of limestone and heavy rock, was encountered after midnight and work progressed with increased speed. The tunnel was pushed nearly six feet farther after midnight.

Collins is believed to be held a captive at a depth of sixty-eight feet. The lateral which is now some fifteen feet long has reached the sixty foot level. It is planned to tap the cave through the roof and extend the lateral into the natural passage way. This avenue may be filled with rock and debris but will present no excavation problems, it is believed.

H. T. Carmichael, director of the rescue work is more optimistic today than during the night when several falls of a minor character occurred in the lateral. One of those falls hit him on the head as he was directing work. The fall, however, contained no rock and Carmichael was not injured.

"The sun will not rise on me at Sand Cave Wednesday morning," Carmichael predicted this morning.

"No natural crevice or cavern has been found," Dr. W. D. Funkhouser said.

"My first estimate of the time Floyd Collins will be reached, which was Tuesday night, still stands," he said.

VIOLENT GALES AND RAIN HIT OLD WORLD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 16— Southwestern Europe is suffering from a period of unusually bad weather. Rain is alternating with snow. The Seine has risen four feet, causing dwellers along the river bank to fear a repitition of the flood of two months ago.

SWISS ARE AFFECTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berne, Switzerland, Feb. 16—Violent gales are raging in the greater part of Switzerland and in many places are accompanied by a deluge of rain. The St. Gothard Railway Line has been blocked near Airolo by an avalanche.

WELCOME IN MOROCCO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Tangier, Feb. 16—The greater part of Morocco was visited yesterday by Torrential rain. The downpour was welcomed by the population, as it may save the harvest endangered by the drought of the last two months.

WITHDRAWS DANCING IN NEW YORK CHURCH

New York, Feb. 16.—The withdrawal of dancing as a part of the expressionistic religious program of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie was announced at yesterday's vesper services of the church by Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector.

"Consideration for our fellow-churchmen who cannot see their way to trust us with this great and holy instrument of religious evocation," was given by Dr. Guthrie as the principal reason for eliminating the ceremonies.

The introduction of "Pagan rites" and expressionistic dances into the services of St. Mark's caused an open break between the rector and Bishop William T. Manning, of the Episcopal diocese about a year ago.

A service combining the ritual of Anglicans, Occidental Catholics and Western Satholics was held in the morning at St. Mark's. Dr. Guthrie introduced it as the first combination of the kind in church history.

IMPORTANT ITEMS AT COUNCIL TO-NIGHT

At a regular meeting of the City Council to be held this evening there are several matters of importance to be considered. A by-law will be passed appointing Mr, Robert Gowdy as a member of the Council in the place of ex-Ald. A. E. La Roche who resigned to become a member of the suburban area commission. The proposition of Mr. Frederick Rowan of St. Catharines to operat a bus line in the eastern part of the city will be considered.

BEATRICE LILLE

Who became Lady Peel as the result of the death Friday of her father in-law, Sir Robert Peel, of Tamworth Staffordshire. Lady Peel is a former Belleville girl, and her company will be in the city shortly in a musical revue. Her husband, the new baronet, is at present in Australia, where he is managing a revue.

Dr. Gorden Is To Preach For Week

Coming to Bridge Street Church; Splendid Organ Recital

Bridge St. Church was crowded last night, when about a thousand people congregated there to worship, and to hear the organ recital which was given after the service by Mr. Leo. B. Riggs.

Dr. Malott preached a splendid sermon from the words "with the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful; with an upright man thou wilt show thyself upright; with the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward." The sermon was received with great interest by the large congregation.

The music by the choir was of a high quality, the solo by Mrs. Dr. Stobie being particularly well-rendered.

At the close of the service the whole audience remained while Mr. Rigg's gave an organ recital. Mr. Riggs' ability as an organist was easily recognized by all as he rendered his splendid program on the magnificent organ. This included "Tannhauser Overture" by Wagner; Martini's "Allegretto;" "Arabesque" by Debussy; "Kamenoi" and "Ostrou" by Rubinstein; and Widor's "Toccata" from 5th Symphony.

The deepest silence existed, throughout the church, and when Dr. Malott rose to dismiss the audience, he stated that the whole service, including the recital was one continuous worship.

After the recital the Quarterly official Board of the church met to make arrangements for a week's special services of Dr. Gordon to commence on the 8th of March. Noon services are to be held in the church at 12.15 for three quarters of an hour. The evening services will be held at 8 o'clock in the church. A committee was appointed to organize cottage prayer meetings for the week preceding the services, and the matter was left in the hands of the District visitors of the church.

Everyone present gave a personal pledge to stand by these services with prayer and regular attendance. The matter was referred to the Stewards' Board with power to act.

Dr. Gordon who is now in Cooke's Church, Toronto, is one of the great Bible teachers of the present day, and is only in four places in Canada for this season, of which Belleville is one. The services will be community services and the Ministerial Association are considering taking up the matter to-day.

Temperance Forces Are Unfavorable

Say They Will Oppose the "Stronger Beer" Proposal

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Armed with instructions from local gatherings from temperance forces, in various parts of Ontario, to oppose by all available means the passage of "stronger beer" amendment, proposed by the Ontario Government to Ontario Temperance Act, delegates are already gathering here for the opening of the Ontario prohibition union convention in this city. It is expected that the Union will on Tuesday or Wednesday storm the Ontario Legislature with practically a unanimous resolution against the passage of amendment.

GOVERNMENT ISN'T CONSIDERING FLEET

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—The Government is not considering an offer for the vessels of the Canadian Government Merchant Marine. This was stated positively by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals Saturday morning.

Mr. Graham was referred to cabled reports of an offer for the Government ships. He said that the Government had received a number of offers for the merchant marine in the past two ears, none of which had even been considered. No offer was under consideration at present.

"DRY OF DRYS" HAS CONFIDENCE IN GOVERNMENT

C. R. McKeown, Dufferin, is to Support Conservative Amendment

SEE FEW BOLTERS

Members Interview C.N.R. Officials for Lower Freight Rates

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Few members of the legislature had returned to the Buildings to-day so that there is no fresh report from the ridings as to the reception being given the stronger beer proposal. However, it is still felt that the House will carry the proposal in the Speech from the Throne and also the bill when it is presented.

There will be few, if any, bolters from the Conservatives and several from the Liberal Opposition and Labor will support the Government.

The attitude of prohibitionist Conservatives will likely be that of C. R. McKeown, Dufferin, "dry of drys", and former whip of the party in the legislature, who told his constituents over the week-end that he proposed to give the legislation a fair trial, as the government deemed it in the interests of temperance, and that he had confidence in the government.

Helping the Farmers

Dr. Jamieson and Messrs. W. D. Black and T. A. Thompson, members of the special agricultural committee of the Ontario legislature, leave for Montreal to-morrow to interview officials of the Canadian National Railways. They will request a lower freight rate on lime fertilizer for farms. The committee considers that farmers would be helped considerably by lower freight on fertilizers.

Preston's "Talk" is Sign of Uneasiness

So Says Special Article in London Morning Post

London, Feb. 16.—"While the passionate outpourings of Mr. W. T. R. Preston, the Canadian Government's Commissioner, have excited no answering roars from the North Atlantic Shipping Conference or its component companies, they have inspired a grave uneasiness of mind in the public," says the Morning Post in a special article.

"There are two things of which every British subject is conspicuously—and we have always believed justly—proud. One is the skill and discernment with which our Mercantile supremacy is maintained, and the other is the enlightened intelligence with which our overseas Dominions conduct their affairs. If there is any truth in Mr. Preston's charge that the conference is grossly discriminating against Empire trade and in favor of foreign trade and is actively engaged in hamstringing not only Canadian immigration, then we must revise all previous estimates and attribute the universal ubiquity of the red ensign not to the brains and integrity of our ship-owners, but to the beneficent activities of some wandering star or dear little cherub that sits up aloft looking after poor Jack. On the other hand, if it is true, as the Montreal Gazette says, that Mr. Preston has presented a political tract and not a commercial statement, worthy of consideration, than we must fall to the lamentable conclusion that the affairs of the Dominion are not being conducted with the rigorous and high-minded efficiency that we had supposed, and that Mr. Mackenzie King, whose spiritual home it has more than once been hinted, is the bosom of Mr. William Randolph Hearst, and not any far-flung tabernacle of British Imperialism, and Mr. Preston are engaged together in a piece of political hocus pocus that the Americans, who preserve an apt vocabulary for these things, would describe as raw.

COMING EVENTS

A special meeting in commemoration of Frances Willard the founder of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday, Feb. 17th, at 3 p.m. An interesting program has been arranged. Afternoon tea will be served. All ladies cordially invited. Silver collection. 13 & 16

TRIBUTE TO DR. BAKER

"The Canadian", the bright newspaper edited and printed by the staff and pupils at the Ontario School for the Deaf, publishes an interesting story about the new Albert College of Belleville this week. After describing the structure, the following tribute is paid to Dr. E. N. Baker, principal:

"We cannot close this brief sketch without paying a tribute of highest esteem and admiration to Dr. Baker, the genial, lovable, whole-souled Principal of the College, and the friend of man; who, with an optimism that nothing can discourage, and a zeal that nothing can repress, at an age when most men think of retiring from active life, has taken on himself this herculean task and shouldered this vast responsibility. We trust, yes, we doubt not, if his health and strength will permit, that he will accomplish that to which he has set his hand, and leave behind him, as his splendid and enduring monument, a new and a greater Albert, which will be one of the largest and one of the most influential and popular secondary colleges in our great Dominion.

THE WAR BUTTON

Many persons are prone to forget that there ever was a war, and that men by the thousand went, some to remain in Flanders Fields; others to return. Every officer and man who saw service in France or on another front is entitled to wear the war service badge. Everyone did but now most of them have been relegated elsewhere. A soldier writes: "There is one man in Montreal who is not ashamed to wear the insignia of service, and he does so upon all occasions. I do not remember seeing an overseas button with evening dress until Thursday night when Major R. L. Calder, K.C., who among other notable positions occupies that of honorary president of the Chambly Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, sat at the head table with his service badge proudly displayed. I say it is a splendid idea to exhibit that symbol of sacrifice, devotion to King and Country, and service anywhere and everywhere."

BEING A HERO

To the many rules already advanced and expounded by those who quake in their shoes at thought of the divorce evil there has been added another rule for making matrimony a permanent and happy success. The author is a Brooklyn clergyman. The rule is "Be a hero to your wife."

There are many species and varieties of heroes and many angles of approach to heroism. Will a man be a hero in the eyes of his spouse if he "joins the army" or ventures to "see the world in the navy?" He will not! Can he pull the hero stunt by talking back to a traffic cop, looking for burglars in the dark and without a gun, surrendering his trolley seat to a pretty flapper or asking the boss for a salary raise? No, none of these acts of gallant audacity apply to the new form of matrimonial heroism.

The marital hero must not be or do one thing. He must approach perfection in the sense that his wife may dictate and he must do and not do a multitude of things. To hold his wife and perpetuate his home by virtue of heroism the husband must be an ample provider, must never complain, should be metriculous about the house, must never depreciate and always laud his wife in the presence of others and should be overflowing with perfect understanding when she requests him to bring home "one of those thingamajigs from [illegible] store."

The reverend gentleman from Brooklyn is at least half right. Strict observance by husbands of his rules and regulations for husbands should make the most unreasonable wife content with her mate, but might not a host of wives cease to be heroines in the eyes of their husbands?

The Beer Amendment

(From the Hamilton Spectator)

The Ontario government's proposal to amend the O.T.A. so as to permit the sale of beer of approximately double the alcoholic strength at present allowed, has caused a lot of criticism and not a little abuse of Premier Ferguson. While the Spectator deplores the course adopted by the government we regard the violent denunciations indulged in by some of the more extreme among the "temperance" forces as equally deplorable. These personal attacks are surely the very reverse of temperate. The tribute paid Premier Ferguson by the Prohibitionist leader, Dr. Albert Moore, stands out in pleasing relief. "I have learned to love the prime minister," said Dr. Moore, addressing a meeting of a Toronto Prohibition association the day following the announcement of the amendment in the speech from the throne. "I wanted to say tonight that we must all stand by him, and I will still say it. I have confidence in the prime minister, and I am sure that if he can be brought to hear the voice of the people, he will see that no such amendment is passed." It would be well if others would take this eminently fair and reasonable attitude. It is necessary, in momentous public questions of this kind to maintain a dispassionate and judicial attitude, and we think that all who do so will acknowledge that the premier, personally and aside altogether from the mistaken attitude of a large section of his followers, has endeavored in all his dealings with this vexed question to act in accordance with what he considers to be the real mind and will of the people. Before and following the plebiscite he declared the government's intention to give full effect to the wishes of the majority as expressed at the polls. In fulfillment of that pledge the enforcement of the act has been strengthened in many ways and a sincere attempt has been made to keep the province dry, in conformity with the popular verdict. The premier maintains the suggested amendment does not conflict with that policy. The stronger beer, as defined in the amendment, he asserts, is non-intoxicating. "If we find it is not a temperance drink," he says, "we will put it out of business." Its sale, it is promised, will be hedged around with regulatons to prevent the possibility of abuse by minors and others.

We repeat that we consider it most unfortunate that the government has seen fit to tamper with the act. We do not believe that the proposed measure will improve conditions in this province, nor simplify the administration of the act, as the premier hopes. There is no reason to suppose that the open sale of this beer will lessen the activities of the bootleggers. Such sale in our opinion, would be an aggravation, rather than a mitigation of the difficulties involved in the solution of the liquor problems of Ontario. But we do not accuse the government of dishonest intentions. Premier Ferguson has proved himself to be fearlessly independent in his dealings with this vexatious question. Flinging all consideration of political expiedency to the winds, he chose the path of principle and duty when friend and foe alike were menacing. Had he been the time-serving politician he is accused by detractors of being, he would have acted very differently from the way he has.

Thirty Years Ago

The police have many curious objects in their little museum but the latest addition is an upper set of false teeth. The plate was picked up on the street and an owner is wanted.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Owen and Miss Zufelt of Belleville, were the guests of Mrs. L. Zufelt of Chesterville last week.

Mr. Parent of the Grand Central Hotel Trenton, and proprietor of the skating rink there, put up a fine gold and silver medal for competition last evening. The race for the medal was one mile and there were five entries. Wm. Hammell of Belleville, won with ease. He is exhibiting his trophy today and is justly proud of it, for it is a beauty. A large crowd was present to witness the race. There was a very successful carnival held also.

PRINCE AWAITS TURN IN HIS BARBER SHOP

London, Feb. 16.—The most popular beauty shop in London just now among fashionable young women who have their bobbed hair trimmed every week or so is a Curzon Street establishment patronized by the Prince of Wales, Lord Lascelles, son-in-law of the king, and all the younger members of the royal family.

While the king himself is attended by the royal barber at Buckingham Palace, or at Sandingham and Balmoral or wherever he goes, it has long been customary for the Prince of Wales and his brothers to patronize one of the town shops to which place they go when their hair needs trimming and await their turn of "next" the same as all the other patrons.

Press Opinions

IT PAYS TO KEEP TRYING

(New York Times)

That it pays to keep after inactive charge accounts, no matter how long they have been dormant, is shown by an experience cited by the credit manager of a prominent local department store. The manager in question kept pegging away on his inactive accounts, among them that of a man who had bought nothing in the store for two years. After he had received several letters asking "why he had ceased buying," he replied that he had bought a suit there and had not been satisfied with it. Being of the type who would rather patronize some other store than complain, he just stopped buying. His letter "started something," however, the end of which was a full refund on the suit, despite the fact that he had bought it two years before. This made such an impression on him that he not only re-opened his account, but has since brought three friends in personally and sent in a fourth, all of whom became charge customers.

BUSINESS SAFETY VALVE

(St. Catharines Standard)

It is pointed out by the National City Bank of New York that with a boom in the stock market and widespread indications of another era of prosperity, the cost of living is rising very little.

Why? For the simple reason that "consumers of goods are resisting higher prices." And is this having a bad effect on the situation? Quite the contrary, according to the bank's economists. Such a public attitude is "correcting the dangerous boom psychology."

This disinclination to pay boom prices again for commodities is the business safety valve. The public, while eager for prosperity, does not want another "war boom" and is no longer fooled by a combination of high incomes with still higher costs of living. It wants honest prosperity, on a basis sound enough to insure its continuance, rather than spectacular ups and downs. And it can get what it wants by level-headed buying.

"WE WERE GLAD TO SERVE"

(San Francisco Bulletin)

"My big black dog, Balto, must get all the credit for my part of the journey. . . . The other drivers . . . had the harder mush. For them I know I can say as for myself—we were glad to serve."

Manly talk this, from Gunnar Kassen, Finnish dog driver, who bore the brunt of the final stretch in the train of heroic achievement that carried the relief to Nome! How everlastingly true it is that modesty goes along with courage! And how curiously true it is that service in its finest flower is more commonly found in men of plain breeding than in men of pretentious culture!

Socrates was a stone cutter. Jesus was a carpenter.

BRITAIN IN INDIA

(Washington Post)

There has been no greater service rendered by man to man since the invention of the alphabet than the heroic attempt on the part of the British Government to make India a healthier land. Every conceivable difficulty has confronted it there in plague, drought, flood, famine, ignorance and superstition, embracing a population of 319,000,000. Into this age-old country which would change not, England has poured billions of dollars for drainage, sanitation, medical attention and education—a worthy record of a great empire.

CRIME IN FASHION

(Kansas City Star)

There is, without doubt, a mental attitude toward crime and wrongdoing to-day that perhaps never existed before, certainly not in America. Morality and right action have lost much of their power as ideals, either for the youth or older person.

Looseness of conduct is considered the smart thing, the sound teaching of a former day is derided as old-fashioned, freedom has become license and lawlessness often is paraded as heroic. Crime, in fact, has become so common that it threatens to be respectable.

To-day's Smile

Pat and Mike occupied the same room in the same lodgings.

Pat came in one night very drunk and made such a noise that Mike couldn't get peace to read his paper.

"Look here," says Mike, "if you keep quiet, Pat, I'll give you a glass of whiskey."

Pat sat for 20 minutes and never said a word. Then he shouted:

"Mike, you promised me a glass of whiskey if I would keep quiet."

"Sure and I did, Pat, and the longer you're quiet, the sooner you'll get it."

Two Kinds Of Humor

MOST humor is the surprise of the unexpected.

It is like going down a strange stairway in the dark.

One kind of humor lies in thinking that there is another step when there isn't, the other kind is the shock that comes from thinking there is no other step when there is.

The former hurts, the latter simply surprises.

So there is one kind of humor that hurts, that has a sting to it, the other kind is that which simply amuses.

An old saying is "It requires a certain amount of genius to shine in wit that is as kindly as it is brilliant."

Wit has also been called the Art of Getting Oneself Disliked.

In the one case we laugh at a person, and in the other we laugh with him. In the one case there is co-operation, and in the other case we make him ridiculous.

There is a dearth of the kind of humor that is kindly and genial, and there is entirely too much of the kind of humor that leaves bitterness in its trail.

The man that is expert in the latter kind of humor finds his friends growing fewer and fewer as he lives on, the other kind of man finds his friends growing more and more.

A good example of the kind of humor that is genial and kindly is that of Mark Twain. He always succeeded in making you laugh with him. The other kind of humor is exemplified in that of Bernard Shaw. You feel that he is laughing at you.

If a man cares for the favor of his fellows, he should refrain from that sort of wit which has a sting to it, and should devote his attention to that kind of humor which contains genial good fellowship.

Sometimes when a man reaches the end of the staircase, or thinks he has reached it—that is, when he thinks he has come to the bottom and he has not—his step-off may result in a fatal accident. It may do him harm and not good. So there is a kind of humor whose tendency is to injure and hurt us. There are some people, for instance, who are gifted in saying sharp but unpleasant things about their neighbors. This is a fatal gift, and one to be restrained. For what we say of people who are absent invariably gets back to them. If we get into the habit of saying only kindly things, and things that will bear repeating—favorable remarks—of even those who are not present these will return to us a pleasant usufruct. The ability to say sharp things and cutting things should be restrained, if we care anything for the good opinion of our fellows, and if we have any tendency toward humor it should be exercised in a way that will amuse but not injure those whom we ridicule.

Although, ridicule is a dangerous weapon, and the ability to say sharp things should be most carefully restrained.

OPPORTUNITY BECKONS

If it is true, as reported, that a horticulturist has perfected a squirtless grapefruit, the morals of the community may yet be saved. If this genius will now engage his talents in taming a fountain pen to the docility of his new grapefruit we shall erect a huge monument to his fame and then forget all about him while he starves to death.

A London Letter

London, Feb. 16.—Canadian Press—Princess Mary's quiet Yorkshire home at Goldsborough is a veritable God-send to other of the Rayol Family who want to escape from publicity for a few days. It is more difficult to gain admittance to the grounds of the hall than anywhere else in England, and the servants are exemplary models of stony reticence.

Prince George,—whose little dinners and dances with Miss Poppy Baring recently led him into those chatty columns of the newspapers,—has been down to Goldsborough for a while, to let the rumours die down; so has Prince Henry, but not a soul has known about it. The only one who is conspicuously absent from the Lascelles menage is Wales himself.

Master George Hubert Lascelles is two this month, and his mother is giving him a Shetland Pony for his birthday present. It seems a reckless present for such a youthful rider, but his mother was riding when she was three.

Margot Asquith, Countess of Oxford; that I suppose, is what people will call her, but title or no title she will still be just Mrs. Asquith. At any rate she will still write as Margot Asquith.

It is no secret that pecuniary difficulties have been a factor in her husband's long refusal of an Earldom, the Asquiths are no rich,—not even comfortably off as things are now—but there are rumors of another book from Margot's before long. She is about the only women in London who never wears jewels, but she is quite striking enough to dispence with them.

The serious music world of London has been badly jazzed up the last week or two. Following the two recent excursions of the Savot Dance Orchestras from the Savot Ballroom into Queens Hall. London Temple of classic music (an event that puzzled the critice quite a lot), there comes another surprise.

The sedate Philharmonic Orchestra has played a new composition by Arthur Monegger, the French modernist, called "Pacific 231" which is dedicated to a Canadian locomotive. It is a peace striking piece of modernism, strenuous and exciting. It is supposed to make you feel you are being hurled through the night at 70 miles an hour, in an express train.

Already legends have gathered round the piece. Whilst the poor Philharmonic was rehearsing it a man as said to have exclaimed "Tickets Please"; and a women in the audience after the first performance said "I feel as if my eyes were full of cinders."

Ex-Kaiser on a Jewellery Expedition

Here is a bit of news from Holland. The Ex-Kaiser and his wife have been recently to inspect the German Crown Jewels which remain intact and have reposed in a Dutch bank since the war. Williams second wife is very anxious to wear these marvellous jewels as Empress. She is quite fed up with the dullness of tfhe little flat c ountry of canals, and the expedition to admire the jewels was undertaken to mollify her. Not very much satisfaction in that, one would imagine for of course, William has not any authority to remove them.

London Church Has Dressing Room For Brides

The Dean of Manchester, one of Englands most prominent ecclesiastics, has just been denouncing Miss 1925's habit of powdering her nose,—not a new question, but one always sure of raising the dust. But the Dean can't possibly know of a convenient little dressing room in the fashionable Church of St. Columbus, London, where the bride can retire to powder her nose and arrange her veil before going up the aisle. Every bride makes use of it, and Miss Octavia Lebourdy of Ottawa who married Captain H. S. Brown of the Grenadier Guards, last Tuesday, was no Exception, Miss Lebourdy, by the way, was a 'green' bride, and even her ornaments were of jade. Prince Henry, who at one time was a fellow officer of the bridegroom, went to the reception afterwards at the Lerkeley.

Something Like an Eclipse

London lost the sun last Saturday for an hour or two, but it also found anew cocktail to make up for it. Harry Cradock of the Savoy, who has devoted his life to studying eclipse of another kind spent the darkest hour in trying to find something to celebrate's the sun effort. The result "Total Eclipse" is beautiful to look upon, and unlike eclipse in the firmament which are apt to be halfhearted affairs, is of the hundred per cent variety. Its colour is a cross between an angry sky and the colour of melting rubies and a black olive gleams significantly in the centre of it. Since then Harry has not been able to make "Total Eclipses" quickly enough.

London, Feb. 16.—(By the Canadian Press)—"I am going to educate myself with regard to the British Empire in case I get into Parliament again. Lawyers, doctors, accountants and auctioneers consider it necessary to be trained through long pupilage and to give evidence of qualification. Legislatures need it more, yet it has never been deemed necessary either to undergo training or to prove qualification. "This was the reason given by Frank Grey, former M.P. for Oxford, and the junior Liberal Whip when interviewed before he left England recently for the West Coast of Africa. He will first visit Lagos, and after travelling through Nigeria, hopes to go on to the Gold Coast, Sirra Leone and Gambia.

"I shall wander about West Africa with natives, and hope to meet all kinds of people. Europeans and natives in their several walks of life on equal terms," said Mr. Grey. He has all his previous journeys alone to know t he people and understand their conditions.

Deaths And Funerals

MRS. SAMUEL REID

The funeral of the late Mrs. Samuel Reid took place from her former residence, on Sunday 15th inst to Trinity Church, Shannonville. Mrs. Reid was born in Richmond Co., but has resided in Shannonville for over 40 years, and was one of the oldest members of the Anglican Church there. Mrs. Reid was widely known as was evidenced by the many who attended to pay their last respects. The Trinity church was crowded both nave and choir and at the back of the church their was scarce standing room.

The impressive service of the Church of England was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Genn, who also addressed the congregation on St. Paul's comforting words to the Christians at Thessalonica. After the service in the chuhch the remains were conveyed to Shannonville cemetery where the final service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Geen.

WALTER CAHILL

Many citizens were this morning in attendance at the funeral of the late Mr. Walter Cahill of this city. The cortege proceeded from his late residence, 50 Geddes street to St. Michael's church, where Rev. Father Killeen celebrated mass. Rev. Father Whalen officiated at the interment at St. James cemetery. Floral tributes and mass cards were numerous. Bearers were: Thomas Gorman, R. J. Milne, Jno. Donovan, John Boyce, Frank and Wallace Schrieder.

MRS. ELIZABETH McCONNELL

The funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth McConnell, who died at the hospital here on Saturday, took place this afternoon from the funeral parlors of the Belleville Burial Company. The service was conducted by Rev. N. S. McKeohnie, of the Baptist Church. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery.

ELEANOR NICHOLSON

Miss Eleanor Nicholson a maiden lady passed away on Sunday morning at the residence of her nephew, Mr. Bert McKee, 2nd concession of Ameliasburg Township. Deceased was 73 years of age and was born in Huntingdon Township. She was a member of the Methodist chuhch and a member of the W.M.S. of Centre Church. One brother and three sisters survive The brother is John Nicholson of this city and the sisters are, Mrs. David Tucker of Rawdon Township, Mrs. Amanda Caverley of this city and Miss Hannah Nicholson of Ameliasburg.

CHICAGO MARKET

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Feb. 16.— Notwithstanding the downward tendency at the outset, wheat soon made material upturns in price today, offerings were quickly absorbed by houses with seaboard connections. Besides, previous sellers bought freely. Initial weakness was associated with a large increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage and with poor response which Liverpool market made to advances Saturday on this side of the Atlantic. Opening quotations unchanged to 3-4c lower were followed by a sag all round and then by aris to $1.87 1-2 May delivery. Corn and oats rallied in sympathy with wheat. Some of buying of corn was on orders to stop losses After opening at 3-4c lower to 1-8c advance, corn market scored moderate general gains, Oats started unchanged to 1-2c higher May 55 to 55 1-4c and later held near to opening range. Provisions lacked support.

CLAIM GERMANY HAS NOT DISARMED

Paris, Feb 16.—The report of the allied military control misson on armament conditions in Germany, which probably will be in the hands of Marshal Foch today, will, it is asserted by those who have seen all the semi-monthly reports from which the final document was made up, purport to prove that Germany has by no means disarmed, materially or morally.

The principal features dwelt upon by General Walsch and his colleagues of the mission are that Germany has maintained a complete staff for an army, such as existed before 1914, and has found means for training young men for service, almost equivalent to the military service they performed previous to the Great War.

It is taken for granted in French official circles that the opinion of the allied war committee headed by Marshal Foch, will agree with the finding of the control mission and that consequently the allies will be bound to notify Germany that much remains to be done before the Cologne bridgehead can be evacuated.

James Penny, of Toronto, C. N. R. brakeman, who was stricken with acute appendicities soon after he left Toronto on his usual run to London, was rushed to Victoria Hospital here and operated upon immediately upon his arrival.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN: SERIAL: THEATRES

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

"No, no," replied the major. "That is, only in a sense. He has led a—ahem—a very wild life, my dear. Your uncle, who knew his father and grandfather, told me that the Nairnes were all tarred with the same brush; but this one appears to be the worst and maddest of the lot. I suppose if he'd been a mere commoner—a plain mister—he would have been laid by the leg long ago."

"Is he so very wicked? What has he done?" asked Elaine, with all the courage of youth and innocence.

The major coughed, and rearranged his eyeglass.

"Oh, all sorts of things, my dear," he said. "You wouldn't understand if I told you. What has he done! What hasn't he done would be the better question. It's a wonder the property has stood it; but I believe there's no end to his wealth even now, and though he has been making ducks and drakes of the money ever since he came into it."

CHAPTER II.

"Is he an old man?" asked Elaine, with languid curiosity.

"Oh, no," replied the major. "Oh no; quite young. Thirty, thirty-two, or something like that."

"That seems old," remarked Elaine with all the superiority of twenty-one.

The major shook his head.

"Old! What must I be then, my dear?"

She looked at him with a gentle smile.

"You will never be old, dear," she said.

"Thank you, my love!" said the major, and he smoothed his moustache with his perfectly gloved hand. "At any rate, the marquis is old in wickedness if he's young in years. I wonder what brings him down to Barefield?" he added musingly. "In the middle of the season, too. Not that he cares much about the season. Shouldn't wonder if he has been up to some devilitry up in London, and has come down here out of the way."

Elaine smiled.

"What crime could such a man—and a marquis—commit in London?" she said. "Break into a church—or what, papa?"

The major laughed.

"I don't know. Oh, he's equal to that and wouldn't hesitate to do it, I should say, if he thought it would amuse him! At any rate, he wouldn't be balked by any fear of the consequences. Well, I must be off, I expect Sherwin will be waiting for me. Shall I bring him back to dinner, Elaine?"

"Not tonight, dear," she said. "There is only cold mutton and—well, it depends upon Bridget's powers of persuasion whether there will even be a pudding."

"Ah, well well!" said the major, drawing an easy sigh, "Confound the tradesmen! Give me a kiss, my dear, and I'll be off."

She leaned forward and he kissed the beautiful flower-like face lovingly and proudly enough, and as he went jauntily down the narrow passage Elaine heard his still melodious voice humming an air from the last of the Sullivan and Gilbert operas.

Elaine looked at the flag absently; the sun was sinking, and the red bunting was glowing a deeper crimson than before in the warm glow. She was thinking not so much of the marquis as of the beautiful house standing in the midst of the lovely valley, with its wealth of foliage and purling river, and wondering at any one, mad and wicked though he might be, ever leaving it. Since she had come a child to Barefield the flag had only waved above the white stoned mansion a score of times, and then only for a few hours or days at a time.

The door opened with the bang which Bridget always managed to give it, and that faithful handmaid entered bearing the jug carefully.

"Well, I've got it, Miss Elaine!" she exclaimed, triumphantly. "And a rare job I had! Really that old Scone was a'most imperent. 'You tell Miss Elaine with my compliment,' says he, 'that if it wasn't for her sake, I'd——'"

"Never mind," said Elaine, "you have got it and it's very clever of you to have done so, though you have been gone so long that I though you had taken French leave, and milked one of Mr. Scone's cows."

Bridget colored rather guiltily.

"Well to tell the truth, miss, I did wait a little, for Mr. Scone was engaged talking to Mr. Ingram, the house-steward at the Caste, and I couldn't interrupt their conversation."

"Certainly not; that would have been rudeness entirely foreign to your nature, Bridget."

"Yes, miss. The Castle's all in a flurry, so it seems. Mr. Ingram had a telegram to say tho markiss was coming down today, all unexected; and Mr. Ingram had run up to see if Mr. Scone could send down two of his sons to help in the stables. Not that Mr. Ingram knows whether they'll be really wanted, for his lordship may be off again to-morrow, or he may stay forever."

"That would be a long visit, Bridget," said Elaine, beating up the eggs and scarcely listening.

"Yes, miss. Mr. Ingram says he never knows; and he says he believes the markiss himself don't know. It's just as it comes into his head. He's a sort of here today and gone tomorrow gentleman, miss. Dreadful trying he must be to have in the 'ouse. Mr. Ingram says that sometimes the least thing will put him out, and that he swore dreadful because there was no carriage to meet him at the station, for getting as he'd said to-morrow instead of to-day in the telegram; and sometimes Mr. Ingram says that he won't notice anything, and don't appear to know what's going on. And as to meals——"

"Bridget, all this is interesting, no doubt, but what about the drawing-room you were going to dust?"

"Yes, miss; but I was going to tell you what Mr. Ingram said about the meals at the Castle. He says that sometimes when there's a dinner ready as might be set before a king, his lord shi pwon't come in for hours after, ship won't come in for hours after in time he'll just walk upstairs and leave the dinner to kick its heels——"

"That must be a performance worth seeing," said Elaine.

"Just as if he'd had his dinner, which of course he can't have had, because he never goes outside the Castle grounds, or eats a meal anywhere but at home."

"The drawing-room!" suggested Elaine.

"Yes, miss," said Bridget, "I was just going. Did I tell you about that Miss Inchley, Miss Elaine?"

"I don't think so," said Elaine, absorbed in her pudding, "but never mind. You mustn't tire yourself with talking, Bridget."

"Oh, I'm not tired in the very least, miss," said Bridget, cheerfully ignoring Elaine's irony. "I was only going to say that while we were talking who should come up but her. I don't know why it is, Miss Elaine, but I really can't abear that Miss Inchley. Perhaps it's because she's got red hair——"

Elaine could not repress a smile.

"Well, miss, you may laugh; but I never could like a person with hair like hers. And she gives herself such airs, too. And only the housekeeper's niece after all. I've heard some people say as they thought her pretty! Pretty! Why her eyes are green, right down green, Miss Elaine; and as to her figure—well, give me a little more flesh and blood for my taste."

"And give me the saucepan for the tapioca," interrupted Elaine with the resignation of despair.

"Yes, miss, there it is. She came up in that quiet—I call it sneaking—way of hers, and said, quite as if she was the mistress of the Castle and everything in it, 'Mr. Ingram,' says she, looking at him full in the face, his lord ship has arrived, and will be asking for you!' And off she goes without so much as a word to me, or Mr. Scone, who is a mos' respectable man. Yes, miss," for Elaine had held up her hand with a gesture of entreaty and command, "I'm going!" But as she opened the door she managed to add: "And dressed like a regular lady, too, miss! A fur cape round her shoulders, and a felt hat like Mrs. Bradley's, the rector's lady. And what time will you have the dinner, Miss Elaine?"

"Half-past eight, as usual," said Elaine, and closed the door with her foot to stop any further flow of the torrent of words.

HELP SHIPBUILDERS

Hamburg, Feb. 16—To stimulate German shipbuilding, the German government will make available credits equal to 50 percent. of the price agreed upon between the ship owners and the builders. This step is taken because the ship construction companies have no ready cash to advance to their workers, and the ship owners are likewise suffering from a scarcity of capital.

Captain Blood Was Really A Pirate

Though Buccaneer Might Better be Applied to Famous Character?

Two words which are used extensively in Rafael Sabatini's popular novel, "Captain Blood," which will be shown at Griffin theatre to-day, Tues and Wed. are frequently used as synonyms, although there is quite a shade difference in meaning. The words are pirate and buccaneer.

The story deals with the adventures of Peter Blood as a pirate after he had been condemned by the cruel King James as a slave to the Barbadoes pirate has been regarded by all nations to be an enemy of the human race. Piracy is a crime against nations which may be brought before any court, no matter what the nationality of the plaintiff or the origin of the pirate may be.

A buccaneer is a freebooter, one of the pirate rovers of the 17th and 18th centuries that preyed upon the Spaniards along the Spanish coast of America. The first buccaneers were Frenchmen whom the Spanish authorities had driven from their occupation of hunting and bucaning or curing meat.

Although Captain Blood's escapades might better be termed bucaneering he roved the sea almost a century before the buccaneers originated and therefore must strictly speaking, be termed a pirate.

Antonio Moreno in The Border Legion

Headed by Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick in featured roles, a remarkable strong cast has been assembled in the newest Zane Grey-Paramount production, "The Border Legion," to be shown at the Belle Theatre tonight.

Moreno has a different sort of role as Jim Cleve, a gay, young, irresponsible cowboy. Miss Chadwick's role is that of a typical daughter of the West—young, beautiful, unafraid.

In the principal supporting roles are Rockliffe Fellowes, leaders of "The Border Legion"; Gibson Gowland, his lieutenant; Charles Ogle, a cattleman who is the target for the maraudings of the Legion; James Corey, Edward Gribbon and Luke Cosgrave.

"The Border Legion" was a band of outlaws who rode the Southern border of Idaho in the early days of the West, spreading death and terror.

According to Zane Grey, this is a true story. It is clean, wholesome and typically American, chock-full of action, appeal, drama and love. William Howard did the direction, and George Hull wrote the screen play.

The entire production was made in the wild and little-known mountains of the Northwest with the marvelous natural scenery as background.

"The Border Legion" is the 'Western' of the season!

District News

A Gentle Dig

Oshawa, Feb. 16.—There are 3 tons of Catalogues from a single Toronto mail order house in the Oshawa Post Office at the present time. These are for distribution in Oshawa and district only.

The question, "Does Advertising Pay?" is answered by an emphatic yes, by the mail order houses. It is unfortunate that their large business is done at the expense of local merchants, some of whom never advertise.

Saw Cut Arm

Oshawa, Feb. 16.—Trying to repair a circular saw while it was in motion cost A. E. Sutton, local carpenter his left arm Saturday. The unfortunate man tried to secrue a brace which had become loose, and in so doing had the muscels of his arm almost cut through. He was removed to the General Hospital where the mangled member was amputated.

Found Caterpillar

Oshawa, Feb. 16.—Miss Dorothy Bervent, 738 Simcoe street south, found a live caterpillar in her garden Friday morning, Mr. Caterpillar was probably looking for early vegetables but is likely to be disappointed energetically since he came to Oshawa.

Half Stock Subscribed

Oshawa, Feb. 16.—The Hotel Committee report that the majority of the manufacturers in the city and a great many of the merchants have subscribed for stock in the new Hotel Company. It is understood here that considerably over half the necessary stock has already been subscribed and that an important announcement will be made inside a few days.

Deseronto News

Deseronto, Feb. 16—The "Fun Revue of 1925" put on at Naylor's Theatre by Deseronto talent, proved a great success and drew a full house. The theatre was tastefully decorated in honor of the festival, St. Valentine's, with hearts and streamers.

The entertainment was full of good clean wholesome fun and the audience were either convulsed with laughter or lifting the roof with applause. Songs, specialties, drills by children, piano duets and a dance "Swanee River" were given by the various members of the company and a very amusing one-act comedy entitled "The Bootlegger's Bride," coming before the grand finale, brought down the house. Mr. Buck as preacher was too funny for words. Flossie Richardson in white with bridal veil and bouquet made a charming bride whilst Mac Perry as the groom excelled himself. Clare Malley, a nigger, was a show himself.

The Revue was directed by Mrs. Eva Watson, who also designed the costumes. Mrs. Watson deserves great credit for the excellency of the production and the success of the revue was due mainly to her untiring efforts and ability.

The E. B. Eddy Co., owners of the Deseronto News Co., have decided to remove the printing plant from the building it now occupies in the shipping centre to the Dominion Match factory, West Main street.

Claude Share and J. Campbell have returned from Toronto bringing with them a new Ford car. They report that the highway is serviceable right through from Toronto.

Caught With Alcohol

Oshawa, Feb. 16.—After a chase of more than 300 yards License Inspector C. A. Mason and Police Constable Flintoff captured Tom Skinty, and seized 34 gallons of liquor valued in bootleg circles at $700. Skinty was lodged in the police of one surety of $2,000.

The police it is claimed have been watching Skinty for some time and Saturday morning the officers sighted him carrying a bag down Albert street Skinty sghting the officers about the same time dropped the bag and ran. He lead the officers a merry chase for some moments, but was captured by Constable Flintoff. The bag was found to contain two half gallon tins of alcohol. The police returning to Skinty's home found 33 gallons in tins and two bottles.

Skinty has had two previous convictions for breaches of the Ontario Temperance Act. The first was in November 1922 and the second in September 1923.

The accused has a reputation as a sprinter, as each time he has been placed under arrest he has lead the officers a chase. On warrant issued here, Skinty was arrested in Toronto for a breach of the O.T.A. and there lead the police such a chase that an officer sprained his ankle.

News of Consecon

Consecon, Feb. 16.—The funeral of the late Mrs. George Elmly was held at the Methodist church. There was a very large concourse of friends and relatives. The church had an unusually large congregation and the pastor delivered a very appropriate sermon. Interment took place in Albury cemetery and owing to the condition of the roads, it was only two hours before the funeral procession reached there.

Deceased left a husband and six children. Mrs. Elmy was a twin sister of Mrs. Charles Corurike of this place. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

Prof. F. R. Crane, Marchand, Man., and Dr. E. Alyea, Colborne, passed through this vicinity on Tuesday, buying young cattle for the Oregon and Western Colonization Company. The monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. C. N. Adams, on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Egerton Wannamaker entertained at a goose dinner last Wednesday, John Wannamaker, Miss Nettie Stapleton, Mr. and Mrs. Walton Fox Waldick, Sask., and children, and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wannamaker and children.

DRINKING DECREASES BUT PROFITS BIGGER

London, Feb. [illegible]—Although police reports from all over Great Britain report a decrease in the number of persons convicted for drunkenness during 1920 and that the consumption of beer has fallen from 33.2 gallons a person in 1900 to 17.4 in 1923, the profits of brewery companies show a large increase.

The profits of one big London brewery firm during 1923 were $3,800,000, and in addition to a dividend of 32 percent, it gave a capital bonus of 100 percent. In 1923 the profits of the same firm rose to $4,225,000. During 1914 the firm made only $2,040,000 in profits.

TO SHOW EUROPE OF THOUSAND YEARS AGO

Cologne, Feb. 16.—A flourish of trumpets from al lthe old Rhine castles between Worms and the Dutch frontier will usher in the 1000th anniversary in 1925 of the Federation of the Rhineland. The historical, artistic, commercial and agricultural development of the Rhineland will be celebrated at Cologne, Dusseldorf, Coblenz and other places. Musical festivals, Jubilee regattas, Olympic and Roman games and Tournaments will vie with exhibits of paintings, sculpture and handicraft in attracting visitors from all parts of the world. Europe, before churches were built in the Gothic style of architecture, of the French language was written, or the figures of arithmetic were introduced, or William Conqueror was known, will be shown to all who come.

SUSSEX NEEDS MEN

London, Feb. 16.—The stamping ground for Cupid in England should be Sussex county.

In Sussex there are more women proportionately than in any county in England, the women numbering 1,274 to every 1,000 men. This is 108 more than the average for the rest of England, and about 188 more than in 1913 before the men went to war and the women to work in the fields.

If Rheumatic Eat No Sweets

Says Glas of Salts Helps to Overcome Rheumatism Acid

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

Vegetable Groweres Want High Tariff

Say Competition From United States is Unfair To Them

Toronto, Feb. 14.—An appeal for adequate tariff protection for the vegetable growers of this province, which would enable them to retain the home market for the sale of home-raised vegetables, was made yesterday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, and a general resolution to this effect was endorsed by the vegetable growers as a body. The chief ground upon which the demand was made is that, on account of the lack of suitable tariff protection under the present regulations, great quantities of vegetables cross into Ontario from the States and flood the local market before the local dealers are able to put their produce before the public. It was felt that the position of the Ontario vegetable growers was a particularly difficult one, and that, owing to the difference in climate, there is nothing the local men can do to offset conditions. On account of the fact that the season in the Southern States was much in advance of that in Ontario, the American growers were able to perfect their crops and throw them on the local market long before the home-grown article was fit for consumption, and the result was that by the time the Ontario product was ready, the appetite of the public had passed on to something else. And that something else was always the latest importation from the States.

THOUSANDS TO SEE HOLLAND BULB SHOW

Rotterdam, Feb. 16.—From March 13 to May 21, Holland will receive thousands of visitors from many countries for the international Bulb Show. At this time the famous Haarlem bulb fields will be in all their glory. The great hall for the indoor show will be completed in January, in front of which a large French garden is being laid out, in which masses of crocuses, hyancinths and tulips will bloom in succession. All the known varieties of Narcissus will be shown in the gardens, by the Society of Daffodil Growers. A special steamer will sail from New York to carry Americans, and excursions are now being planned from England, France, Germany and other European countries.

GRAY HAIR IS QUICKLY MADE DARK, GLOSSY

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

40 Kinds of Pain quickly stopped in this way

There are countless pains which one can stop—stop them in a moment. The pains allied to rheumatism, to soreness, lameness and chest colds. Millions of people have done this, and for 65 years, by rubbing with St. Jacobs Oil. They have saved eons of suffering. It is folly not to do this the moment a pain appears.

St. Jacobs Oil acts in two ways. First, it causes counter irritation which relieves countless pains. Then it brings the blood to the surface to relieve the congestion which causes other pains and dangers.

Rub it on the sore spot whenever a pain appears. Rub it on the chest as soon as a chest cold starts. Don't suffer, don't take risks. And don't be forced to wait for relief. Keep St. Jacobs Oil on hand.

Nature will deal with the cause of the trouble. Or perhaps other helps may be necessary. But the first thing is to get relief. Stop the pain.

Some may suggest other ways to do this. But St. Jacobs Oil has done it for millions—done it for 65 years. You can rely on it if your druggist guarantees it. Let this time-tested way draw out the pain at once. Get it before the pain begins. Have it ready. You may in that way save many unhappy hours.

Natural Treads Broke The Record

Rolled Over 3,000 Mark in Junior League; Week-end Scores

On Friday evening at the Recreation alleys the Natural Tread broke all the junior league records when they were the first team to roll over the 3000 mark in the Junior League. The Natural Tread rolled 816 for their first game, 1058 the second, and 1067 the third. Roop was high bowler with 707, and Allen and Benford both well over the 600 mark. The losers were the Cisco, and although they rolled a good enough score to win an average junior game, they were outclassed in this affair.

The second junior game between the Rovers and the Baby Shoes was won by the former by 179 pins, only 2 pins separated the teams at the end of the first game, but after that the Rovers settled down and broke away from their opponents. Hector for the winner was high bowler with 619.

In the C.I.A. League the Boilers added another win to their column when they won from the Motive Power by over 200 pins. Gifford for the winners rolled 616.

Another surprise almost took place in the C.N.R. League when the fast travelling team from the M.P. Shops, who have yet to lose their first game managed to squeeze out a win from the Car Dept. by 9 pins. It was a close call for the M.P. Shops as a loss now would hinder their chance for the league leadership as they are tied with the Supt's Office team No. 1. Harvey was the big noise of the night for the winners, and Browning was high for the Car Dept.

The Kiwanis team are sure traveling some these days, a different team from the Fall League, when they only won one game, now they are tied with two other teams in the Senior League for first position honors and the way the boys are hitting the maple they are going to stay there. Their latest win was from the Cisco team, winning this game by 104 pins, taking the three games running by a small margin. High bowlers were Fred Liberty 614, and Tom Barrett 613.

Do You Know What Astigmatism Is?

It is a very prevalent error of vision. It is caused by the eyes being imperfect in shape. An eye thus afflicted cannot properly focus light, and the only relief for the condition is in constantly wearing glasses that correct the error. Uncorrected astigmatism is responsible for a large number of headaches and other ills. I can detect and correct astigmatism by several methods.

The Wanderers put a crimp in the Hardware's chances of winning the winter league when they took the boys from Carman's Plant into camp and trimmed them to the tune of 3100 against 2843. It was the Wanderers best game since about a year ago, all the boys rolling good scores with Yerex the top notch of all with a 708 score, for the Hardware, Anderson was high bowler.

In a schedule C.N. league game on Saturday night, the B. & B. Dept. won from the Yard by 151 pins. The B. & B. got the jump on the first game and held the lead throughout. Sloan was high bowler with 615 and Alexander for the losers was high.

Queen's Took The First Cage Game

Belleville Defeated by Score of 34-24 at Kingston Saturday

Belleville's intermediate basket-ball team of Kingston, Saturday night team were defeated by the Queen's. The score was 34-24. In the first period of the game Belleville boys appeared to be lost on the big floor space, but nevertheless were only four points behind. In the second period Queen's had six more points over their opponents, winning the game by a score of 34 to 24.

The return game will be played here on Wednesday night at the Y.M.C.A. and a fine exhibition of the game is assured.

The line-up of the teams on Saturday night was as follows:

Queen's—Sexton, Young, Chandler, McKerrow, Dunlop, Foot, Clarry and Thompson.

Belleville—Bryce, Doughty, Hurley Armstrong, Morden, Weir and Rowell

EXCELSIORS WINNERS ON Y.M.C.A. ALLEYS

Neither the Excelsior or the Trailers were able to hit their stride in the early part of Saturday's game. Excelsiors were leading at the end of the first string by 78 points, but the Trailers by a consistent effort in the second string, reduced their opponents lead to twenty points. The final string saw the Excelsiors in rapid fire action while the Trailers fell back somewhat, giving the Excelsiors the verdict by quite a margin.

ST. PATRICK'S BEAT LEADERS OF LEAGUE

Toronto, Feb. 16—Defeating Hamilton, the league leaders, by 3 to 1 at the Arena on Saturday night, St. Patricks, kept on even terms with the Canadiens and maintained their three point margin over the Ottawa Senators in the three-cornered duel for second and third places in the National Hockey League's standing, and scored their second victory of the season over the pace-setters. Like in the last game between the two teams on local ice, the winners were much the better and the score does not give them credit for the margin they had over their rivals. The game gave Vernon Forbes another chance to show his wares and as a result of his exhibition he can be classed as the best of the monied goalies who have performed here this season. Several weeks ago Forbes saved the Hams from a great trimming, and Saturday night he pulled off sensational stops that made the scoring efforts look easy and he was a busy youth all the way.

As far as hockey was concerned, the best brand was served in the first period when the locals scored two goals. The pace was fairly fast with the Irish setting it and they bombarded Forbes with all kinds of shots and from all angles and ranges, but he turned all but two aside. Hamilton was by no means idle during this twenty minutes and Roach also had opportunities to show that he is a high-class custodian, but he did not have the terrific and constant bombardment that the visiting goalie was subjected to. Hamilton, with an all-Sudbury attacking division, worked the close-together, short and snappy passing game but they did not encounter much success in penetrating the Corbeau-McCaffery defence, which was greatly aided by the back-checking of the forwards.

MONTREALERS GAVE SENATORS A SCARE

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—A determined last period rally by the Montreal Maroons fell one goal short of ticing the count against Ottawa here Saturday night, and the Senators chalked up another National Hockey League victory by a score of 3 to 2. It was a close fit, and the locals were somewhat fortunate in being able to stay the determined attack of the Montrealers in the last few minutes.

After Cy Denneny and George Boucher had given Ottawa a goal each in the first and second periods, respectively, it looked like a certain Ottawa victory, as the Red, White and Black squad had a margin on their opponents during the first two sessions. However, the Maroons came to life with a vengeance half way through the final frame and only Lady Luck, splendid work by Connell and dogged plugging by the forwards kept the Senators in a position to take down the verdict.

JOLIAT HAS BUT ONE MORE CHANCE

Montreal, Feb. 16.—Canadiens cut another niche blazing their trail towards a play-off berth in the National Hockey League when they defeated the Boston Bruins here Saturday night 3 to 1. A fracas between Joliat and Mitchell in the third period, two disputed goals and a generally rugged contest with flashes of brilliant play provided the 3,500 spectators with the full quota of thrills.

Ottawa, Feb. 16—No change will be made in the venue of the Allan Hockey Cup finals, which will be played in Winnipeg this Spring as scheduled, it was announced here this morning by Jack Dunn, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

BOY TRAVELS ALONE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John, N.B., Feb. 16—Canadian Pacific steamer Montrose brought 113 cabin and 201 third class passengers here when she arrived from Liverpool today. Among cabin passengers was Master Peter Linton, who crossed the Atlantic unattended. He was met by his father who is now residing in Belleville Ont.

INDIAN SENTENCED ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Brantford, Feb. 16.—A case of almost unparalleled brutality was brought to light in country magistrate's court here Friday when Eli Burning, a Six Nations Indian, speaker of the Mohawks in the Old Six Nations council, recently deposed by the Dominion Government for incompetence and malpractice, was sentenced to three years in the Kingston penitentiary by Magistrate Blake. Evidence showed that Bruning had been in the habit of beating and ill-treating his wife and six month old child, and on one occasion turning her out in the snow. The charges were placed by Lieut.-Col. C. E. Morgan, superintendent of the Six Nations band.

BEATRICE LILLIE TO CONTINUE STAGE

Chicago, Feb. 16—Beatrice Lillie, the Canadian girl who is appearing here in a revue, and who Friday became Lady Peel, of Drayton Manor, through the death of her father-in-law, Sir Robert Peel, will not relinquish the stage. She announced she will fulfil the terms of a contract next September in New York but will return to England early next month to rejoin her husband, now in Australia.

HAMILTON SOCIETY BACKS FERGUSON

Hamilton, Feb. 16.—Unanimously supporting Premier Ferguson in his legislation for better enforcement of the O.T.A. the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ward 8 passed a resolution of confidence and appreciation, backing the premier upon the occasion of the annual meeting held in Harmony hall.

James Hill was appointed president and Mrs. Walter Broker, prominent East Hamilton Conservative worker, was elected vice-president by acclamation.

TRIED TO ESCAPE PAYING CUSTOM DUTY

Hamilton, Feb. 16.—The profit dreamed of when cigarets were brought from across the line to be sold here disappeared in police court Saturday when Magistrate Jelfs fined Leonard Cornell of Detroit $100 for a violation of the excise and customs act.

Cornell was charged with having cigarets in his possession upon which the duty had not been paid. He had brought the cigarets from Detroit, passed the customs officials at the border successfully, and evidently thought all his troubles were over, and that all he had to do was to take in the money. Instead he had to pay.

ALDERMEN ARE FAVORABLE TO BUS PROPOSAL

Report Back After Hearing Both Sides of the Question

WOULD ENLARGE IT

Take Up Suggestion to serve West Side Also

The special committee of the city council appointed to consider the proposition of a St. Catharines man, who desires to establish a bus service on Belleville streets, reported favorably on the project to the Council last night.

These officials in their report stated:

"Your committee appointed to consider the application on behalf of Mr. Fred Rawson to operate a service on the city streets along definite routes by motor buses on schedule have gathered together a great deal of data from other cities with such a service and have also discussed the matter at a meeting with representatives of the local taxicab owners.

"After consideration given to all the angles of the question that we can foresee, it is the opinion of this committee of the council that such a servicie is a desirable one and a step forward to keep Belleville abreast of modern transportation convenience and accommodation.

This commitee which investigated was composed of His Worship Mayor Mikel, R. J. E. Graham, chairman of the executive committee, W. H. Patterson, chairman of public works and Chas. D. Campbell, city engineer.

A Larger Service

If the desires of the committee are carried out, however, the service for Belleville citizens will be greater than at first planned. On the suggestioin of the City Engineer, iti is proposed to enlarge the areas served so that the proposed route might be as follows:

Bridge St. East to Albert or Foster.
Albert or Foster to P ine St.
Pine St. to Bleecker Ave.
Bleecker to Station St.
Station St. to Upper Bridge.
Crossing Upper Bridge to East Moira St.
East Moira St. to St. Charles.
St. Charles to Evans St.
Evans St to N. Front St.
North Front to Upper Bridge St.
West Moira St. to Yeoman St.
West Bridge St. to Yeoman St.
Yeoman St. to Bridge St. West (Exhibition Park).
West Bridge St. to Front St.

"By following those routes," says the report, "All sections of the city outlying would be served with a service to our main shoppiing area.

"We would there fore make an interim recommendation that the applicant submit to this committee a tentative proposal for a franchise and that the matter be then taken up by the speciall committee for final consideration, and report to Council."

District Churches Co-operating Also

In Series of Services by Dr. S. D. Gordon in March

The February meeting of the Methodist churches of Belleville District was held yesterday in Bridge St. S. S. Hall, the Chairman of the District, Rev. Dr. F. E. Malott, presiding. Representatives were present from the following churches, Foxboro, Cannifton, West Huntingdon, Plainfield, Shannonville, Point Anne, Bayside, Sidney, Holloway Street, Tabernacle and Bridge Street.

The work of the following Departments of the church came under review—the Department of Religious Education, The Department of Social Service and Evangelism and the Department of Missions.

A strong resolution bearing on the maintenance and enforcement of the O.T.A. was passed and sent on by the hands of the delegates who were attending the Prohibition Convention in Toronto this week.

A very interesting and inspiring report of the great Missionary Congress recently held in Washington was given by Mr. H. W. Ackerman, Mr. F. S. Deacon and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn. The District is facing this year an objective of $10,000 for Missions, which it is confidently hoped will be raised.

Dr. F. E. Mallott reported to the meeting that Dr. S. D. Gordon of New York, of world wide fame as an author and lecturer, is coming to Belleville to give a series of addresses from March 8th to 13th. These will be Community Services. Bridge St. Church as the largest and most central place of meeting is being offered for Dr. Gordon's meetings. The churches of the city and district are asked to co-operate in making known that Dr. Gordon is coming. Dr. Gordon ranks with G. Campbell Morgan as an interpreter of the great truths of Life. The meeting enthusiastically endorsed the plan and promised support.

The next meeting of the district will be held in May.

YOUNG CANADA WAS A LEADER IN DAILY FIELD

Owen Herity Gives Interesting Address to Kiwanians To-day

BELLEVILLE PAPERS

Rank Among First; Daily Intelligencer Soon Hundred Years Old

Speaking on the subject "Evolution of the Modern Newspaper," Kiwanian Owen Herity, drawing from a wealth of experiences gained through many years active work in this line, outlined the tremendous growth in newsgathering and printing that has occurred in the past thirty years at the weekly luncheon of the local club.

Prior to 1890, newspapers consisted of four pages, usually six columns of closeset type, and all work in connection with publication and circulation was done by hand. The usual speed of printing was 2,500 copies per hour, on a flat press, fed entirely by hand. In 1890, three epoch-making inventions revolutionised the news printing industry; first, a German immigrant, settling in Brooklyn, perfected a machine to make type of molten metal, operating much in the manner of the modern type writer, and later known as the Mergenthaler Linotype. Following this, in the same year, came the process to manufacture paper from wood pulp, bringing paper cost from fifteen cents per pound to little over one cent. The rotary press followed, increasing the output of complete newspaper per hour to one hundred thousand, and increasing the size of sheets and type to the now common thirty and forty pages of the metropolitan dailies.

Gazette the Oldest

Speaking of Canadian journalism and its growth, Kiwanian Herity showed that Canada was among the first of civilized countries to use the daily paper to bring the world news to readers. The first daily in Canada was the Montreal Gazette, established one hundred and forty years ago. Belleville has the honor of having two of the oldest established newspapers in the Daily Intelligencer and the Chronicle, now known as the Ontario. The Daily Intelligencer stated Mr. Heritiy, was established in 1831, and has continued without a break to the present day. Both of three publications are older than any in Toronto, the Globe taking first rank there with first issue in 1844.

WILL GO TO OTTAWA TO SEE MURDOCK

On Monday next a delegation of representatives from various urban municipalities in Ontario will proceed to Ottawa to interview Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, with a view to obtaining assistance for the unemployed. Ald. G. W. Dawes, of this city, chairman of the Labor Committee, will represent Belleville upon the deputation.

The Quebec City International Typographical Union members will not go out on strike, but will continue under present conditions. This was the decision reached at a meeting attended by practically 100 per cent. of the local branch Friday night, when the majority voted to continue under the existing scale. The agreement between the master printers and the International Typographical Union expired Saturday.

DAVID KIRKWOOD
Scottish member of parliament for Dumbarton district, who opposed voting expenses for the Prince of Wales' trip to South America.

St. Andrew's Church Shows Fine Year

No Indebtedness Now and $2000 Invested as a Start

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last night was largely attended, when reports that were very satisfactory were presented by the various societies and officials of the church. The finances of the church were shown to be in a splendid condition, no indebtedness being carried forward, and the Trustees having $2,000 invested.

The managers elected to the board for this year were Messrs. J. Lill, C. Cameron, W. H. Middleton, McLean, H. Stock, R. Gowdy, E. Timmerman, G. A. Reid, A. McGie, R. D. Ponton, D. McRae, Fairman.

Rev. Mr. Cranston, and Mr. Fleming were appointed delegates to represent the congregation at the meeting of the Presbytery in Kingston this afternoon, re the resignation of Rev. Mr. A. S. Kerr. No permanent supply can be arranged until Mr. Kerr's resignation goes into effect.

ARRANGE WITH BANK

City and Union Bank Agree On Policy Resulting From Seizure

Mr. Robert Gowdy is now a member of the City Council. By by-law he has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by ex-Ald. A. E. LaRoche, who resigned to take his place on the Suburban Area Commission.

Alderman Gowdy was duly appointed at a meeting of the City Council held last night and attended by Mayor Mikel, Aldermen A. H. Ketcheson, S. H. Treverton, P. Harrison, C. Ruttan A. Robinson, W. J. Parrish, G. W. Dawes, G. E. Foster, R. J. E. Graham and W. H. Patterson.

Ald. C. Ruttan was chairman in committee of the whole and the recommendation from the Civic Committees asking the Legislature to stop construcion on suburban roads for five years was amended so as not to interfere with roads already approved and for which estimates have been prepared.

The recommendation relative to having light board fences erected about yards where junk is deposited was referred back to committee for reconsideration. Mr. A. Sale and Son sent in a communication protesting against the proposed fence alleging it would be detrimental to their business.

Relief For Firemen

A communication from Mr. A. T. Smith of Merriton, president of the Firemen's Association of Ontario was read which referred to the Fire Committee. The communication recommends that legislation be passed compensating firemen who may be injured at a fire, compensation to be provided by the Compensation Board.

Regulate Sewer Building

Ald. R. J. E. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. P. Harrison that a committee of the chairmen of public works chairman of water works, city engineer and manager of the water works and medical officer of health investigate and report on the deirability of a by-law being passed by this Council to regulate the construction of plumbing and private sewers in the city of Belleville

Want More Light

Moved by Alderman Harrison, seconded by Ald. Treverton that a light be placed on Frank street midway between Moira and Purdy street.

Agree With Bank

Moved by Ald. Graham, seconded by Ald. Patterson that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to execute the agreement between the Union Bank and he city of Belleville in regard to the property seized by both parties—the bank under an apothecation agreement from the Angus-Keefer Lumber Company, and the other for taxes due the city—and attach the corporate seal thereto, the said agreement providing that the bank may sell the property and deposit the proceeds thereof in the Union Bank to the joint credit of the bank and the city of Belleville to be withdrawn only upon an order or cheque signed by both the bank and the corporation of the city of Belleville, or be paid out upon the direction of the court.

Labor Troubles Aired

Under the head of inquiries, Ald. S Treverton asked Ald. Parrish if he had circulated a report that he, Ald. Treverton, was in favor of reducing wages to the laboring men of the city.

Ald. Parrish—"I did not say so."

Mr. Fred Panter to a question of privilege stated it was reported in the streets that the Council was in favor of reducing the wages of laborers and he was opposed to it.

Several of the Aldermen stated that there was no truth in the statement as it had never been considered.

Maintenance Money

A statement was presented which showed that this city owed the department of Public Highways the sum of $14,048.98 as its share for construction and maintenance of Provincial Highways for the year 1924.

Parks Board Present

The Parks Board presented its requisition for the year which showed that $8,350 was required by the Board as its appropriation. The requesition was referred to the Executive Committee.

CONSERVATIVES SET AT DESERONTO NOW

At Deseronto, on Friday night, the Conservatives of that town assembled in large numbers for the discussion of plans pertaining to the welfare of the Association, and appointment of officersfor the year occurred. Officers appointed were: President, E. C. Metcalfe; Secretary, W. J. McMicking; Treasurer, A. W. McCullough.

WILL SPEND MONEY

The Government has placed in the estimates $401,000 for Trent canal improvement, out of which dam No. 4 will be started and the old dam removed. It is expected that this work will cost about $300,000. G. N. Gordon of Peterboro also says that Sir Adam Beck promised him that he would put in a generating plant at dam No. 4 to use the surplus water for the development of power for Peterboro.

COLLIN'S BODY MAY BE LEFT IN SAND CAVE

Engineers Hesitate to Fool Longer With Natural Tunnel

A TRAGIC ENDING

Thank God, They've Found Him, Victim's Father Said

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 17.—Owing to the dangerous nature of the natural tunnel in which Floyd Collins' body lies, there is a possibility that the attempt to bring remains to the surface will be abandoned.

Revealed but not recovered, the body of Floyd Collins today still was in the natural tomb, which had been his for more than 17 days while jaded miners, spurred on by the realization that at least they have found the cave explorer, pecked away at the limestone roof of the sand cave.

Collins' feet probably will remain for ever in the spot they were pinioned by a falling boulder 18 days ago. H. T. Carmichael in charge of the rescue work, is unwilling further to risk the lives of the miners in removing the boulder. Doctors went into the pit early today to attempt to amputate Collins' feet but were unable to reach him. The body is almost covered with dirt and rocks, and these must be removed before medical examination can be made.

Struggle Ended

Cave City, Ky., Feb. 16.—The long struggle is ended. Mother Earth, after clinging grimly, in life and in death, to Floyd Collins for more than 17 days, finally surrendered at 2.45 o'clock this afternoon and, without warning, opened a tiny hole between a rescue shaft and the natural tomb of the cave explorer.

Peering down this tiny fissure into Sand Cave, the brave workers who had waged an unequal combat with the forces of the earth, saw that what they had fought so hard for had been lost.

Collins was dead.

But they will reclaim his body, only to restore it again to the rugged hills he roamed as a youth and explored as a man.

"Thank God, they've found him," was Lee Collins' single statement after his son had been found.

A terse statement, signed by the three men who had led scores of others in the long fight, told of the result, and paid tribute to their assistants.

Examined Body With Light

After describing the break through the roof of Sand Cave and the preliminary investigation of it by Albert Marshall, the statement said:

"His game little partner, Ed Brenner, of Cincinnati, whose work has been very conspicuous and of untold value by reason of his small stature and great strength and iron nerve, went down head foremost into this hazardous pit and with a light closely examined the face and position of the man who we understood is Floyd Collins, and called up to Mr. Carmichael, five feet above him, that the man was cold and apparently dead."

The bulletin was signed by Brigadier General H. H. Denhardt, H. T. Carmichael and M. E. S. Posey.

Dr. William Hazlett, of Chicago, and Dr. C. E. Francis, of Bowling Green, Ky., announced later that from information they had obtained Collins had been dead more than 24 hours.

CHICAGO MARKET

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Feb. 17.—In a general rush to sell, wheat underwent a sharp set back to-day during early dealings. There was no indication of any present new export business and quotations at Liverpool were much lower with cables emphasizing huge quantities afloat on ocean passage. A good deal of selling was on standing orders to stop losses at certain fixed limits. Opening which ranged from 7-8 to 3 1-4c. decline; May $1.81 1-2 to $1.82 1-2 and July $1.52 to $1.52 1-4 was followed by something of a rally but then by drop lower than before. Corn and oats gave way with wheat. Cash demand for corn was slow. After opening at 1-2c. to 1 3-8 c. off; May $1.26 to $1.26 1-4, corn continued to sag; Oats started 3-8c. to 1 5-8c. down; May 53 to 53 1-2 c. Rallies failed to hold well. In sympathy with grain, provisions were weak despite firmness of hog values.

TORONTO MARKET

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Cattle market receipts fair, trade dull, heavy beef steers 7 to 825; butcher steers choice, 650 to 725; butcher cows medium, 350 to 4; calves 10 to 12; lambs ewes 15 to 16; hogs, selects, 12.58.

Parks Board Does Much in One Year

Good Report Presented to City Council for the Year 1924

A year of activity and accomplishment is reflected in the annual report of the Belleville Parks Board presented to the City Council last night by the secretary, H. W. Greenleaf. Victoria Park, Corby's, the fair grounds, and memorial received a great deal of attention during the year. The report is as follows:

"Your Board appointed for the year 1924 in making this report desire to thank your body for the interest shown in the parks improvement for the city.

"Your Board is trying to make your parks properties of maximum value to the citizens, not only as revenue producers but as recreation centres and playgrounds. Through the efforts of 1924 council the moneys donated by the will of the late Senator Corby were taken advantage of and to-day Victoria Park boasts of a fine swimming pool together with building and dressing rooms. These buildings were not completed however, until late in the season and adequate provision for proper attendants could not be arranged. It is the intention of your Board for 1925 to appoint supervisors to take care of bath house and give service, and your Board believe that service given will show as an asset at the end of the season.

"The usual work in connection with your various parks properties has been carried on and in addition Memorial Park has been ploughed and cultivated. This property will require considerable more filling before permanent work can be done. Panter's Park was resurfaced with loam and levelled, a stone curbing was laid along its front outside the trees. Corby's Park was given the usual attention.

"A certain rough area in one section of Victoria Park was ploughed, levelled and cultivated. In connection with Victoria Park, it is the desire of your board that its equipment be used more extensively by the general public for picnics and similar purposes Belleville should be the centre of this district for holiday activities.

"Your new athletic and fair grounds has been a live issue for your 1924 Board. Every effort was made to complete arrangements for the purchase of necessary properties. Action, however, was delayed pending approval of by-law for the issue of debentures After the passing of debenture by-law your Board immediately purchased properties required from such owners as could give good title. Balance of property will be bought as soon as approved titles are ready. Late in the fall your board were able to have a race track completed and a ball diamond partially levelled off. This will be compeled as early as possible this spring. The new grounds will be fenced and a grand stand built as early as possible."

SEARCHING ENQUIRY INTO HUGE SWINDLE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—A searching enquiry into the huge swindle, believed to have been unearthed by Royal Canadian Mounted Police, in alleged obtaining of certificates of naturalization, passports and immigration permits, for entry into Canada of relatives or friends of foreigners from Armenia and other countries by conspiracy, fraud and impersonation, is being continued here by the police. it is suggested that a new series of charges may be laid. One arrest so far has been made, G. H. Alexander an Armenian, is now in custody on charge of conspiracy. He will come up this week in the Ottawa police court for a preliminary hearing.

Despite Bad Business Year in Canada Canadian National Is Holding Its Own

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Feb. 17.—The net earnings of the Canadian National Railways after payment of operating expenses amounted to $17,244,251 in 1924. Final figures, giving operating results of the system during the year were announced today by Sir Henry Thornton, Chairman and President. These figures show that while prevailing business conditions and a smaller crop reduced the gross receipts of the company by $16,547,305 as compared with the preceding year, economies in operating expenses were made to the extent of $14,361,907. As result of these economies, net earnings amounting to $17,244,251 were produced.

CONVENTION OPENS

Union Is in Healthy State Financially and Numerically

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The integrity of the Ontario Temperance Act and Governmental sincerity in the enforcement of the act are questions uppermost in the minds of two thousand delegates gathering here this morning for the convention of the Ontario Prohibition Union. Registration are from all parts of the province.

Preliminary local meetings last week and the "stronger beer" amendment proposed by the Ontario Government have given a stimulus to the convention opening to-day, and it is expected that the gathering will be one of the most important in the history of the province. Undoubtedly discussions will centre considerably on the announcement in the speech from the throne of the intention of submitting to the Legislature an amendment to the O. T. A. permitting legal sale of 4.4 per cent beer.

Along that line, Dr. Harvey Wiley, United States scientist, will address the delegates to-morrow on the subject of "what constitutes intoxicating beer."

In the course of preliminaries this morning, R. J. Fleming, president of the Union, in his opening address laid stress on the significance of the Government's announcement. The executive of the Union reported its plans for meeting the situation. Among other things the legislature will probably be urged individually and collectively to vote against the amendment.

Reports were presented this morning by Rev. John Bailey, secretary, and R. D. Warren, treasurer, indicating the Union to be in flourishing condition, numerically and financially Speakers on the program for this afternoon and tonight include Mrs. James Murdock, wife of the Federal Minister of Labor, R. E. Reid, Rev. R. E. Knowles, Rev. P. K. Dalyfoot, Father Lawrence Minehan and others.

The executive committee in its report suggests that the convention express the opinion that the native wines also be prohibited. There were also resolutions presented to ask the Federal Government to stop granting licenses to breweries in Ontario without the sanction of the Ontario Government and also asking Federal authorities to stop shipment of liquor to foreign countries by Ontario lakeports

Illness of King Caused Alarm

Physician's Bulletin Brings Some Relief To-day, However

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 17.—The bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace this afternoon on the condition of King George, who was announced yesterday to be suffering from a feverish cold, said His Majesty had an attack of bronchitis due to influenza. Despite a restless night, the bulletin added, his condition was satisfactory.

The bulletin was signed by Lord Dawson, physician extraordinary to the king, Sir Milsom Rees and Sir Frederick Stanley Hewett. The fact that they visited the palace this morning raised fears that the king's illness was worse than had been thought. It was pointed out, however, that these doctors invariably have a consultation when the king's condition is anything but normal, and the issuance of the bulletin allayed uneasiness.

BUY IN BELLEVILLE

Did you ever stop to think that money that goes to a big city mail order house, does Belleville no good?

It pays no taxes here. It builds no streets, supports no schools and does nothing to help this growing community. It does, however, add a little to the huge income of millionaire department store owners.

Merchants here claim that their prices are no higher than the mail order houses ask for the same quality of merchandise.

The growth of the home buying movement must be a mutual affair in that the merchant and customer must co-operate. No doubt there are many items on which the mail order house, through greater buying capacity and less taxes in ratio to turnover, can show a lower price than the local merchant but the modern, manufacturer of quality merchandise is anxious to develop a Canadian-wide market and his selling arrangements are such that the town merchant is quite on a par with the big city mail order house. Methods of cutting overhead costs on the part of the local merchant will have to be studied and there is no reason why, on the general average, the local merchant cannot compete with the mail order house. But the customer should realize that just because one particular item may be five cents higher in Belleville, it should not be taken as an indication that he or she can save five dollars by sending the order to the mail order house.

There has been talk of developing industries in Belleville to create more employment and generally aid in the growth of the town but the resident who sends his buying orders to the mail order house is doing his level best to block not only new industries coming here but to cut the amount of employment already created in merchandising.

JEW IS NOT DOMINANT

Despite the prestige still attached to the name of Rothschild, it is a curious fact—though one which Hilaire Belloc studiously ignores—that the Jew is neither dominant nor even greatly influential in British finance.

A careful scrutiny of the directors of the five great joint-stock banks, with their branches covering the entire country, reveals the name of only one Jew. And he, it is whimsically pointed out in the "City", is stone deaf so that his activity in board-meetings is somewhat limited. It is difficult to take seriously the intimations from Belloc, Chesterton & Co. that the whole country is prostrate in the grip of the Jew.

Turning to the great private banks it is universally agreed that the ablest is Schroeder's, a non-Jewish banking firm founded by a German. Next might come Baring Brothers, also non-Jewish, and third, perhaps, most judges would place the old and well-known house of Rothschild.

A hundred years ago, before English and Scotch bankers had "found" themselves and had mastered the intricacies of foreign exchange, the house of Rothschild was certainly in the first rank in capital and in that direct political power which in that era went with the control of credit. England's presence in Egypt to-day and many of the half-forgotten ramifications of her nineteenth century policy in the Levant may unquestionably be traced in part at least, to Rothschild investments.

But it has been at least fifty years since an English or Scotch bank has had to borrow an expert from the Jews or the Germans to manage any branch of modern banking.

Trading in bullion, both gold and silver, is pretty much in the hands of Jewish brokerage houses and Jews are prominent in the foreign exchange field in London. These are extensive fields and admittedly lucrative, but no one in the "City" ever suggests that they are capable of that indefinite manipulation visualized by the anti-Semites.

Dutchy's Diary

Mostly About Weather

I was talking to a Front street merchant yesterday who complained about the weather. Of course there is nothing unusual about that, but the interesting thing to me in the tale of woe was his remark that spring weather always took the pep out of him. A period of laziness, or something akin to that, was ushered in by the first real thaw, he said, and he did not begin to feel right again, until about the time when spring flowers begin to peep through the grass in the merry month of May. The merchant could give no reason for this strange melody. It was so, that was all.

It seemed incongruous to us, for one imagines that in the Spring, the time of new life, when nature retouches a world with her magic brush, man should catch the spirit of the season, should begin to feel some how or other that it was time to expand his business or that the opportunity was at hand to give that house of his a coat of paint.

If the mildness of the past few days has not suggested the month of March to humans, it appears to have fooled one of the animal world at least. I was walking out on Bleecker last night and was startled out of countenance by a little hare that scooted past me, crossing the snow along side the sidewalk at a pace that seemed easily sixty per. If the little chap was not a March hare, he was certainly as wild.

As I looked out across the bare white fields beyond Bleecker, my thoughts went out to our friend of the summertime, the farmer who lives lives too far away to make his regular trip itno town when the roads are heavy.

He is a prisoner for the winter, barred from moving picture shows, the great white lights of Front street and association with the highbrowed city folk. Yet we envy him sometimes. He does no worrying over his supply of fuel. He carries on a hard day's work looking after the live stock and attending to odds and ends, but he has usually a long comfortable evening in cosy home, with a radio, if he so desires. He chats with neighbors close at hand and knows his neighbors as friends in a way not understood by most city folk.

Several friends of mine expressed genuine sorrow last night when they read the news in The Daily Intelligencer that Floyd Collins had been found dead by the rescuing party in the Sand Cave. I imagine they echoed the sentiments of thousands and thousands of others in Canada and the United States, those who have been following the strange story day by day.

We are so far removed from Kentucky, we do not know exactly the importance of explorations in the Sand Caves. It may be that Collins gave his life in comparatively vain endeavor. Yet had the man been pulling a publicity stunt in the first place, his predicament later would have excited the sympathy of the average man. Lifesaving, whether it happens to be the story of dog teams rushing anti-toxin to a northern outpost, of a racing boat to a sinking sister ship or miners digging into the bowels of the earth, is ever interesting to human beings.

SOMETHING NEW IN EVENING DRESSES

London, Feb. 17—In their search for something new in the way of styles for evening gowns, London dressmakers have visited the pantomime and designed a Harlequin frock on traditional parti-colored lines. One such is of a deep scarlet crepe-de-chine, appliqued all over in silver tissue and black and cut in a triangular pattern.

The prevalent straight up-and-down fashion silhouette is adapted to the characteristics of a Harlequin mode, while the close fitting draperies of the day, which reveal the line of the figure, are also suggestive of the close fitting garments which Harlequin wears.

An entire carload of Canadian ale, seized at the International bridge, was dumped yesterday into the Niagara River.

WHAT LAWS CALL FOR (Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are many persons who think that all our laws have a more or less bifurcated two-headed or two-ended purpose or implication. Moreover, there are some who believe that is what a law is for—to say one thing and do or permit to be done something else altogether.

THE REAL ALBERTA CHINOOK

Calgary Albertan

There is nothing like the merry chinook when it gets properly under way. It is always most appreciated after a period of cold weather, and then it is the merriest sound in the world. If that gentle jester who wrote senseless verses in an American weekly paper about Medicine Hat and the weather could be set out where the full force of the chinook would strike him, he might get some information about what real weather is.

CANADIAN FISH

Ottawa Citizen

However the details may be worked out, it has long been apparent that Canada's great fishery resources might some day be developed to supply the British market. People in the British Isles appreciate the value of wholesome fish meals more than they do in Canada. Fresh fish is served almost every day at some meal. It has to be fresh, or better cured than some of the fish that is sold in Canadian inland towns.

FOREST CONSERVATION

Toronto Mail and Empire

For many years the advocates of forest protection have, in the almost literal sense of the term, been crying in the wilderness. The public are at last showing that they have ears to hear, and the protection of our forests is being urged to-day by the most influential commercial organizations by leading bankers and by thousands of individual citizens who have given thought to the matter. Economists and forestry experts who have brought technical knowledge to the study of our timber resources and of the conditions that menace the remnant of those resources have good reason to be encouraged by the crop of public opinion of their sowing that is now springing up over the country. The ruiner of national forests whether wildfire or slovenly lumberman, is responsible for more than the destruction of standing timber. A great part of the wooded area that has been laid bare was fulfilling its only function by producing trees. When the forest has been destroyed, the highland on which it stood ceases to be a cover for moisture, our rainfall wanes, our streams dwindle and lose their utility as means of local navigation, for the breeding of fish, and for the development of hydro-electric power. Deserts have been produced by the axe of the land clearer and by conflagration. The country must welcome all agencies at work for the preservation of our forests and for the reforesting of areas that have been stripped and have been found useless for agricultural or other economic purpose. To-day a forest protection meeting is being held in this city under the auspices of the Canadian National railways. In this gathering government forestry officials and professional foresters will discuss methods for safeguarding the wooded areas in the railway belt that crosses Northern Ontario and Quebec. Meteorology is nowadays being enlisted in the war against that greatest enemy of the public domain, the forest fire. If the matter of forest protection is energetically taken up and followed by the railway corporations, by the several provincial governments, and by the Dominion government, the country will soon be strongly armed against the dangers to our timbered tracts. A continued campaign of education will produce results of tremendous value to this country.

To-day's Smile

"I ate a worm," said the little tot in the kindergarten.

The teacher, thinking that perhaps the child had really done such a thing, protested warmly over the undesirability of the proceeding. "Why, just think," she said as a final argument, "how badly the mamma worm felt to have her little baby eaten up."

"I ate she's mamma too," was the triumphant rejoinder that proved too much for the teacher.

The Blind Man With a Gun

SINCERITY and devotion to a single aim are good. But when these are accompanied by ignorance it is like a blind man with a gun.

It is well to be earnest, and you cannot accomplish much unless you are wholly devoted to some principle, but if you are ignorant at the same time you are a blind man with a gun.

Mr. Bryan is doubtless sincere in his opposition to evolution.

It is well for a man to say as William Lloyd Garrison, "I must and will be heard." But he is of value only when he stands for the truth.

Doubtless many in Russia are in earnest. Doubtless the Bolsheviks, Communists and anarchists, many of them, are sincere. They are blind men with a gun.

The purpose of education and learning what the past has to say to us is largely to remove the blindfold from our eyes.

Anyone can be in earnest, but it takes time and patience to become informed. Earnestness is only good when it is added to knowledge.

Those who can see, that is those who are informed and in possession of the truth, should be armed to protect themselves and the innocent bystanders against the shooting that often takes place among the uninformed.

Intelligence persists. Truth is mighty and will prevail. Wrong fails eventually.

But all this does not prevent that which is evil from doing much harm when it is in possession of the means of force.

The hordes of Germans and Austrians were doubtless very sincere in the late war, but they were not informed.

It is not man's first duty to be honest and candid. It is his first duty to inform himself. Honesty and candor are of no value in an ignorant man.

No man has been able to calculate the damage that is done by ignorance. It has destroyed the lives of thousands, it has encouraged pests, it has been fatal to nations.

The time was when people used to gather in the churches and pray against the advance of a pestilence. Nowadays they use carbolic acid. One is earnestness without information and other is based upon actual knowledge.

It makes no difference what a fine and noble character the captain of a ship may have unless he is master of the art of navigation. It makes no matter how grand and noble a general may be if he does not understand the art of war.

Thirty Years Ago

Our readers will remember the mention we made some days ago of a family being on the verge of starvation Yesterday Constable Johnson drove the mother and her children over to her father-in-law in Prince Edward. On arriving there the father refused to admit his daughter-in-law and her children and they were left at a neighbor's for the time being.

The police still continue to find the front and rear doors of business places open at night despite the warnings given through these columns. It is simply inviting burglars.

Driving is now the favorite amusement. Yesterday the streets presented a lively appearance owing to the number of handsome turn-outs that were moving about, and the air was merry with the jingle of the sleigh-bells.

The directors of the Hotel Quinte met yesterday and fixed the date of opening for the 28th inst. It was originally intended to open the house on March 1st but as that date falls on Friday the unlucky day, the date was fixed as above.

Letters To The Editor

WHAT IS THE INFLUENCE

What is the mysterious influence that is staying Ottawa's hand from placing an embargo upon the exportation of unmanufactured pulpwood?

Not that of the farmer and settler, because the organized farmers of Quebec, who are principally concerned, have recently gone on record as favoring an embargo;

Not fear of hurting the private wood owners because the paper manufacturers have agreed to provide them with a market;

Not fear of public opinion, because public opinion all over the country is clamoring for action that will keep our raw materials in Canada and provide employment here in their utilization;

Not the influence of the public press of Canada which, with the exception of a corporal's guard, is a unit in favour of an embargo;

Not fear of reprisals on the part of the United States, because the United States has embargoed our wheat and put a prohibition tariff against most of our products, including all paper derived from pulpwood except newsprint which it could not do without and admits free to serve its own purposes, regardless of any action we may take;

Not lack of conviction upon the part of the Government as to the necessity for an embargo, because they have already sought and obtained a special dispensation from parliament for the very purpose;

Not cowardice on the part of the Ottawa authorities, because it is inconceivable that all members of the government can be absolute cravens;

What, then, is the mysterious, sinister, unnamed influence which persists in forcing this issue, of so much vital moment to the Canadian people, into the background?

What is it?

MINES DIRECTOR RETURNS TO ANSWER

St. John, N. B., Feb. 17.—As the Canadian Pacific steamship Montrose docked here from Liverpool Sergeant J. F. A. Brown, of the Manitoba provincial police, arrested Joseph Myers, said to be a director of the Bingo Mines in Manitoba, on a charge stated to be issuing a financial statement not in accordance with facts. He stoutly denied the charge and said, "This is one of the most diabolical outrages that has ever been received or executed. I left England voluntarily to return to Canada to defend my good name, and I am confident that I can prove to be false every charge that has been or could be made."

He was accompanied by his lawyer, L. D. Moroswick, of Winnipeg.

Sergeant Brown, Mr. Myers and Mr. Moroswick left for Winnipeg.

Russell Scott is Bitter Over Fate

Declares He Must Hang Because He is Honest

Chicago, Feb. 17—Russell T. Scott, sentenced Saturday to be hanged April 17, for the murder of Joseph Mauer, is today bitter over what he terms the blindness of justice. "Why should the state exact the extreme penalty of me?" he asked. "I was not guilty of killing Mauer. I was not a gunman. I had devoted years of my life to the service of humanity. If I were a gunman I could have made a plea and gotten off with a year in the Bridewell, but being honest I am told I must hang." Scott believes however that hope is not yet lost. If his father is successful in raising money to appeal he is confident the supreme court will order a retrial. "And when that occurs the witnesses will come in and tell the truth which they did not do at the other rial," he declared.

K. of C. Dance Was Mirthful Event

Hundreds Tripped to Gay Music of the Ewart Orchestra

Each season when the officers and members of Belleville Council, Knights of Columbus, announce their Annual At Home, those guests who are on their extensive invitation list, know that there is an enjoyable time in store for them.

Monday night, the Annual At Home was held at the Moose Auditorium, and as usual the hundreds of guests who crowded the spacious dancing auditorium again enjoyed the happy time which they had anticipated.

Diligent committee workers evolved an extensive and beautiful decorative scheme, which provided an ideal background for the function. Streamers, pennants, and other decorations banked the walls, elusive and vari-colored balloons hanging in tantalizing clusters, to be used to mirthful advantage later in the evening.

Palms and other floral decorations added to the beauty of the auditorium and made fitting background for the fickle playing of vari-colored light shafts.

It was a gay and pleasant sensation to the eye when into this scenery, a swaying conglomeration of color and gaiety supplied by hundreds of guests—a number of whom were from out-of-town stepped off to the music for the first dance which opened at 8-45 o'clock. It must have been an inspiration to Mr. Ewart and members of his six-piece Harmony Orchestra of Toronto who delighted the dancers with their new and interesting reportoire of fox trots and waltzes. Besides the six-piece orchestra, Mr. Ewart introduced a singer, who assisted throughout the evening in injecting added interest in to the numbers.

A most unique and extremely happy novelty dance was supplied after lunch, when eight men, who had been handed tickets during lunch, were required to race one another about the hall, the course being designated by corner posts and the "instrument of locomotion" being kiddie kars Mr. Douglas Elliott finally eliminated Mr. C. Dier for the first honors. This was the premier novelty of the night.

Then of course the balloon dance created much fun, adventure and hilarity as balloon dances usually do, incidentally supplying the contrast to the dreamy and interesting moon waltzes which interspersed the lengthy and carefully prepared dancing program. Mellow tints of vari-colored light from the revolving stage lantern played upon the dancers—a melange of color—a whirl of syncopated ecstasy.

During the evening a dainty lunch was served by the busy committee members, whose evident aim was to satisfy in every manner.

The following officers were in charge of the function:

A. Bernard Collins, Grand Knight; John Fitzgerald, Lecturer; Thos. R. Barrett, Fin.-Sec.

ICE CROP HARVESTING

Practical Methods Suggested for [illegible] Farm Storage

Ice May Be Formed In Moulds—Artificial Ponds—How to Cut the Blocks—Loading and Packing—The Use and Abuse of Sawdust.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The ice crop every winter in Canada is an enormous one, and if it could be marketed in the cities for summer use, the revenue would amount to many millions of dollars. The farmers must rely upon the ponds, rivers and lakes close by for their supplies, as it has not been found practicable to ship ice by rail. In some sections ice is not available, as there are few if any bodies of water large and pure enough to freeze water to sufficient thickness. Farmers could make their own ice, weather permitting, by making a few ice moulds close to the well and gradually freezing them full, or by making a solid block of ice in a metal lined chamber by pumping into it a little water every day or so and allowing it to freeze solid. Twenty cakes of ice, each 18 inches square and 12 inches thick, would make a ton of ice as stored.

The Artificial Pond.

Still another method for manufacturing ice on the farm is to make an artificial pond where there is an abundant supply of water available from well or spring and the pumping is done by power or hydraulic ram: The area required to produce a ton of ice is not great, depending of course on the thickness of the ice. If the probable freezing will make ice 12 inches thick but thirty-five square feet of pond surface is required for each ton needed.

The usual method of harvesting the supply of ice for the farms is to cut it from some nearby pond, stream or lake and haul it home and store it in the ice house, or some form of enclosure where it will cover deep with dry sawdust. The source of ice should be free from contamination and clean of weeds and other vegetable matter.

Harvesting the Crop.

The method consists of the following operations,—

(1) Cleaning off the snow, if any, by means of a suitable form of scraper. The snow is either dragged off to the shore or pulled into windrows, depending on the size of the area.

(2) Marking off the ice into squares or laying off the field. This operation should be done accurately in order to have blocks of equal size and cut straight and even to make handling and packing in the house as economical as possible. Success in this depends largely on getting the first line straight, and this can be done by stretching a line between two stakes and placing a straight edge board 12 or 14 feet long along the line, and marking the ice with hand tool or hand plough along the edge of the board. The board is moved along as the marking is done, piece by piece. After marking in one direction is completed it is necessary to establish a line across the area which is at right angles to the first direction. Probably the best way to start this is by using a carpenter's large square made of pieces of straight-edge boards 10 or 12 feet long, and tied across the corner to hold them fast at angle of 90°. Once the first line is marked straight and at right angles to the first line the rest can easily be marked off properly.

Cutting the Ice.

The ice is cut both ways by either a horse-drawn ice plough or a circular saw driven by a gasoline engine, the whole mounted on a sled pushed along by hand. The latter method of cutting is very satisfactory and is economical, when cutting is done on a large scale, as in the case with a large ice dealer or group of farmers harvesting their ice co-operatively. The ice field is usually cut in one direction with the machine and to a point two or three inches of the full depth. The long strips one way are detached from the field by striking into the saw cut with a heavy chisel, and then pushed up to the loading platform and there cut up into blocks by a hand saw or by the chisel in case the field has been cut both ways by the ice plough or power saw. When a small quantity of ice is harvested the cutting is done by saws.

Loading and Packing the Ice.

There are several devices used for loading the ice on the sleigh, wagon or motor truck, depending upon the amount of ice being handled. The main object in this case is to get a mechanical outfit that is cheap, convenient to operate and which will save the handling of the ice by hand. A small hoist, or a horse-power driven elevator answers very well.

It is advisable to store the ice on cold, dry days as it will be better for handling and will keep better after storage. The cakes should all be the same size, and be evenly cut, in order that they may be packed together with as little air space as possible. Any spaces should be filled with small pieces of ice. The more compact the mass of ice the better it will keep. Below the ice there should be a foot of dry sawdust or shavings, and as the filling proceeds the same material should be packed between the ice and the walls. Do not put sawdust about individual cakes of ice. Pack the ice with a little dip toward the centre, so that it cannot press outwards against the walls. After the ice is stored there should be a couple of feet of sawdust put over the top. O. A. C. Bulletin 208 on Cold Storage is free for the asking.—R. R. Graham, Department of Physics, O. A. C., Guelph.

Toronto, Feb. 17—The Presbyterian Church Association is having a bill prepared by the McCarthy law firm for presentation to the Legislature, the objective being to compell a two-thirds vote being necessary by congregations voting for Union before they can take the church property into the United Church.

Johnstone Academy Never So Crowded

As It Was at Moira Chapter, Masonic Event Last Night

There is every promise today that there will be another interesting annual dance in Belleville in future. It was the splendid success of the First Annual Dance given by the Officers and Companions of Moira Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, No. 7, G.R.C., last night, which supplied the "food for such thought."

Belleville folk who have been dancing for years state that they have never seen the Johnstone Dancing Academy so crowded as it was last night on this occasion, and it has been stated that as many as 390 persons had congregated before midnight, others coming later.

Dancing which commenced at 8.45 o'clock started an evening which for fun and enjoyment, was practically unprecedented. The program of dances, which had been carefully arranged, was most unselfishly versatile, and everyone had an opportunity of indulging in his or her favorite dance at some time during the evening's fun which terminated at 2 a.m. Fox trots, waltzes and moon waltzes predominated but Ry. Waltzes and Roberts' Two Steps "brought down the house".

One of the most important adjuncts of any dance is the music, and here it might well be reminded that the music dispersed at this dance last night by members of the Belleville Black and White six-piece orchestra was of the very highest order. The Black and White orchestra musicians certainly excelled themselves, and must have received added encouragement by the persistent rounds of applause which followed each number. Members of this orchestra deserve the credit which they are surely receiving about town today.

During the evening a very dainty lunch was served to the guests which served to refresh and invigorate for the interesting second half of the well balanced program.

The following gentlemen who compose the committee in charge of the successful function are to be congratulated on the success of their first adventure: J. A. Wilson, Garn Dobbs, J. B. Boyce, Don Bleecker, Chas. Hanna, M.P., J. Bankier, F. H. Chesher, Chair., Geo. Dulmage, Geo. Cornish H. Wallbridge and Wm. Cooke, Sec'ty.

From many places in Quebec Province comes news that the recent heavy rains, ice and high winds have been responsible for serious damage to property. A number of bridges have been washed away, low-lying lands have been inundated by floods and live stock at a number of points has been saved only with great difficulty. Farmers have suffered heavy losses, it is said, but the advent of colder weather has put a stop to further ravages. At Matane, on the south shore, a large section of the wharf located near the mouth of the Matane River has been carried away by heavy ice.

Will Canadians Cringe Under "Big Stick"?

United States Paper Magnates Threaten To Punish Canadians If Pulpwood Embargo Enacted

Spineless Attitude of Premier King and His Government on Important Issue Threatens Self-Respect of People He Represents

EMBARGO KEEPS FA CTORIES IN CANADA

From various sources in the past two or three years, there has come the taunt that Canada is under the thumb of the United States of America.

This taunt has been hidden under the cloak of the "annexation" cry, in mildly sarcastic interviews with old country people who view with alarm the manner in which Canadians have taken up American sport, American movies, American radio and American theatrical companies.

The loyal Canadian laughs off the shaft of criticism. He has a great affection for his country, rooted deep enough to prevent it being blown away by the breezy influence of the modern business and social life of the republic to the south.

But unfortunately for Canada at the present time, a Government rules at Ottawa which does not by any means reflect the character of the Canadian people. Canada has a Prime Minister who has for a time gained his livelihood under the American flag, who attended the Universities of Chicago and Harvard and who has shown a distressing lack of backbone in guarding the rights of Canada.

One of the most pressing duties facing the Dominion now is the placing of an embargo on pulpwood.

It is a fact that thousands upon thousands of tons of wood are being shipped from the forests of Canada across the border line into the United States every year, lost to Canada forever. Those who benefit are rich ciitzens of the republic and their Canadian associates, who have gained control of the forest tracts. Canada's populace as a whole stands by helplessly, gaining nothing by the industry and watching capital wealth vanish under their eyes.

Canadians harbor a very healthy regard for their cousins in the republic. A real neighborly spirit exists. But Canadians do not believe that that spirit is violated in enacting a regulation that protects their own natural resources and compels paper mill operators to manufacture Canadian wood into paper in Canada.

The following written by J. Herbert Hodgins for MacLean's Magazine explains the situation very nicely. He says:

"Not so long ago an Ontario town made a desperate effort to secure the branch factory of a United States industry. The Board of Trade sent emissaries to interview the executive officers of the parent institution. Free sites were offered. Finally the ratepayers passed a money by-law; the town actually went so far as to assist in financing the new venture.

"The campaign cost a pile of civic money. But the ratepayers counted it worth while, because of its results.

"It just goes to show the length some towns will go to get an industry, with its attendant new population.

"Take any one of Ontario's St. Lawrence river towns. I have in mind, Prescott—lazily picturesque and with a charming hint of historic days.

I can't help wondering how Prescott would view the prospect of getting a million dollar industry. It would probably be as startled as Rip Van Winkle when he looked upon a new era.

"Yet, directly across the River St. Lawrence from Prescott is Ogdensburg, N.Y., humming with an industry that, despite the laws of sound economics, was filched from just some such Canadian community as Prescott.

"Two years ago the Algonquin Paper Corporation started in Ogdensburg to manufacture mechanical pulp and newsprint. Here is a plant capable of an annual production of 22,500 tons of newsprint and 20,000 tons of mechanical pulp. It is not located in the midst of forest areas. As far as the source of its supplies is concerned, there is no legitimate reason why it should be located in Ogdensburg; except that as a river town the pulpwood logs may be shipped direct to the mill.

"The Algonquin Paper Corporation gets its raw materials from Canada. The value of its annual newsprint production alone, at last year's prices, approximate $1,575,000.

One million dollars of this distributed in wages should measurably add to the community's progress.

"It would be life-blood for a town like Prescott: for any Canadian town.

"Instead, Canada got probably less than $200,000 for the pulpwood which the Ogdensburg mill turned into a product worth $1,575,000.

Ottawa's Amazing Inaction

The procrastinations and spinelessness of the Government at Ottawa is directly to blame for the fact that Ogdensburg, in the state of New York, and not Prescott, in the province of Ontario, got the million dollar wage circulation.

By all the logical laws of nation-building, Prescott or some similar Canadian community should have secured the Algonquin Paper Corporation's mill. Dependent upon a Canadian raw product, or natural resource, the Ogdensburg industry flourishes—the corporation paid a two per cent. dividend upon its $650,000 capital stock from the very first three months' earnings—because of the amazing inaction of our federal administration in failing to clap on a pulpwood embargo.

Canada "gets it in the neck" because Ottawa fails to stop the flow of unmanufactured wood to the mills of another country for immediate competition with Canadian mills.

"The Algonquin Paper Corporation is not an isolated instance. There is the book-paper mill presently being established by the Chicago Tribune, publishers also of Liberty and the N.Y. Daily News, at North Tonawanda, six miles above the upper rapids of Niagara Falls. It was built in the United States instead of in Canada from which it draws its raw materials, because the Fordney-McCumber tariff law assesses a customs duty of one cent a pound and ten per cent. on all printing papers other than newsprint.

"Then, too, the mills in the United States which operate upon Canadian wood escape many of the overhead charges in connection with their wood supply that Canadian mills must carry. They enjoy an unique advantage in the cost of their "raw." When Canadian mills are operating upon reduced schedules, or are entirely shut down, these overhead charges continue. But an American mill in similar circumstances is relieved.

"Therefore under the existing free outlet of Canadian pulpwood it was 'good business' for the Algonquin Paper Corporation to locate in Ogdensburg rather than in Prescott. Similarly, the Chicago Tribune cannot be blamed.

How to Get It

Dealing then with the problem of how to get this embargo, Mr. Hodgins says:

Canada has had convincing experience of the value of an embargo. Tested both in Ontario and Quebec, as far as Crown lands are concerned, it has actually resulted in the establishment of the great Canadian pulp and paper industry as we have it to-day, second only to agriculture in financial and economic importance to the Dominion.

There was really no such industry in Canada up to the time of the placing of an embargo upon Crown lands wood in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. If this action, affecting eighty-five per cent. of our forest wealth, has been of such inestimable value to the country, why should the Government hesitate with regard to the remaining fifteen per cent?

The fact remains, however, that the Government IS strangely hesitant.

A tragic depletion of our forest heritage goes on. A great potential Canadian industry is menaced. The Government looks on, apparently unmoved.

What are the facts of the government's indecision?

In the early part of 1923 parliament voted the Government power to impose an embargo—by a majority surprisingly large in view of the Government's luke warm attitude.

On June 20, 1923, as a result, the Export Act was amended to provide for a pulpwood embargo.

In the meantime "something happened." The Government changed its mind. On August 14, 1923, it passed the now famous "secret" order-in-council.

"This order-in-council," says Frank J. D. Barnjum, "was passed at the sole request and on the sole behest of the American monied interests and their Canadian associates, who profit the exploitation of Canada's natural resources."

Months intervened before the Government consented to make public this order-in-council. It reads as follows:

"Order in Council, passed August 14, 1923.

"P.C. 1563, at the Government House, Ottawa, Tuesday, the 14th day of August, 1923.

"Present.

"His Excellency, the Governor General in Council.

"His Excellency the Governor General in Council on the recommendation of the Right Honorable W. L. Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister, and under and in virtue of the powers conferred by The Export Act, as amended, is pleased to order and doth hereby order and declare, with reference to the provisions of an Act to amend The Export Act, chapter 46 of the statutes passed at the recent session of Parliament, that whatever regulations may be made thereunder regarding the export of pulp wood from Canada such regulations shall not be made applicable to or effect the exportation of pulpwood exported in fulfillment and in pursuance of the terms of bona fide written contracts duly executed and delivered previous to the first day of June, 1923; provided, however, that in the case of contracts calling for deliveries over a period of more than ten years from the date hereof the exemption hereby granted shall not extend beyond the period of ten years from the date hereof.

(Sgd.) "E. J. LEMAIRE,
"Clerk of the Privy Council"

In short, the order-in-council nullifies the embargo which parliament wanted.

Then shortly, followed the appointment of a Royal Commission on Pulpwood. As the Montral Star describes it: "A peripatetic commission last year went gallivanting all over the country at the expense of the taxpayers to collect more evidence on the question—evidence that did not need a commission, since it was already on file at Ottawa."

Yet $70,000 or more of public funds went to the upkeep of the Royal Commission on Pulpwood.

And did we get "value received" for our seventy-odd thousands of dollars?

In a nut-shell the Royal Commission finds as follows:

The Commission takes the view that the actual determination of a policy must rest with the Government."

So Parliament resumes this month with the pulpwood problem back on the Government's hands.

Will the Government have the courage to face this national issue with courage? The time for trifling, for sidestepping and quibbling is passed. "Definite, radical and constructive steps are of transcending importance," as the Pulpwood Commission warns.

Prohibition of the export of unmanufactured wood would imediately save 35,000,000 trees annually to Canada. Thirty-five million trees constitute a pile of wood four feet high, four feet wide and two thousand miles long.

Initiation of the embargo would not require the expenditure of one dollar of the taxpayers' money. It would merely entail the passing of a simple order-in-council, for which authority was voted by parliament two years ago.

What is it that stays the hand of the Government of Ottawa? With the benefits of the embargo so apparent, so imperative to Canada at the present time, why is the deed put off?

The answer is not hard to find. Big interests of the United States have whispered that retaliations on the part of the big republic would follow such an embargo, and Premier King and his kind have not shown the courage to stand up against this kind of talk.

It is the unwillingness of the Government in power to help Canada stand on her own feet that is responsible not only for the delay in enforcing a pulpwood embargo, but for the present industrial depression throughout the Dominion. And the longer a government is allowed to carry on a low-tariff policy in Canada, the greater will be the influence of rich neighbors to the south.

Down in New York the other day, members of the American Pulp and Paper Association became most outspoken against the proposed embargo.

Down in New York the other day, members of the American Pulp and Paper Association became most outspoken against the proposed embargo.

Here is the interesting account of that meeting in New York as reported in the Financial Post of last week:

Any Canadian who had sat in at last week's meeting of the American Pulp and Paper Association would probably have become a convert to the Canadian pulpwood embargo at once. The fear expressed by the various speakers at that convention as to the embargo's possible effect on their industry, in weakening it while the Canadian industry would become stronger, seemed to be a most effective answer to the arguments of Canadian opponents of the embargo that the shipments of pulpwood from Canada are small and unimportant in any event.

It is evident that the United States paper makers and publishers intend to use all political force available to fight the proposed restrictions, either in the shape of an embargo or an export tax. The statement of Dr. Hugh P. Baker, secretary of the American Paper and Pulp Association, that they are asking the United States government to recognize the fact that the embargo is designed to embarrass consumers and gain control of the American paper market points the direction that will be followed.

An Oratorical Outburst

Another significant speech at the convention in New York, delivered by Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, was significant in the threats of what the United States would do to Canada if this country enforced the pulpwood restrictions.

Extracts from Senator Moses' speech are reprinted here in order to indicate the trend of United States thought on the question. The quotation is the New York Times' report:

"There cannot at any stage of the proceedings that produced the present crisis have been anything but a selfish purpose to dominate the American market. In the face of that stands the dominant American policy to hold the market, the best in the world, and extend it to the foreign markets on a basis of honest competition.

"If it can be there are those of our neighbors forgetful of the century of peaceful and amicable relations that has prevailed, surely no one here will forget the pride with which the United States hailed the negotiation of the Rush-Bagot Treaty, and no one here, looking back on the century or more of unruffled peace, can now fail to remember that the first gesture in what may prove to be a disastrous trade war was made not by Columbus but by the Lady of the Snows.

"We are speaking now as Americans as business men, as friends of peace, when we try to point out the course on which she seems to be embarking, urged by a group that forms a noisy, aggressive and insolent minority motivated by self-interest. It cannot be our neighbor will give heed to such a cry and will attempt to do its urging against a great-hearted friend who wishes none but good to Canada.

Threats of Retaliation

"We cannot forget that within our generation a great golden stream of American capital has gone into the northlands to help build up its communities and that many of our people have gone there.

"But if the co-operation we have extended seems now about to be repulsed, let it be known of all men it is not we who have been taken the aggressive part and let it be known that if it comes to us we are not unready.

"Our tariff laws give us ample protection against discriminating and unfair competition. Do not forget that there happens to be in the United States several thousand miles of Canadian railroads on which we may lay regulation, if not embargo.

"Do not forget that we control many of the raw products that are necessities of life and industry in Canada, especially in the paper industry. An embargo on coal or on sulphur, each of which lies within a stroke of the pen of the president of the United States, would be sufficient protection.

This is wielding the "big stick" with a vengeance.

Premier King may be cowed by it, but Canadians with a sense of pride in their ability to travel their own road, secure in the wealth of her natural resources and in the inherent ability of her sons and daughters, will refuse to cringe.

The pulp wood embargo is needed and it must come even at the risk of upsetting the Liberal Government at the wheel.

FLOWERS AND GRASS INSTEAD OF SNOW

Stockholm, Feb. 17—The Swedes are accustomed to snow and ice for Christmas, and the sleigh drive to church early on Christmas morning through snowclad forests furnishing shelter from the cold northern winds, or over fields thickly covered with white, is the usual sleigh corts and automobiles thing. This year, however, the snowy landscape gave place to a springlike country where green grass, so unusual for the winter season, and even flowers, abounded. From the extreme south to the Polar Circle there was no snow to be found, and instead of the usual sleigh, catrs and automobiles carried the early churchgoers. Winter weather of this sort has not been experienced in Sweden in 75 years, and the high temperatures recorded in December 1924 smashed all records.

Throughout the month association football was played and the great New Year's day ice hockey match at Stockholm, a permanent fixture, gave way to football because there was no ice. Near Stockholm, over waters usually covered with thick ice, a rowing regatta was held.

VETERAN ENGINEER BRAVE IN CRISIS

Oklahoma City, Okla, Feb. 1 7.—Louis A. Pruitt, veteran engineer, "rode his engine down," when it plunged from the tracks near Kellyville, Okla., early Sunday. Then he crawled from the wreckage and though half blinded by a scalp wound and scalded by steam, he staggered three-quarters of a mile along the dark track and flagged a St. Louis-San Francisco passenger train to prevent it from crashing into the wreckage of his freight train.

Then after the passenger came to a stop, Pruitt attempted to return to the wreck train to aid A. W. Corley, fireman, and R. A. Kohl, head brakeman. The two trainmen were found dead. Pruitt was rushed to a hospital in Sapalpa.

The passenger train c arried 300 passengers. A defective switch is held responsible for the wreck.

Moresby Island, one of the largest of the minor group islands in the Gulf of Georgia, between Victoria, B.C., and the mainland, has been sold to Louis Gradbury, wealthy mining operator and land owner of California. Occupants of the Island are now moving off, to turn the property over to Mr. Bradbury and his associates. The island under the new control will be developed as a pleasure resort.

DOCTOR OBJECTS TO IODINE IN WATER

Kingston, Feb. 17.—In discussing the request of the Board of Education to the Board of Health that the city water supply be treated in order to eliminate cases of enlarged thyroid gland in the city, Dr. A. R. B. Williamson, the Medical Health Officer, stated Monday morning that the putting of iodine in the water supplied for the use of citizens is objectionable as it would be of benefit to some and harmful to other citizens.

"The proposal of the Board of Education to have Iodine put into the city water is objectionable," said Dr. Williamson, "While Iodine is beneficial to some its use would be harmful to others. Some diseases would be aggravated by the use of Iodine and to force everyone to use it in drinking water would not be justifiable. Those who require Iodine can now get it in tablet and other forms and should take it on the advice and direction of their physicians. This matter was discussed some time ago by the Board of Health and for the above reason no recommendation was made. It is questionable if the use of Iodine as suggested by the Board of Education would not leave the city open to suit for damages by anyone whose trouble was aggravated by this procedure.

"Tired and Worried Nervous and Despondent"

Mrs. M. Chevalier, Belle River, Ont., writes:

"For eight years I suffered from despondency and nervousness. Sometimes I could not sleep at night for worrying and the next day I would be so tired that my work was a burden to me. I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and can say I am now entirely relieved of the nervousness from which I used to suffer, and things do not worry me as they used to.

"Dr. Chase's Ointment also relieved me of eczema on my arms, which had bothered me for three years. My house is never without Dr. Chase's Medicines."

He was worth $40,000 —and didn't know it

John Parsons earned $2,400 a year. He carried $2,000 life insurance. He didn't realize:
—that his earning power was that of an invested fortune of $40,000.
—that, on the day of his death, his family's assets would be reduced from $40,000 to $2,000.

How long could they exist on $2,000? What would they do after it was spent?

John Parsons answered these and other disquieting questions that arose in his mind with a North American Whole Life Policy.

He chose this policy because he wanted a large insurance protection at an extremely low annual premium rate.

What is your annual income? How would your loved ones fare if they were deprived of it to-morrow?

The attached coupon will bring you our booklet "The Whole Life Policy." It tells you how easy it is to create an estate sufficient for your family's needs.

KINGSTON WINS; WHISTLES AND RITCHIE ON TOP; TIGERS & POINT ANNE VICTORS

Tigers Win First Point Anne the 2nd

But Losers Protest Both Games for Alleged Irregularities

Two fast games, one of which went five minutes overtime and the other ten minutes overtime, other features of which were very close scores, were high spots of the double header city league hockey attraction at the Turnbull street arena last night.

Both games were protested, also to add to the interest and excitement.

In he first tilt, the Tigers defeated the Plumbers when they notched their sixth counter in the five minutes overtime session, breaking the 5-5 tie which had deadlocked the squads into overtime. Plumbers protested the game because Tigers used Murray, a player whose name is alleged to decorate the Booster team roster.

Point Anne nosed the Consolidated Distillery team out of the honors in the second game which went ten minutes overtime, the final score being 5-4 The Corbyville players immediately protested the game because the Point Anne squad used players who have been playing in the Bay of Quinte hockey league this season with the Point Anne team.

In the first game, the Plumbers and Bengals stepped into the fray with gusto, but before the Plumbers could find their bearings, the Tigers had piled up four tallies. The Plumbers were not to be disheartened however, and when period number two opened, they also opened their "cutouts", holding the Tigers scoreless, while they cut down the lead by two. In the third spasm, the Plumbers grabbed their third off fast, before the Tigers saw "red".

Tigers finally forged ahead with a brace, but Cook for Plumbers took a pass from "Goddess Luck" and evened the count with one minute to go before full time. Tigers notched the "tale teller" however in overtime although Plumbers had nine shots on the citadel to victors' pair. Young Joe Murray, goalie for the Plumbers attracted the attention of old time fans with his good work.

In the second battle the hockey was fair all the way and the crowd remained to see the interesting finish. The ice was very good too last night considering the balmy weather.

"Pick" Arnott handled the bell and is just about the best little old referee of the season.

TWO N.H.L. GAMES WEDNESDAY CRUCIAL

Two very important games to the clubs engaged are scheduled for to-morrow night in the National Hockey League, and one of them is slated for the local arena, when the Ottawa Senators, who are striving for a place in the first division, and the play-off series for the championship, will oppose the fast-travelling St. Patrick's, who have won their last five games and are now dead-locked for second place with the world's' champion Canadiens. The other game will be in Montreal, where the Habitants visit the Forum to meet their fellow-citizens and Dandurand's crew must win to make sure of remaining in second place. The other pair of contestants, Hamilton and Boston, meet in the Hub this evening and the leaders should win from the lowly Bruins.

Kingston Disposes Of Havelock Team

Score of the Sudden Death Game Was 9 to 2

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 17.—Kingston intermediates qualified to meet Brampton-Uxbridge winner in the fourth round of the O.H.A. when they defeated Havelock in a sudden death game here last night, 9 to 2. Kingston had it all over their opponents, and it was only the good work of the Havelock goaler that the score was not twice as large.

The winners outskated their opponents and their back-checking was wonderful. It would be impossible to pick any stars in the Kingston team, as all of them worked as a well-scoring machine. Watts, at centre, was good, while Reynolds on defence, had no trouble in breaking up the opponents' attacks. Quinn, of Havelock, although inclined to rough things up, played a very consistent game.

Kingston had the edge in the first period, although it was quite evident that Havelock were going to rough things up like they did at Peterboro, but Harold Farlow checked this. The Havelock goalie certainly saved the situation many times.

Watts made the first score, after getting a pass in front of the net. Hargraft scored after Reynolds and Watts registered the next when he carried the puck the length of the rink. This goal was disputed, but Referee Farlow ruled it in. Hargraft got the first in the third, when he took Smith's pass, and Pollock got Havelock's second after 15 minutes. The Havelock goaler was knocked cold when Hargraft hit him in the face with the puck, the doctor stating his nose was broken, but he stayed in the game. The lineup:

Kingston—Goal, Rogers; defence, Reynolds and Roney; centre, Watts; wings, Hargraft and Smith; subs, Johnson and Lawler.

Havelock—Goal, Hooper; defence, D. Brennen and Quinn; centre, Pollock; wings, Wright and C. Brennen; subs, Copp and Gerald.

VARSITY REVENGED ON PETE'S ARENA

Peterboro, Feb. 17.—University of Toronto seniors came to Peterboro' last night and, in a rough game, beat the "Petes" 4 to 1, thus taking just revenge for the 4 to 1 defeat administered them by Peterboro' a month ago. Their checking was a feature of last night's game. There was water on the ice to start. The rough wore off in the second period, but in the third it was pitted with holes that tripped the players, bounced puck and generally contributed to the ragged play that marked the game. But U. of T. won the game on their merits.

Hudson was the star on the visiting team, shining throughout and contributing two goals toward the victory. With the winners bent on hard checking, there was not much combination and individual rushes marked the play with both goalers stopping enough in a period to last a whole normal game.

The puck rolled most of the evening and went soaring "into the gods" as often as it slid over the surface. Once, indeed, with the entire U. of T. team grouped around the Peterboro goal and Dwyer ready for a shot, the puck failed to come down, having been caught by a spectator in the gallery.

OSHAWA BONSPIEL STARTS TO-MORROW

Oshawa, Ont., Feb. 17.—Everything is in readiness for the annual bonspiel of the Oshawa Curling Club, to be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. With the weather man forecasting colder weather for to-morrow, all games in the inter-rink competition scheduled for to-night and to-morrow have been postponed in order to have the eight sheets of ice in perfect condition. The draw in the bonspiel will be made shortly after the arrival of the incoming trains on Wednesday morning, play to commence immediately after.

Whistles and Ritchies' Winners

At Double Header on Y.M.C.A. Alleys Last Night

The first game of the scheduled double-header brought the Whistles and Orioles together. All members of the Whistle team were on to their game last night as the scores will show. At the end of the first game the Whistles had lead of 111 points which they increased by another 150 points in the second game. Although the Orioles came back strong in the third game they could not over come their opponents lead of the first two games, the Whistles winning out by 417 points. E. Rutherford for the winners was high three string bowler of the evening with 599, while Robert Miles showed the way for the losers with 570. R. Miles also had the high single of the evening with 271.

The second game brought the Trailers and Ritchie's of the ladies league together. The Ritchie team rolling one of their best games to date were really never in danger of losing out although they rolled a good enough score to win any average game. For the winners Miss Vera Rainbird was the shining light when she rolled a single game of 198 and a three string score of 531. For the losers Miss Styles rolled a good steady game for a total of 401.

WOULD INVESTIGATE BASEBALL CHARGES

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The Hampden Park Senior Amateur Baseball League had a busy session at their meeting last night at Central Y. M. C. A., which was attended by all officers and many delegates. Among other important questions discussed, the following resolution was unanimously adopted and will be forwarded to the Amateur Baseball Association:

"Whereas many rumors relating to the amateur status of baseball players in local senior leagues have been circulated, we, the Executive of Hampden Park Senior Amateur Baseball League believe that the best interests of amateur ball in Toronto would be served and that the public confidence would best be maintained, if the truth or falsity of these rumors was immediately established.

"We therefore, urgently request the Toronto Amateur Baseball Association without further delay to arrange for an opportunity to be given all those who have proof of violation of amateur laws to present sworn evidence, and that upon receipt of such information, to take any further action deemed necessary.

Lady Wanderers, Natural Tread, Mixers and Officers Win

The Lady Wanderers added another win last night winning from the Hikers by over 400 pins. Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Tracey were high bowlers.

The Natural Tread took quite a drop from their 3000 score of last week. Last night they fell over 800 short of their previous score, but at that they chalked up a win from the Belleville Motors who had two men bowlers who never played before. High bowlers were Potter 628 and Saylor 528.

The Ink Slingers suffered their first defeat at the hands of the Mixers in the C. I. A. league last night losing by 300 pins. The first game was fairly even, but in the second the Ink Slingers rolled one of their poorest scores they ever rolled and their opponents were quick to take advantage of it, getting a lead of over 200 pins. In the third the Ink Slingers won by 1 pin. Smith and Boyle were high bowlers for their respective teams.

Supt's Mac. team were right in their best form last night when they spilled the maples for 2351 winning from the Road Dept. by 124 pins. Mr. J. D. McMillan was high bowler with 595 and J. Nasso was high for the Road Dept. Players and scores.

Worked Six Years For Batting Eye

Cliff Heathcote of Chicago Cubs Shows Perseverance Pays

New York, Feb. 17—It has been a long, uphill trek for Cliff Heathcote, outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, but he has reached the smoother path of stardom at last. Big league pilots in St. Louis and Chicago labored with Heathcote for six years until last season when he found himself and added the vital batting eye to his already acquired assets of speed and fielding ability.

Heathcote hit .308 last season, the first time he has entered the charmed circle since he first trod a big league base-path. Baseball men see in his case a change in the times and types—an era in the national game where leaders pay more attention to development, persevering against discouraging odds instead of casting aside talent which fails to show quickly signs of greatness.

Heathcote showed unusual promise when he first attracted the attention of Branch Rickey, St. Louis Cardinal manager. Cliff was bought by Rickey when he was with the York, Pa. independent team, shortly after graduating from Penn State College. Given some seasoning with Houston in the Texas League, he was recalled by the Cardinals in 1919. Rickey was convinced he had a real "find" when Heathcote hit .279 and fielded sensationally in his first big league season. But he developed fast along every line except batting.

Heathcote boosted his batting mark in 1920 to .284 but dropped down to .244 in 1921, and the following year was traded to Chicago for Max Flack, a veteran. Bill Killefer, pilot of the Cubs, then took Heathcote in hand and coached him patiently. He hit only .249 in 1923 and was not used regularly but last season he came into his own. Besides hitting .309 Heathcote stole 26 bases, ranking third to Carey and Cuyler of Pittsburg, and was third among the regulars of his league as a fielder.

O. H. A. Notes

The ability of Parkdale to come through in the pinch may be a deciding factor in the senior O.H.A. group final games with Peterboro at the Arena on Thursday and Saturday nights. When the Paddlers were not conceded a chance to win their scheduled game in Peterboro they came through nicely, defeating the Petes 1 to 0. Then against Aura Lee last week they appeared beaten, but with 40 seconds to go in the final period they tied up the game and won in over time. And being able to deliver the punch when it is most needed may give the Paddlers victory over Peterboro in the coming series, though Petes are favorites in the betting.

Niagara Falls and Stratford, the finalists in senior group No. 2, have met in four games this season, each winning two and both scoring the same number of goals, seventeen. Niagara Falls won at home 6 to 2 and in Stratford 4 to 1, while the Indians took one game in the Falls 5 to 3 and won at home 9 to 4. Stratford's victories came in the last two games played between the teams.

The Allan Cup finals will be played in Winnipeg this year, but the exact dates will not be announced by President Quilty, of the C.A.H.A., until some progress has been made in the eliminations. In the play-downs in the East, University of Toronto, as intercollegiate champions, will likely be drawn against the Ottawa district winners, while the Ontario champions will be called on to play the champions of Quebec. Home-and-home games will be played.

Peterboro and Parkdale will be able to present their strongest teams in the coming series, and Harry Watson, whose wonderful individual efforts gave the Paddlers victory in the game at Peterboro and against Aura Lee, will be at left. The battle along the rail between him and Bailey of the Petes, will be one of the features of both games. The Peterboro right wing player is considered one of the best prospects for pro. hockey playing in the O.H.A. this season.

The seats for the Parkdale-Peterboro series go on sale this morning, and tickets for both games must be purchased.

Dr. Bill Carson, former Varsity star and this season with Stratford, is playing the best hockey of his career. He is the player the Falls will have to watch in the semi-finals.

The action of the Rev. Adelard Delorme against the London Guarantee and Accident Company was settled out of court Saturday morning at Montreal. The insurance company had issued a policy for $3,000 on the life of his half-brother, the late Raoul Delorme. Since the acquittal of the abbe on a charge of murdering his half-brother, he has entered suits against the Sauvegarde Insurance Company and the London Guarantee and Accident Company to secure amounts of policies issued on his brother's life.

At the annual meeting of the Brant Sanitarium on Saturday it was announced that the daily maintenance of patients had been reduced from $2 during 1923 to $1.75 last year.

I attended an Institute meeting one day and heard one of the speakers close his address with this little verse:

> "Good, better, best;
> Never let it rest,
> 'Till your good is better,
> And your better, best."

It is the very best butter that we can make that must be packed for winter use.

Butter undergoes changes in the keeping, and two things necessary for good results when keeping butter for winter use are best quality of butter and low temperatures for holding.

Use Clean, Sweet Flavored Cream.

Use cream that has a clean, sweet flavor. Churn it at a temperature low enough to bring the butter in nice, firm granules in from 20 to 30 minutes.

If by any chance the butter comes soft, be very careful to get rid of the buttermilk. It will be necessary in a case of this kind to use an extra wash water.

Salt the butter in the usual way and work it thoroughly. Should the butter soften during the process of working, put it away in a cool place to become firmer before continuing the working.

As butter keeps best in a solid form, crocks or boxes are used for winter use.

Coat the Boxes Inside With Paraffine.

The boxes have a coating of paraffine on the inside, and it is necessary to line them with heavy parchment paper.

While many people have a 56-lb. box filled for winter, in some cases it would be much better to have it put in two 28-lb. boxes.

The crocks should be in good condition, free from cracks or breaks in the glazing.

When packing the butter, be sure to pack solidly. See that there are no openings in the sides, and that the corners are well filled.

If there is 8 or 10 lbs. of butter in a churning, do not put the whole lump into the crock and then try to pack it down. Rather put it in in pieces, making sure that each piece is solidly packed.

Finish the Package Off Neatly.

Finish the top off evenly, and cover with parchment paper. A thin layer of salt paste may be put over this before fastening down the lid.

With crocks it will be necessary to tie clean wrapping paper over the top after the lid has been put on.

All butter should be stored in a clean, dark place where the air is pure and the temperature is low and even.—Miss Belle Millar, O. A. C., Guelph.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

Then the pudding being quite ready for the baking, which could be trusted with more or less safety to Bridget, Elaine ran up to her own room, put on her hat and light summer jacket, and went into the garden.

Myrtle Cottage stood on the brow of the hill; the garden below it, the valley lower still, and it was perhaps the prettiest little garden in all Barefield. Just now it was rich with all the glory of the June roses, which with the pinks filled the air with perfume. The roses and the rest of the flowers were Elaine's charges, and nearly all her spare time was spent in this little floral paradise, in which she was, though she knew it not, the most beautious flower of them all.

She had intended when she came out to do quite a good hour's gardening, but after she had cut a handful of roses for the dinner table she began to feel disinclined for more serious work. The valley beneath her was lying in the evening sunlight, like a vignette of Birket Foster's; the ripple of the stream, the soft sough of the leafy branches, the langorous song of the birds, seemed to cry "Come!" invitingly, and after a moment or two of irresolution, she took up a book and went down the narrow path which wound from the garden down the hillside.

"I daresay I could get some trout," she said to herself, for among her other accomplishments Elaine threw a capital fly; "but I feel too lazy even for that."

To feel lazy one must be tolerably happy, and notwithstanding the major's chronic state of hard-upishness, and the butcher and baker, Elaine felt happy this evening. Given youth and perfect health, and a sweet temper, it is not difficult to be happy on a June evening, when all nature cries aloud in heavenly music: "I am the summer! Rejoice in me, and be glad!"

Elaine reached the bottom of the hill, and going to a favorite nook at the foot of the trunk of a huge oak which overhung the stream, she opened the book.

It was a volume of Gabriel Rossetti's poems. They are very beautiful; their music is perfect, their sentiment full of human passion. But you must have loved—and alas! have suffered—to thoroughly understand and appreciate them, and to Elaine the full meaning of exquisite lyrics was as yet a sealed book. Love, love. It was all love! What was this love for which men gladly died; and women—harder still!—won, lost, and still lived?

She let the volume sink on to her lap, and looked dreamily at the stream. No, it was all a mystery to her, and past comprehension. She had not yet seen the man whose face could cause her heart to thrill, whose voice could make the subtle music within her ears of which this poet spoke. Perhaps she never should meet him; perhaps she would go all through life without knowing what it all meant.

She looked up with something like a sigh, and suddenly the pensive expression on her face fled, and gave place to that look of reserve which had so successfully kept her admirers at arm's length.

A man was coming down the narrow path from the cottage, and Elaine saw that it was Captain Sherwin. She sat for a moment or two watching him, with her lips compressed and the dark brows drawn straight over her eyes, as was their wont when she was thoughtful or displeased; then she picked up the book, and springing to her feet walked quickly along the bank of the stream. She knew that if she had remained where she was for a few moments longer he would have reached a point on the hill from which he must have seen her, and she did not want to be seen by Captain Sherwin.

It was not because she particularly disliked him. For all her sweetness of disposition, Elaine was slow to make friends, and this Captain Sherwin was almost a stranger. The major had made his acquaintance at the club and had brought him to the cottage once or twice, and the captain had made himself very agreeable; so agreeable, that it was because of his smile that to reproach herself for not liking him very much. He was a tall, good-looking young fellow, with fair hair and a yellow moustache, which Bridget would have pronounced "golding." He had small delicate hands and feet, and a smile—once or twice Elaine fancied that it was because of his smile that she could not like him as well as he, no doubt, deserved; and yet most persons thought Captain Sherwin's smile a very pleasant one. And his voice, especially when he spoke to Elaine, was soft and persuasive. His eyes, too, were of a good blue, but they had an uncomfortable trick of seeking the ground when he spoke to one; and even when they met you glance to glance, were—well, not exactly shifty, but restless and uneasy.

For the rest, he was, if not already rich, sure to become so; and though he had left the service, had a good deal of the military bearing.

It was strange she did not like him; strange that she should, like a startled fawn, fly at his approach.

She walked quickly along the bank, her brows drawn straight over her lovely eyes, until she came to a rustic bridge. There she stopped and hesitated. The bridge spanned the river which divided the Nairne grounds from the meadows. If she crossed it she could find a perfect screen in the lilac bushes and laurels on the other side to conceal her from Captain Sherwin, and at most times she would not have hesitated for a moment, but as she stood and looked wistfully across the bridge she remembered that the marquis had come home and that the castle grounds were forbidden land to her under the circumstances.

She looked back. She could not see the captain, but she knew that he must be approaching. If she remained where she was, he would be at her side in a few minutes. After all, it was running a very slight risk. It was not likely that the dreaded marquis would be wandering about the grounds so soon after his arrival. She crossed the bridge quickly and dropped down on a grassy bank behind the lilac bushes, and—smiled with a sense of serene security.

A minute or two afterward she heard a man's footsteps on the bridge, and Captain Sherwin stood beside her. Stood with his hat in his hand, the sun turning his fair hair to gold, with a smile—the smile—upon his face.

"Good evening, Miss Delaine," he said in his soft voice; "I am awfully fortunate!"

"Fortunate?" she said almost coldly.

He smiled still more persistently.

"Yes. Your maid told me that you had gone down the hill, and I ventured to follow you; but I thought I had lost you."

"How did you find me?" she asked, almost in a tone of annoyance.

He glanced at her for a second, then his eyes dropped to her feet.

"By the grass that you had trodden down along the bank. The footmarks stopped at the bridge, and I guessed you had crossed it. It was a very lucky guess."

Elaine's face did not relax. It seemed to her that he had, so to speak, tracked her down, and her maidenly spirit resented it.

"This is private ground," she said, "and I have no right to be here."

"No right!" he said. "I should think Lord Nairne would feel honored by your presence."

Elaine rose and stood irresolute, wondering how long he meant to stay, and how—how she could get rid of him.

"I don't know Lord Nairne," she said for the sake of saying something; "but I should think he would feel anything but honored."

"Then he must be even a greater boor than he is credited with being," came the soft and instant response.

"Have you seen my father, Captain Sherwin? He was expecting you this afternoon, and has gone to the club to meet you—to play billiards, I think he said."

"No, I have not seen him; and it is too hot for billiards. How beautiful it is here."

"Yes," said Elaine, opening her book and glancing at it, as if she were only waiting for him to take his departure to resume her reading.

He stood glancing now at her downcast face and now at the stream, his lips—they were rather weak and effeminate—twitching and restless.

"The fact is, Miss Delaine," he said, and his voice was low and hurried, "I rode over to the cottage this afternoon to see you."

Elaine looked up, and the color rose to her face. Something in his manner and tone warned her now what was coming.

"Yes? We will go back," she said.

He put out his small white hand, but did not touch her.

"No, please, don't. I—I would rather say what I want to say here, where—where we are not likely to be interrupted."

Elaine was silent, and her face lost its color.

"Will not my father do?"

"Captain Blood" is Thrilling Picture

Another of Sabatini's Romantic Thrillers at [redacted] Griffin Theatre

Those who followed the serial story of Captain Blood in the Intelligencer or those who had read it in book form were well pleased with the screen version, when it was shown last night at Griffins. Captain Blood, the handsome the chivalrous, was an ideal pirate if such is possible. Anyway, he was the epitome of gallantry, his picturesque attire and curly wig, and is just as pirates are always pictured in the mind. J. Warren Kerrigan portrays Captain Blood and does it well too.

The story setting is back in the seventeenth century, when men wore long curls and silk stockings and sashes at the time the Duke of Monmouth was trying to dethrone James II. to state it in terms of history.

Dr. Peter Blood is sent away to the West Indies as a slave, after being charged with high treason, when he was discovered by the King's troops, attending a wounded rebel. In the slave market he is lined up, with others for sale, and Jean Paige, as Arabella Bishop, asks her uncle to purchase Blood although he looks very repulsive with dirty clothes and unkempt face. His knowledge of medicine soon wins him a better place than the other slaves, and he finds himself in love with Arabella, who is kind to him because she believes him to be a gentleman. The treatment of the slaves submitting them to the torture of the stocks, makes the blood run cold. It is all true to life and almost too realistic.

How the Spaniards invade the island and Captain Blood with the other slaves make a break for freedom, and soon are in control of the Spanish ship and all its treasure makes a tale that holds the interest right to the end.

When Captain Blood sails the seas as a pirate, he is cool and daring, but when in charge of Arabella he is less willing to take risks, and gives up piracy when she taunts him with being a "thief and a pirate." However he goes back to piracy, and the way he becomes governor of the island and wins Arabella, is a gripping story and makes a satisfactory climax.

The theatre was comfortably filled last night, but it is a picture that should fill the house. The novel was written by Rafael Sabatini, a past master in the art of writing romantic tales.

CO-OPERATIVE SELLING

What Ontario May Learn From California Fruit Growers

An Immense Range of Business—The Market Still Growing—Organized Effort Pays the Producer—Legume Inoculation—The New O. A. C. No. 144 Oat.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange shipped 17,857,417 boxes of oranges, lemons and grapefruit in 46,258 cars to points outside California; increased its proportion of all citrus fruit grown in the state from 38.7 to 75.8 per cent.; returned $55,223,450 to its members; lost through failure of customers only $6,926.70; did all this business at a cost of 1.51 per cent. of the delivered value and, including advertising, 2.48 per cent. Such is the record for its last financial year of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, whose products are best known to Canadian consumers by the brand "Sunkist."

An Immense Range of Business.

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange is the oldest and largest of the California Co-operatives. In the last twenty years it has returned to its members $546,000,000 from the sale of their products. It is a federation of 208 local associations with 11,000 members. The locals each have their own packing houses and are fully responsible, financially and otherwise, for their own local activities. They are grouped into 21 district exchanges. Each district exchange has one director on the board of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which owns the brand "Sunkist" and acts as the Central Selling Agency for all the fruit. It has business connections with 3,500 wholesalers, who serve 400,000 retailers, who in turn serve 113,000,000 consumers in Canada and the United States.

The Border Legion Pleased Many

Belle Feature is Big Story By a Big Author

Antonio Moreno and Helene Chadwick are featured in the latest Paramount production, "The Border Legion" now at the Belle Theatre. The story is an adaptation by George Hull of the novel of the same name by Zane Grey. William Howard directed.

To those who like a pleasing romantic drama, flavored with action and thrills, "The Border Legion" is going to prove one of the finest pictures they've ever seen on the screen at the Belle.

It's a big story, by a big author, produced in a big way with a big all-star cast. Rockliffe Fellowes, Gibson Gowland, Charles Ogle and Edward Gribbon are but a few of the well-known players appearing in support.

If it wasn't for the fact that the term "special" has been so misused, we'd be inclined to use it in describing "The Border Legion." Here's everthing that could possibly be crammed into a picture—and just a little more.

We liked "The Border Legion" and so will you!

ADDY—FAGAN

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Thomas' Anglican Church at ten o'clock this morning, when Miss Della Mildred Fagan, daughter of the late Captain Joseph Fagan and Mrs. Fagan, was united in marriage with Mr. Gordon C. N. Addy of Moncton, N.B.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother-in-law, Mr. Harry Fenn, and she was attended by her sister, Mrs. Helen Fenn, and her half-brother, Mr. Frank A. Smith, Ven. Archdeacon G. R. Beamish, Rector of St Thomas' Church, performed the interesting ceremony in the presence of a large number who had congregated for the event.

Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Addy, father and mother of the groom.

The New O. A. C. No. 144 Oat.

The O. A. C. No. 144 oat was obtained from the Siberian variety through nursery plant selection. This oat, which matures about the same time as the Banner, has a spreading head, white grain and less than the average per cent. of hull found in oats. The straw is strong and it has proven to be an excellent yielder of grain.

When tested on thirty-two farms situated in twenty-one different counties in Ontario in 1923, it outyielded the O. A. C. No. 72 by 5.7 bushels, the O. A. C. No. 3 by 10.3, and the Liberty Hulless oat by 17.3 bushels of grain per acre. In triplicate plot tests at the College in the average of the last five years, it surpassed the O. A. C. No. 72 by 6.3 and the Banner by 5.6 bushels of grain per acre. During this five-year period the straw of this variety lodged less than either the O. A. C. No. 72 or Banner Oats. —Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

Peasant Girl Has Startled Country

Takes Place of Learned Cuban Priest; Preaches To Many

Madrid, Feb. 17.—An extraordinary peasant girl, suddenly possessed of the learning and character of a Cuban priest she never saw, and who has been dead a year, has attracted the attention of the scientific and religious world to the village of San Jorge de Mucche, where the girl is now preaching to multitudes.

The girl, Manuela Rodrigues Fraga, 26, a few months ago was taken by tuberculosis and grew steadily worse until January 12th, when hope was abandoned by her family, who are farmers on the property of Marquis Cavalcanti. The parents relate that without learning, the girl rose up from her deathbed, asked for food and ate a regular meal, although she had been on a milk diet for months. It was observed that she possessed exceptional physical strength and her conversation and whole character was that of a stranger. She immediately referred to herself as a third person.

Numerous neighbors having gathered at the farm house witnessed the miraculous cure. Manuela, conversing in Latin, began a learned discourse exhorting her hearers to lead Christian lives. The astonished auditors asked her who she was, and she replied:

"I am Priest Ortigueira."

When told, "No, you are Manuela," she answered, "Oh, yes; I remember her."

News of the strange case spreading through the country, hundreds came to the village on the following January 18th, when Manuela spoke an impressive sermon, addressing each week ever-increasing multitudes.

The priests of the village, interested in the case, learned that Priest Ortigueira died in Havana last year. They declare Manuela possesses all his learning and priestly training, besides having a pronounced Cuban accent.

PRIEST INVENTS MACHINE

Rio de Janiero, Feb. 17—Father Lucas, a Catholic priest, is the inventor of a machine for writing music. He claims to have spent thirteen years in perfecting the apparatus, which is now exhibited locally. It is built on the pattern of a typewriter, with a similar keyboard, and an arrangement near the roller for drawing the lines of the staff.

Watch your tongue

The tongue is the mirror of the digestive tract and upon its surface is reflected the result of digestive disorders. Examine your tongue frequently and when you find it coated with "fur", or unnatural in appearance, heed Nature's signal.

Indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia and constipation are responsible for most of the ills of mankind. Sleeplessness, headaches, nervousness and many ills follow in their train. Restore your digestion by using Beecham's Pills.

They clear the tongue, remove the bad taste, strengthen the stomach and bowels, activate the liver, promote the digestion and assimilation of food and make you feel strong and well.

At Home at Stirling

Stirling, Feb. 17.— On Wednesday evening the Oddfellows of Stirling held their annual "at home" which was as usual a very enjoyable affair. Mr. H. B. Cowan and Miss Beatrice Smith, of Toronto supplied the most of the programme, Miss Hazel Burkitt being the only one of local talent who assisted. The playing of Miss Smith on the piano and Italian accordian was well received, as well as the singing and jokes of Mr. Cowan. The interest was not allowed to lag from the beginning of the programme to the end. After refreshments were served the National Anthem was sung, but on account of the down pour of rain a great many stayed longer to watch, if not to take part, in what proved to be as interesting as any number on the programme; a dance by the young folks. Mr. Cowan and Miss Smith played for the dancing.

MOTHERS LIKE TO TREAT COLDS WITH VAPORS

Direct Treatment with Vaporizing Salve Immediately Reaches Inflamed Air Passages.

It is no longer necessary constantly to dose the children in treating croup, bronchitis, sore throat, or deep chest colds. Many Canadian mothers now use the "outside" remedy, Vicks VapoRub, for the cold troubles of all the family, because it is just rubbed over throat and chest—there is nothing to take. When so applied Vicks gives off medicated vapors which are inhaled directly into the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and making the breathing easier.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed and stimulates the skin like a liniment or plaster and thus aids the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

Germs In the Nose Cause that Cold

Head colds are caused by germs in the membranes. Combat those germs locally. Don't wait the slow results of internal remedies.

Apply Ely's Cream Balm in the nostrils and breathe it. Force the antiseptic fumes through the air passages. The head is cleared at once, the misery is ended. The cold soon departs.

Don't suffer another hour from that stuffiness. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Your head will be as clear as a bell.

Anxious Wife Seeks Kingston Musician

Who Disappeared after Tell in He Was Going To Toronto

The Kingston police yesterday were instructed by Crown Attorney T. J. Rigney K. C., to trace the whereabouts of Prof. Joseph Andre, the well-known music teacher, who has been in Kingston since last September, and who has not been seen or heard from since noon on Wednesday last. The present inquiries are instituted at the request of his wife, a Kingston girl, to whom he has been married but a few weeks, and who is apprehensive as to his disappearance.

Prof. Andre left Kingston on Wednesday last to catch the 1.42 p.m. train to Toronto, informing his wife on the morning of the same day that he was obliged to visit Toronto for the purpose of seeing Mr. Kent, the President of the Canadian National Exhibition, and to call on the McDonald & Dawn Co., with regard to the costumes for The Gondoliers which was to be produced under his direction shortly. Since that time Mrs. Andre has received no word from her husband either directly or indirectly, and is becoming very anxious. As far as Mrs. Andre knows her husband had but $30 in cash when he left home.

On the day he left this city Prof. Andre is known to have obtained a valuable ring on approval from a Kingston firm, leaving his cheque on a New York bank for its return. This cheque has since been discovered to be worthless, and presumably the missing man had this ring in his possession when he left the city, it being believed that he took this means of rising f unds for a prolonged trip.

ONTARIO FARMERS FEAR OIL LOSSES

London, Ont., Feb. 17.—Believing that they are the victims of one of the biggest swindles ever put over in Ontario, a score of North Middlesex farmers are asking the Government to assist them in recovering $300,000 invested by them in Texas oil stocks.

Already legal machinery has been put in motion at Toronto to have a criminal investigation officer sent to Texas. The actual amount of money sunk by farmers is $252,000. One man alone is said to have paid over $17,000 in Canadian Victory bonds for shares in this company. Also this same man mortgaged his home for $4,000 to invest in oil wells that were represented to be producing 250 barrels a day.

POLICE ARRESTED A "SILENT WOMAN"

Montreal, Feb. 17.—Alice Roy, the "silent woman" who was arrested on Saturday night by Constables Landriault and Lalonde after they had chased a car which the woman was driving and had been forced to fire two shots before she would halt, appeared before Judge Monet this morning on three separate charges and was remanded to police headquarters for three days without bail.

The accused pleaded not guilty to the charges of stealing a Cadillac car valued at $3,000, the property of an unknown person, of being in possession of a kit of burglar's tools and of illegally carrying a revolver.

Joseph Cohen appeared for the defence and stated that he would ask for bail as soon as he had acquainted himself with the facts of the case. The police are looking for a man who was in the car with the Roy woman and who escaped somehow during the chase. The girl refuses to say anything about the man.

A Friend of the Family

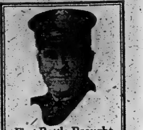
Get back that lost weight!

WHEN you start to waste away to a shadow, when the color leaves your cheeks and your poor, tired legs will hardly hold up your weakened body it's high time you started taking a fine tonic and builder like Tanlac.

Tanlac will build you up and make you feel that life's worth living. Made from roots, herbs and bark gathered from the four corners of the earth and compounded under the exclusive Tanlac formula, Tanlac is just what the poor, starved body needs.

First of all it cleanses the blood stream and puts the digestive organs in order. You find, after a few days' treatment, that you want to eat. Pretty soon the welcome color steals back into your cheeks and the scales tell you that you're gaining weight. From then on it's only a short time until you're feeling fit as a fiddle.

Millions of men and women have taken Tanlac with great benefit. More than one hundred thousand people have written us glowing tributes to this wonderful tonic.



First Bottle Brought Improvement

"Pains in my side and back caused me lots of trouble day and night. I could hardly walk my beat. Tanlac fixed me up quick. I noticed the improvement after the first bottle."

Patrolman Wm. J. Beder
324 Paul Ave., Belleville, Ill.

When you know it has worked wonders for so many folks it's folly not to take advantage of Tanlac's help yourself. Don't put it off another day. Get a bottle at your druggist's now and start the good work right away.

Newspaper Block Used as Lighthouse

Beacon Light On Tower Visible For 50 Miles

Miami, Fla., Feb. 17—Claimed to be the tallest building in the world in the same lattitude the Miami Daily News tower, now nearing completion, will serve both to house offices and to act as a lighthouse It will have the distinction of being the only business structure known to fill this dual purpose.

Built on the Spanish style of architecture, the tower will rise 285 feet above the level of Biscayne Bay. Atop the tower will be a beacon light, visible 50 miles away, and serving to guide both north and south-bound vessels along the Gulf stream. In many other respects the building will be unique in the United States. Designed by a New York firm of architects, it will be a copy of the famous Giralda tower in Seville, Spain.

With walls of stucco, elaborate balconies and iron grill work, the whims and beauties of old Spain will be wrought into lasting brick, stone and iron.

Location of the newspaper office is ideal from a viewpoint of beauty. It is along a driveway frinzed with cocoanut palms and faces the shimmering water of Biscayne Bay. Directly in front of it the city of Miami is filling in a new city park at expense of several million dollars and all other city improvements are trending in its direction.

Newspaper work will be done in the three-storied structure that serves as a base for the tower. The 15 stories of the tower will be entirely for business offices and will be separate from the newspaper section, except in actual structure. On top of the tower, a copy of a Spanish galleon will serve as a weather vane, a symbol visible for miles in every direction.

Will Ship Body of Campbellford Nurse

Canadian and American Authorities Accede to Her Mother's Wish

Washington, D.C., February 17.—The body of Miss Amy Gordan, the 20-year-old student nurse of Garfield Hospital here, who died on Thursday at the District of Columbia Smallpox Hospital is to be sent to her home in Campbellford, Ont. if Canadian and United States authorities agree to the request of her mother in Campbellford.

Miss Govan's death is the third from the disease in the hospital in the last several weeks. The first was that of a Washington policewoman, who contracted the disease from her sister on a visit from their home in Aberdeen, S.D.

Another patient, Miss Nora Highlen, also a Garfield nurse, is in a serious condition at the smallpox hospital, while two others are recovering.

Request that the body be sent to the Campbellford home was contained in a telegram from Miss Govan's mother sent to Dr. William G. Fowler, Washington Health Officer, who referred the request to the Canadian and United States authorities.

CALLS FOR SIMPLE FORM OF WORSHIP

Toronto, Feb. 17—"I heard the moderator of the Presbyterian church making fun of Scottish Highlanders. But there's one thing that he will never make fun of again and that is Scottish character." So said Rev. S. Banks Nelson, D.D., of Hamilton, in the course of his sermon to a large congregation in Riverdale Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

The speaker argued for simplicity in religion. "The ritualistic churches have never produced geniuses," he asserted. "The higher the church towers, the deeper the dirt and poverty of the parish."

Alluding to the early days of the Presbyterian church, Dr. Nelson said that those who founded it did not go to Rome nor to Geneva nor to London to get their plans. "They got their plans from this book the Bible. That's why it must endure—the little auld kirk. And since then it has nursed the soul and brains of those who have made the modern world."

OLD LANDMARK GOES WITH WINNIPEG HOTEL

Winnipeg, Feb. 16— The Imperial Hotel, one of Winipeg's oldest landmarks which housed many of the West's pioneers when they were enroute to their new homes from Eastern Canada, was destroyed by fire early Sunday morning, while four adjoining places of business, including a jewelry store, clothing establishment and barber shop, were badly gutted. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Twenty-two guests at the Imperial were routed out into 22 below zero weather. All escaped injury, but they lost their personal belongings, one woman, a recent arrival from England, losing everything, including $800 in cash. One fireman was injured when a hose-line broke, inflicting an injury which required ten stitches.

The fire started from an undetermined cause in the clothing store and quickly spread to the hotel, and adjoining premises. All the structures were of frame construction, situated on Main Street, a few blocks east of the Canadian Pacific station

The property loss is fully covered by insurance.

Rumors of another gold strike on the Clark properties in Bourlamsque County, 60 miles east of Amos, Que., have been gradually spreading throughout the town and have developed considerable excitement among the mining fraternity of Amos.

Klu Klux Klan Has Really Organized

Men in Toronto Make Application For Registration

Toronto, Feb. 17—All doubt about the Ku Klux Klan's intentions of organizing in Toronto were dispelled yesterday, when it became known that J. R. Code, on behalf of two applicants, had applied to the city registry office for, and been granted registration of two fraternal societies, one of which is styled The Invisible Empire Knights of the Ku Klux Klan of the Dominion of Canada and the other Hidden Knights of the Midnight Sun of the Dominion of Canada

The applicants, who say that they are the only members in the partnership which has existed since February 13, and that they are carrying on business at No. 1, Adelaide street, east, are C. Raymond Larson, an engineer, and Carlton B. McGowan, an operator.

Their application states that they are carrying on and intend to carry on at the address mentioned, under the names given the business of a fraternal society.

According to the application of Mr. Code, it is made under the "Partnerships' Act," which according to the law has to do only with the business of trading, manufacturing or mining.

Now Take Exception

Exception has been taken by the registry office to the registration, J. R. Code, barrister, said when he was asked in regard to the matter. The lawyer, who said that he knows nothing about the organization, nor the organization other than in a business way admitted that it might be necessary to apply for letters of incorporation Mr. Code received word that objection to allow the registration has been received from the registry office

"That was only of a temporary nature," said Mr. Code. "It may be necessary to apply for incorporation."

"Would that be to the Dominion government?"

"That depends on whether their operations will be nation-wide," he replied.

"Will they do any trading " I do not know what they intend to do, other than conduct a fraternal society. Two gentlemen came in here and they were here only half an hour. I know of it only in a business way. I have even forgotten what their names were

While the headquarters of the organization or organizations is given as No. 1 Adelaide street east, this will not be in Mr. Code's office but in another room of the building

STRATFORD VETS HAVE UNIQUE PLAN

Stratford, Feb. 17—The executive of the Great War Veterans' Association has under consideration a scheme whereby the down-town section of the city will be uniformly decorated on national holidays and gala days.

Under the proposed scheme instead of merchants going to the trouble of decorating their stores, they will have flags which will fit onto poles, which, in turn can be inserted into holes in the pavement. By such a decoration scheme, the system would be uniform. It is one which is followed in other centres.

To carry the scheme into effect the War Veterans will first have to secure the permission of the City Council to make the holes in the pavement at regular points near the curb. When not in use caps will cover the holes.

The Veterans will outline the scheme to the council at an early meeting.

CANADIAN POST OFFICES COLORFUL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—The names of Canadian post offices given in the annual Postal Guide make up an interesting and colorful collection of words, the most ancient cities of the Orient and man of the famous Biblical cities have their counterparts in Canada and are listed in the Postal Guide. There are 630 Canadian post offices bearing the names "Saint", ranging from the citicis of St. John, N.B., and Sault Ste. Marie, to the tiny crossroads stations of rural Quebec.

Authors and poets claim many nominal honors in Canada. Here are some of the names of the places bearing the names of writers: Kipling, Ontario; Kinglake, Ontario; Byron Island, Quebec; Browning, Saskatchewan; Ruskin, L. C. Dickens, Ontario; Bronte, Ontario; Shakespeare, Ontario; Morley, Alberta; Tolstoi, Manitoba; Milton Heights, Ontario; and Scott, Dumas and Drinkwater, all in Saskatchewan. The names of Canadian writers are used for some places, for example, Connor Creek, Alta; Parker, Ontario; and Lampman, Saskatchewan.

Some of the names from the west have the ring of optimism and aggression, for example, the following communities are to be found in Saskatchewan: Forward, Excelsior, Success, Conquest, Canuck.

Cities of the old world with counterparts in Canada are Khartum, Ont.; Khedive, Sask.; Cairo, Ont; Troy, Ont; Alexandria, B. C.; Bethesda, Ont; Athens, Ont; Beulah, N. B.; and Bible Hill, N. S.

Some of the unusual names are: Temperance Vale, N.B.; Temperance Ville, Ont; Spuzzum, Fraser Valley, B. C.; Skookumchuck; B. C.; Sea Dog Cove, N. B.; Penzance, Sask; Eureka, N.S.; Economy N.S.; Gang Ranch, Cariboo; Nightingale, Atla; Cinema, B. C.; Half Moon Bay, B. C.

PAINS IN BACK AND SIDES

Ended by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fusilier, Sask.—"For two or three days every so often I would have such pains in my back and sides that I could not do anything—could not even lie quietly in bed, and my head ached, too. I was this way about three years, but was worse after I was married. I was on a farm with not a house nearer than five miles and there was not a person to advise me, as my folks live in Manitoba. My sister-in-law told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told me to try it. I took her advice and have been thankful for it ever since. After taking the medicine for three months I can say it has helped me a lot and I am doing fine. I am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to others and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. HELEN BALANOFF, Fusilier, Saskatchewan.

Often some slight trouble will cause a general upset of the system. Such symptoms as nervousness, painful times, irregularity, backache and headache indicate some form of female weakness.

Women so bothered should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. This dependable medicine has helped thousands of women and it is reasonable to expect that it will help you. Try it today. Your druggist sells this medicine.

SICK WIFE AND NO JOB PROMPTED ACT

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 16—Acting on information supplied by neighbors, who missed the man from his usual Sunday walk, the police yesterday afternoon searched his house and found J. George Jay hanging in his cellar. He had been dead for some hours, and may have killed himself yesterday.

His wife, who is an invalid and not quite sane lay in her bed in an upstairs room unaware of the tragedy and unable to summon help in the absence of her husband. She told the police her husband disappeared yesterday morning and had not returned. Jay was a well-known figure in Peterboro having been for years caretaker of the Royal Bank Building. He was born in England and served with the Imperial army in India twelve years, being at one time armourer-sergeant. He enlisted in the 93rd Peterboro Battalion during the world war, but did not get overseas.

The deceased owned the house where he lived, and had other property in the city, but was known to be brooding over his lack of employment and the condition of his wife.

CHARGE HE DEFAMED WIFE'S CHARACTER

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Testimony which he said would show that W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, sought to obtain false affidavits linking his wife's name with those of Jack Johnson, pugilist, and other negroes, will be offered in the trial of Stokes and three others on charges of conspiracy to injure the character of Helen Ellwood Stokes, Assistant State's Attorney W. W. Smith told the jury Monday.

Mr. Smith said that the testimony would show that the co-defendant, Robert Lee, of Chicago, had declared, "you don't need to know Mrs. Stokes to sign an affidavit for Stokes, and you-ll get a lot of money."

"Ulterior motives," Charles Rathbun, counsel for Stokes, declared to be behind this prosecution. Judge W. N. Gemmill over-ruled objections when the attorney assailed the legal record of Charles E. Erbstein, Mrs. Stoke's counsel.

"If there was any defamation of Mrs Stokes," continued Rathbun, "her own agents did it."

Cod Liver Oil In Sugar Coated Tablets For Puny Kids

Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, underdeveloped children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound tablets if you want to give them a good appetite and put pounds of goods, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so does Dolan's Drug Store, McKeown's Drug Store, Doyle's Drug Store and all good pharmacists all over America, for they are in great demand, because they are not laggards but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—60 cents and children take them like candy.

A very sickly child, age 9, gained 12 pounds in seven months and is strong and healthy.

One skinny woman gained 9 pounds in 24 days.

"Be sure to get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cold Liver Oil Compound Tablet."

After an eventful week at Vancouver, the three cruisers of the Japanese training squadron, the Asama, Yakumo and Idzumo, weighed anchor Saturday morning at 9.30, and passed out of Vancouver Harbor for home, via Honolulu.

Germans Block All Effort To Find Munitions

Report of Allied Military Control Mission Delivered To-day

STUDENTS HELPED

Said Military Training Carried on Contrary to Treaty

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 18—The report of the allied military control mission on the state of Germany's disarmament was delivered at the offices of the allied war committee this morning.

The mission sets forth in full the difficulties under which it worked, declaring that obstruction, placed by the Germans in way of its investigations absolutely prevented any discoveries by direct search.

Every disclosure made, the report states was the result of denunciations by pacifist workmen in factories where war material was being turned out, or by students who were aware of military training operations in universities.

The most important of twelve annexes, each dealing with a special feature of the mission's work, are those relating to military training and the number of men in Germany being fitted for armed service contrary to the treaty of Versailles.

Marmora Hunter Bags Five Wolves

Puts Soo Record to Shame; Three Were Females

Marmora, Feb. 18—Marmora's premier hunter, Mr. Sanford Lawrence, has at length come into his own, having an experience he will not likely equal again. He has put to shame the famous Soo wolf hunt of a few months back. His last week's bag included five timber wolves (three being female) two red foxes and a fisher. Four of the wolves were shot just before dusk on Wednesday last while in pursuit of a deer across the lake. They were within an ace of the animal when shot.

The first shot killed the first wolf and blinded the second in both eyes. The second shot knocked down the third wolf the third shot killed the fourth wolf, and the blinded wolf was put out of its agony by the fourth shot.

The capture of the fifth wolf was not without incident Mr. Lawrence fixed a trap for mink and was proceeding to examine it when a fox crossed his path. His aim was sure. On arriving at the trap, to his surprise, he found he had trapped a wolf. The fisher was tracked into a hollow log. Mr. Lawrence plugged the hole in the log, and chopping a hole in the side of the log higher up ended the animal's life by using his tomahawk. The first mentioned feat is rendered the more remarkable through its being accomplished with a shotgun.

The hides of all these animals are to be exhibited in Connor and Jones' hardware store. On Sunday, Mr. Lawrence received many congratulations from his friends. Many farmers in the northern locality will rejoice that the menace to their flocks has thus been lessened.

The hunted deer put in the night about forty rods away from the scene of the death of its hot pursuers, thus showing the exhausted condition the creature was in.

POULTRY RAISERS PLAN EXTENSIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—With the object of building up the market in Europe for Canadian poultry, the Canadian Poultry Record Association at their annual meeting here, decided to ask the Government's assistance in a shipment of trial consignments of live poultry breeding stock from Canada to Britain and Europe generally, during the coming year.

The Department of Agriculture will be asked to appoint bio-chemist at the Experimental Farm to carry on research work in connection with poultry. The formation of a National Poultry Council was endorsed. The rules for an egg laying contest next November were drawn up. In future, contestants must breed birds they enter. Dr. Robert Barnes retired from the presidency and was succeeded by G. G. Guest of Ottawa. The directorate includes Ernest Robertson, Iroquois Falls, C. A. Wood, Peterboro and J. M. Clark, Cainsville.

KU KLUX KLAN IS REFUSED A CHARTER

Toronto, Feb. 18—The Ku Klux Klan was refused a charter by the Ontario government yesterday.

Hon. Lincoln Goldie, provincial secretary said that K.K.K. had applied for a charter and "we have refused the application," he said.

When J. R. Code, barrister, with office on Adelaide street, who is acting for the Invisible Empire here, was asked what he would do now in view of the refusal, he said he would do nothing, but stand by the decision.

Ontario House Has Much To Consider

Bill Introduced to Aid Cities in Helping Unemployed

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Legislation providing for the relief of unemployment by enabling municipalities to levy a special rate not exceeding one mill on the dollar on the whole rateable property was introduced into the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. Bills were also introduced providing for the inspection of municipal lock-ups and to amend the Adoption Act.

Hon. W. F. Nickle introduced an Act to authorise a special rate for works undertaken to relieve unemployment. Its main provision is as follows:—"The Coucil of any local municipality during the year 1925 may, in addition to all other rates, levy a special rate not exceeding one mill on the dollar on the whole rateable property in the municipality, according to the last revised assessment roll, to meet the cost of any work or service undertaken for the express purpose of providing work for those out of employment, and such special rate shall not be counted in ascertaining whether the limit of taxation as fixed by Section 297 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1922, has been reached."

Hon. Mr. Goldie introduced a bill to amend the Prisons and Public Charities Inspection Act. The bill will give authority to the Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities to inspect lockups in the different municipalities, as complaints were sometimes received of unsanitary and unsatisfactory conditions in them. Provision is also made for the transfer of an inmate or prisoner from a penal or custodial institution to a general hospital for treatment, which could not be performed at the institution. Provision is also made for the payment of the hospital, either by the prisoner or the municipality in which he was a resident.

A bill to amend the Adoption Act was also introduced by Hon. Mr. Goldie. This provides that if a child is fourteen its consent is necessary for adoption. It also provides that such consent may be dispensed with by the judge if such child has been with the adoptive parents since infancy and was unaware of its natural parentage.

GOVERNMENT IS TO RECOGNIZE CLAIM

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—Premier King announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Government had decided to introduce this session a measure recognizing "the moral claim in equity for compensation" of depositors in the Home Bank, which failed in 1923.

Premier King did not indicate to what extent compensation would be paid.

Right Hon. Arthur Meighen asked if the amount would be included in the supplementary estimates. The Premier replied. "You will have to wait and see."

Premier King, in his statement, referred to the report of the Banking Committee of the House last session that the depositors had a "moral claim in equity."

Mr. Meighen said the report had been adopted last session in spite of his vigorous opposition. He had always taken the ground that the adoption of a report was not binding upon the House, and this was his attitude at present. He asked why the amount was not in the main estimates.

The Prime Minister replied that a bill would be presented for the approval of the House and that the bill would specify the amount it was proposed to pay.

KING IS IMPROVING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 18.—Improvement in the condition of King George, who is suffering from bronchitis following an attack of influenza, is noted in the official bulletin issued from Buckingham Palace this morning. The bulletin reads:

"The King had a fair night, though there is yet no change in Bronchitis. The general condition of His Majesty shows improvement."

SEE REAL SIGN

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—Members of Parliament are convinced that the Government intends going to the country in June or October. An election in July or August, would disfranchise 15 per cent. of the electorate. The estimates for 1925-26 have convinced members of all parties they must get ready for re-election.

Classic Debate Holds The House

When W. E. Raney and Attorney-General Battle Over O.T.A.

AMENDMENT IS BEST

In Best Interests of True Temperance, Mr. Nickle Says

Toronto, Feb. 18.—With Attorney-General Nickle as its protagonist and ex-Attorney-General Raney as its opponent, the stronger beer proposal of the Ferguson Government occupied the Ontario Legislature yesterday and provoked debate which was classic in its quality. In manner which on both sides was vigorous, the temperance issue as it is viewed respectively by those of the Ferguson Cabinet and by those of Mr. Raney's persuasion was argued and, with the moving by Mr. Raney of an amendment to the amendment to the speech from the Throne, opportunity was left with the House members of stating the position to which they will attach their support.

Mr. Raney's amendment, concerning the success of which Mr. Raney himself expressed confidence despite the amusement of the House upon that point, expressed disapproval of any amendment to the O.T.A. Supplementing as it does the Liberal amendment charging the Prime Minister with violation of his pledge to the people, it is in the hands of the House as a motion which will require expression of opinion from each member upon the stronger beer proposal itself, not allowing the issue to be evaded upon the pretext of transferring it to a question of the Prime Minister's good faith. Exception to the amendment came from E. Proulx (Prescott) of the Liberal group, who argued that it was irregular as being simply a substantive motion for the one which the Liberals have already presented. Decision upon this point was reserved until to-day by Speaker Thompson.

The arguments by means of which the two speakers commended their cases to the Legislature occupied a sitting which commenced in the afternoon and lasted well on into the night. They were followed by crowded galleries with an interest which at all times manifested itself in demonstrations of hand-clapping, which the Speaker of the House had to check, but which cropped out at moments of high lights of interest despite cautions from the Chair of the House.

In Interest of Temperance

Briefly, Hon. Mr. Nickle took his stand for the amendment upon the grounds of the best interest of true temperance. He cited the original O. T. A. of the Hearst Government and pointed out how it had become augmented by the Doherty and Sandy Acts, prohibiting importation and finally limiting the legitimate use of liquor to medicinal purposes, an end which had not been in sight when the O.T.A. had first been passed. Analyzing the decreasing majorities which the O.T.A. had consistently secured since these added restrictions had become a part of it, Mr. Nickle argued that it was clearly shown that the people considered that they had gone too far in the direction of arbitrary restrictions, and desired instead to swing the pendulum a little back upon the path which it had travelled.

Speaking as one who was sincerely a believer in the cause of temperance, Mr. Nickle declared that he was impressed—as one who was prepared to look upon conditions without prejudice but in a spirit of sane acceptance of the things which were manifest—with the fact that unless something were done to relieve present conditions the O.T.A. was doomed. He argued for the reasonableness of the Government's amendment, quoting laboratory statistics to show that the stimulation derived from drinking about three pint bottles of it would be approximately equal to that derived from drinking two cups of coffee. He quoted other authorities which declared that the artificial stimulus to be obtained from two or three bottles would be about equal to that provoked by the eating of a hearty meal.

Mr. Nickle argued most strongly the difficulties of the Act's enforcement, mentioning the influential forces in a community, often including doctors and "mushroom" drug stores, which could be relied upon to offer means of evading it. He stressed also the anomoly of allowing native wine of from 18 to 24 per cent. alcoholic strength to be manufactured and consumed, and of banning a beer so much lighter in its alcoholic content.

Home brew permits to be obtained for the asking from the Department of Customs and Excise were also mentioned as features which made the enforcement of the Act difficult.

Increase in Liquor Sales

As statistics which made evident the failure of the Act as a prohibition measure, Mr. Nickle stated the gradual increase in the total of dispensary liquor sales to an annual figure of $5,000,000; the increase in the number of doctors' prescriptions from 508,000 to 810,000 annually from 1922 to 1924; the fact that

Oshawa Girl Lost Case at Napanee

Sued a Farmer for Alleged Breach of Promise to Marry

Napanee, Feb. 18.—A breach of promise suit was tried yesterday at the Court House during the sittings of the Supreme Court. Mr. Justice Kelly, without a jury, heard an action by Miss Marjorie Van Dusen of Oshawa against Frank Detlor of the Township of Sheffield for alleged breach of promise of marriage. The defendant has since married another young woman.

Miss Van Dusen asked for $5,000 damages. W. S. Herrington, K.C., appeared for plaintiff, and J. M. Simpson for defendant.

The Plaintiff's Story

The first witness called was the plaintiff, Miss Marjorie Van Dusen, who told of her acquaintance with the defendant, and the course of their courtship during the past three years. The defendant's farm, six miles from Tamworth, is not far from the home of Miss Van Dusen's parents. She said that on one occasion he had made improper proposals to her when she was at his house. After a walk in the evening, they were in the house alone. She fought him off, and claimed she bit the back of his hand. She remained at his house, however, all night, and until the evening of the next day. When they appeared at her home her father told defendant that he would have to marry her within two weeks, and Frank Detlor said he was ready to do so. They went to Tamworth on July 10, 1923, to be married, but had a disagreement, and the ceremony failed to come off. Shortly after this they made friends again, and were to have been married at Napanee on May 24, 1924, but again there was a hitch in the proceedings.

Love letters were produced in court.

Defendant's Version

Frank Detlor, defendant, gave evidence in his own behalf, and stated he had always been ready to marry plaintiff, and had repeatedly asked her to marry him, but difference in religion proved an obstacle, she being a Seventh Day Adventist. This was the main cause of her not being willing to accept him unless he would turn to that belief. He warned her that he would have to marry another girl, as he had to have some one to keep house for him. He denied that he had ever made improper proposals to her, and that on the occasion which she referred to she came to his house without an invitation from him to do so. The door was unlocked, and she could have gone home if she had wanted to. He said nothing improper had occurred. She went to sleep on a lounge in the living-room and he went to bed in another room. A number of witnesses were heard, and after the addresses of counsel his Lordship gave a verdict for defendant with costs.

Youth of Trenton Took Wrong Plan

Issued Cheque on Bank Where He Had No Account

Charged with having procured a part of a sawing machine which had been repaired by the Greenleaf Company, by presenting a cheque on a Trenton bank for $15, where it was found the accused had no account, a Trenton young man appeared in police court here this morning before Magistrate Masson to answer a charge of false pretenses.

Accused stated that his intentions were good. He knew that he had no account, but by procuring the sawing machine, he felt sure he could earn the $15 before the cheque was presented. The machine broke again, and he was unable to meet the cheque. His brother wrote to the Greenleaf Company, but it was too late the matter had been brought to the attention of the police department.

To-day a friend paid the $15 and costs of $6.50 for accused and he was allowed to go to work which he commenced but Tuesday.

Will Now Tackle Tobacco Habits

Reformers in States Hope to Have Prohibition Results

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 18.—An anti-tobacco movement, which it is hoped will attain proportions of the anti-saloon movement, will be launched in Washington in March. The aim of the convention will be to federate all anti-tobacco organizations in the United States and to "decide the best methods for eradicating cigarette and tobacco habits."

OBJECT TO SALES BY HYDRO SHOPS

Toronto, Feb. 18.—In his annual address at the opening session yesterday in the King Edward Hotel of the 20th yearly conference of the Ontario Retail Hardware Association, the President, H. N. Joy, Toronto, stressed what he termed the unfair competition which hardware dealers had to meet by the sale of electrical appliances in the Hydro-Electric shops. Mr. Joy declared that the Hydro-Electric shops were exempt from certain taxes which retailers had to pay. He considered this was decidedly unfair competition, particularly when Hydro was operated with the people's money. Mr. Joy suggested that a committee be appointed to bring the matter to the attention of Premier Ferguson. The hardware dealers had no objection to competition on an equitable basis.

Three Hale Fellows Well Met Turned Good Time Into Most Dismal Outlook

Lindsay, Feb. 18.—A couple of weeks ago two or three strangers dropped into Lindsay and they soon formed the acquaintance of a number of well-known characters who enjoy an odd game of poker, but whose chief occupation appears to be, according to the statement of the authorities, dispensing liquor of doubtful quality to the thirsty ones of the district.

The strangers appeared to be hale fellows well met. They were not asked to produce credentials before being admitted into the local "booze circle," but were received with open arms. They were always present when booze dispensing operations were at their height, and like Caesar's wife, were above suspicion.

They quietly slipped out of town, and nothing more was thought of their activities until three local men were served by the authorities with blue documents on the charge of selling liquor. It turned out that the strangers were none other than a couple of "spotters" who had been sent in by the Government to make a clean up. The accused will be given a hearing in the police court on Thursday morning.

RESOLUTIONS FRAMED

Ask Federal Government to Prohibit Liquor Manufacture

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 18.—At one o'clock this afternoon, the Prohibition Union of Ontario in convention decided to have a small deputation present its proposals to the Ontario Government rather than send up a huge crowd. Five men and two women were named as follows to be the deputation.

Dr. Gisborne, Ottawa; W. Delaney, Niagara Falls; Charles Austin, Chatham; J. A. Austin, Toronto; Dr. E. D. Heist, Kitchener, Mrs. Smythe and Mrs. Pugsley, Toronto. The deputation will urge the Government to withdraw the 4.4 beer proposal and maintain the O. T. A. in its present form.

Representatives of the Legislative Committee of the Convention now in Massey Hall waited on Premier Ferguson and Attorney General Nickle to-day in reference to contemplated amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act. The delegation were closeted with the Premier and Attorney General for nearly an hour and a half. At the close, Attorney General Nickle said that Premier Ferguson had advised the delegation that the Government would welcome suggestions.

Resolutions Put

The convention this morning passed many resolutions dealing with the liquor traffic. One requests the Federal Government to refuse clearance papers to ships which cannot show landing papers for the last cargo. Another resolution urged the Federal government to prohibit the manufacture of liquor in prohibition provinces and still another to refuse permits to brewers in Ontario.

By a standing vote the meeting adopted the following resolution: "We are absolutely opposed to the weakening of O.T.A. through legislation proposed by the Ontario Government to increase the alcoholic content of beer."

Cornwall Deputation Ask General Williams to Find Place for Him

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 18.—A deputation representing the Prohibition Union of Cornwall called on General V. A. S. Williams, Commissioner of Provincial Police this morning. Relative to the dismissal last Monday by the local municipal council, of Chief Constable J. E. Fillon. The deputation alleged Fillon was "let out" on account of his zeal in enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act and they urged General Williams to find a place for him on the Provincial force. General Williams said he would look into the matter.

THE PULPWOOD EMBARGO

(From the Cobalt Nugget)

Much is being printed in certain of the Northern Ontario newspapers regarding the advantages and disadvantages of the proposed pulpwood embargo and it seems to The Nugget that some of the papers are looking at the embargo from a purely selfish standpoint and not from the standpoint of the general good of Northern Ontario.

The New Liskeard Speaker as an instance, comments as follows:

"We can readily understand that Canada would gain by having the pulp and paper made in this country, but as we said last week, the interests of the 25,000 farmers who sell pulpwood are more important to the country than the interests of the 8,000 men the new pulp-mills would give employment too."

Probably the best answer to the Speaker's arguments is that advanced by the United States publishers, who recently made a protest to Washington against the proposed embargo, claiming that if it goes into effect, it will mean loss of employment to between 80,000 and 120,000 workers in the United States.

Now if the embargo will throw that many out of employment in the United States—where only too many thousands of our good Canadian workers are going at the present time—will it not mean that much additional employment in Canada, together with the additional prosperity such employment would bring?

The Nugget believes that the figure given by the U.S. publishers is exaggerated but undoubtedly an embargo would mean employment, in the next few years, for an additional 25,000 workmen in Canada. And that is worth considering.

A BRIGHT SPOT

There is one situation in the city of Belleville that calsl for considerable optimism and that is the fact that there are practically no empty houses at the present time, that in spite of a number who have left the community for the United States and elsewhere, the industrial concerns have been able to draw others from outside places to keep real estate moving.

In this respect, Belleville compares very favorably with many other smaller and larger cities in Ontario at the present time.

RADIO WHILE YOU WAIT

Future visitors to New York may not be able to feel exactly at home, but they will be able to hear what the wild radio waves at home are saying, under the plan just started by one hotel which is arranging for portable receiving sets to be installed in the bedroom of any guest who wants to do his "touring" from an armchair. Twelve such sets have been ordered, and more will come if the demand warrants. Each set is about the size of a suit case, and can be put up in the room by the bell boy, leaving the complete listener-in to his own device, to wander over the wave lengths from the opera or dance music of Broadway to the more familiar efforts of his home town quartet.

BAD BUT NOT ABNORMAL

Patrick Hogan, minister of agriculture for the Irish Free State, says there is no abnormal distress in the west of Ireland. There is always distress in those districts, he says, but this year the newspaper correspondents are exploiting the situation for their own purposes.

No doubt the newspaper correspondents are not missing anything that would add to the interest of their news stories; but the bald facts, telling just what the government is doing for the relief of the distress in districts in the west of Ireland indicate that there must be distress of quite a serious character. If there is nothing abnormal about this distress, if it is what the people are accustomed to, then the normal condition must be bad, and it is probably just as wel lthat the newspaper correspondents are exploiting it. By forcing attention to it they may help in securing a remedy.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

THE BEST PREPAREDNESS

WE reiterate that the best preparedness is of the automatic kind.

That is, it is the kind of preparedness for war which can be used in times of peace and can develop in those times. For instance, the only use of a battleship or of an army is that of destruction in time of war. In time of peace they are mere playthings. They are mere elements of destruction waiting for some war to make them of use. Without that war they are of no use.

But airplanes, for instance, and dirigibles, can be employed in time of peace. They are money making devices. They are commerce building. As a means of transportation they can be of immense service to the public. At a moment's notice they can be transformed into instruments of war. Their reach is longer than that of any gun and their power is probably greater than that of a battleship.

Physical training of the entire population is good in times of peace. It makes a healthier, stronger and efficient people. They are better money makers and better equipped in every way for the arts of peace. Yet when the crisis of war comes their physical training stands them in good stead. A well-trained army is better than one that it not trained at all.

The same may be said of a merchant marine. It can be of use to a country in many ways and help to build up its prosperity in times of peace. Yet in times of war it can be quickly converted into an instrument of destruction.

The same thing is true of chemical advance. Destructive gases can be used to abolish insects and for other purposes that shall add to the wealth of the country. An advance in chemistry is an advance in all the lines of peace. Yet when war comes our chemical forces can be easily transformed into a most powerful weapon against the enemy.

In a way, too, the accumulation of riches which characterizes times of peace forms the best means of prosecuting a war. In the long run it is the country with the most resources, with the most money, with the most capitalization, that can outlast the enemy.

All these thinsg are not waste, but are useful. That country is best prepared for war that is best prepared for peace.

Press Opinions

LEGISLATION AWAY FROM DRUNKENNESS

Mail and Empire:

If the Ontario Temperance Act is amended in the manner foreshadowed in the Speech from the Throne, it will still be unlawful to sell for beverage purposes a beer that intoxicates. Beer whose alcoholic constituent is but slightly more than one-twenty-fifth of its volume comes within the fair definition of a temperance drink. The idea that the great majority of those opposed to prohibition have the craving of drunkards lies at the bottom of some fallacious arguing by temperance reformers of the rigorous type. A great body of people who are sorely dissatisfied with existing traffic legislation would cease to fret themselves or the authorities about it if they could get a glass of mild beer whenever they wanted it. They want a beer that cheers but not inebriates, and this, in the opinion of fair and competent judges, is what 4.4 per cent. beer would be.

FATHER AND SON WEEK

London Free Press:

This is Father and Son week. In recent years a fad has developed on the question of national weeks, until we have weeks devoted to every interest imaginable. However, Father and Son week is an idea well worth while, which has done good already and which should be fostered and developed in the future. It has done much to force upon the busy man of to-day a realization of his responsibilities for the proper training and bringing up of his boys.

WHITE AND YELLOW

Hamilton Spectator:

The weddings of Chinese men and white girls have been, to date, infrequent, and it is sincerely to be hoped that the outbreak in Toronto this week is not a forerunner of an epidemic of such unions. Experience teaches that it is impossible for such marriages to have a happy ending. The white girl who forms an alliance with a Chinese loses caste. She soon makes the discovery that she not only alienates herself from the friendship of her own kind, but that she has not the respect of her husband's people.

It is estimated that American, Canadian and other tourists have spent seven million dollars a day in London during the Wembley exhibition season, testifying that advertising pays.

Dutchy's Diary

Collins and Newspapers

Yesterday I came across some information regarding the country in Kentucky where Floyd Collins, trapped in a cave he had discovered, lost his life. It enables us to understand better how the unfortunate man happened to get himself into such a predicament.

Cave City is in Barren County, which is part of what geologists know as the Highland Rim. Its general description is conveyed by its name. The underlying rock is limestone and in most places the soil is very thin, producing mainly an inferior kind of grass. The more fertile spots are small and scattered, and the inhabitants make a meagre living by cultivating an acre or two of tobacco and some corn. These tiny holdings are to be found along the edges of the valleys which, with the pateaus, are the distinguishing surface features of this part of Kentucky. The inhabitants are known as "hill-billies", or poor whites, and they remain for the most part in dense ignorance. They still believe, according to a professor in the geological department of Harvard University who has explored the district, that Joshua made the sun stand still, they continue to do their planting when the moon is full. They wrest a meagre sustenance from the soil and live in hope that one day they may discover a cave.

In this part of Kentucky to discover a cave is a hope as universal and as sustaining to the inhabitants as is the hope of discovering a new mine to the inhabitants of Porcupine. And it is just as reasonable. The whole Highland Rim is undermined with caves, and there may be more glorious discoveries yet to be made even than the Mammoth Cave. The discovery of a cave means moderate riches for the discoverer if he happens to own the land on which it is located. He advertises his discovery and people who visit the district will pay for the privilege of exploring it. The Mammoth Cave is privately owned, despite the general idea to the contrary, and the owners charge an admission fee of one dollar to each visitor. If one desires to spend a whole day in the cave he must pay four dollars. Less famous caves charge a smaller fee but the ownership of even a moderate cave means relative affluence for the lucky owner. There is no doubt that Collins was searching for a cave when he met with his mishap.

Owen Herity gave a talk to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville yesterday and described the great strides newspapers have taken in the past few decades, in regard to equipment and methods of gathering news.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, what happened on Monday afternoon, when Floyd Collins was found dead.

Cave City, Kentucky, is many hundred miles away from Belleville. It is situated in an out of the way place, as places go in these modern times. Yet Belleville citizens were reading the news of the discovery of Collins exactly one hour and twenty minutes after the rescuing party had reached his tomb.

At a quarter to three exactly on Monday afternoon the miners broke through the limestone roof, and seeing the explorer learned he was dead. At five minutes after four, The Daily Intelligencer was out on the street with the information printed on the front page.

Maybe that doesn't impress one as being speedy work. But let us review what happened in that short period of eighty minutes.

First the miners had to send the news up the shaft. The reporters on the scene had to make absolutely sure that the news was authentic. The information had to be written and sent to the Cave City telegraph office. From that office it had to be sent to the four corners of North America, including Toronto. The Canadian Press Association office at the Canadian city had then to redirect the message along Ontario wires to all the daily newspapers belonging to that Association.

In Belleville, the Canadian National Telegraph office operator took it down on the typewriter, as it was ticked off to him, and having completed this, he telephoned the editorial office of The Daily Intelligencer.

The editor received the wire about four o'clock to the second, when the paper had already gone to press.

The linotype man put the news into type. Another compositor set up a new heading that suited the facts. The press was stopped, old type taken out to make room for the new and in a minute the regular edition was carrying news from away down in Kentucky just eighty minutes after it broke.

What an impression such service to the reading public would have made on Belleville people ninety years ago when The Intelligencer was just starting!

To-day's Smile

At last Brown had found a flat. The landlord was just asking him a few questions.

"Of course you have no children?" said the potentate.

"None at all," answered the prospective tennant.

"Dogs or cats?"

"No."

"Piano, pianola, or gramophone."

"No, but I'll tell you what. I've got a fountain pen that squeaks rather badly every time I use it. But, I'll get rid of that if you like," answered Brown.

POLICE BELIEVE CHILD STRANGLED

Toronto, Feb 18—Eleven-year-old Walter Fala, who was found dead in bed Monday at the home of his uncle at 152 Bathurst street, was strangled according to information from police headquarters, following the post mortem examination made at the Morgue Monday evening. Two week's ago the child's father died from a surgical operation, and the mother is held at the Jail Farm.

Coroner Clendenan, following the examination by the pathologist, Dr. Magner, at once placed the finding before the Detective Department. An inquest will be held Friday night.

It is stated that examination of the bed revealed blood stains and that there was a discoloration of the neck and face.

Detectives Hill and Hutchinson, of Claremont street, are investigating the case. The relatives with whom the lad lived do no understand or speak English and merely shrug their shoulders when questioned.

The theory of foul play arose when some marks found in the throat of the lad led to the belief that death was caused through strangulation.

W.M.S. BANQUETS JUBILEE MISSION

On Tuesday evening the girls of the Jubilee Mission Circle were given a banquet by the members of the W.M.S. of Bridge Street church. About one hundred were present and after an enjoyable hour around the table, the meeting was opened by Miss Morden. Vocal solos were given by Miss McHugh and Miss Stewart and a piano solo by Mrs. Hubbs. An interesting letter from Miss Ketcheson, now in China, was read by Miss Helen Lattimer. Miss Morden then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. (Judge) Lavelle, President of the Board of Managers of the W.M.S. of Canada, she chose as her subject "Ideals" drawing several lessons from the life of "Joan of Arc", and advising the girls that if they had the right ideals every interest in life would assume its proper place.

A vote of thanks expressing the girls' appreciation of Mrs. Lavell's address was moved by Miss Tucker and seconded by Miss Mary Day, and one thanking the Ladies for their kind hospitaliy was moved by Miss Sine and seconded by Miss Alice Sulman.

Rev. R. E. Knowles Declares Faith in Nickle to Prohibitionists

CONFIDENCE IN HONOR

Amendment May Be Salvation of Temperance Act He Suggests

Toronto, Feb. 18.—An appeal to the prohibition workers to reserve their criticism of the Ontario Government until they have had an opportunity to learn the full motive back of the amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act, and to understand the nature of the pressure which was brought to bear, was made at Massey Hall last night by Rev. R. E. Knowles, in connection with the mass meeting of the annual meeting of the Ontario Prohibition Union. Rev. Mr. Knowles pointed out that he had known Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General, for a great number of years and he had absolute confidence in the honor and integrity of that official; and while he could not state definitely that the amendment of the O.T.A. was a move made with the direct object of saving the whole Act from destruction, he threw out the warning that such might have been the case, and that accordingly it was too soon to start hurling the shafts of censure and criticism at the Government.

"For one thing, I wish to disassociate myself with one feature which has been a dominant note at this convention," Rev. Mr. Knowles continued, "and that is the censure which has been hurled at the Government. I have known Hon. Mr. Nickle ever since we were school mates together, and the Province may well thank God that it has as the chief executive for the administration of the Ontario Temperance Act such a man as Mr. Nickle. He is distinguished for his high intelligence and integrity, and the Province of Ontario, or the Dominion of Canada or any of the other provinces have never had a man more distinguished for his honesty and integrity.

Don't Make Charges

"We, as a temperance organization, should extinguish those impulsive imputations of dishonor, and breach of faith, and all such expressions which are being so freely used today. We should cease using them until we know more about the exact situation. We can never know all that is behind the attitude of a Government; and it seems to me that we are inclined to be too severe when, perhaps, we do not know anything about the real situation. You must not judge a Government by its unfinished work; don't shoot until all the cards have been put on the table, or until you know if it is really a man or not.

"There may have been difficulties in connection with the Ontario Temperance Act situation of which we have no conception. I do not pretend to know exactly what the situation was: but it may have been that the very existence of the Act was in peril; There may have been danger in a household which we are not permitted to enter. Too often the temperance people work and cheer, and praise and pray, and do everything but vote when the time comes And, if you do not believe me, you can ask Sir William Hearst, and he will tell you all about it. We do not know; it may have been that the amendment was the only thing which could have saved the Ontario Temperance Act from extinction. In this situation, the prime requisite is honesty; the supreme question is whether the men behind this move are honest. I, personally, believe they are.

"No! No!" came a number of voices from the audience.

"Yes, I personally believe they are honest," Rev. Mr. Knowles continued "We must be patient until we know more. Foolish measures may retard the objective towards which we are working."

The meeting, which represented the big rally of the prohibition forces of the provinces, was hardly as well attended as might have been expected as Massey Hall, which has been packed to overflowing on so many other occasions of temperance rallies, was somewhat short of being filled to capacity. The upper gallery had around fifty, and the bulk of them seemed to be antis, who had gathered for the purpose of interruptions. Their interruptions, however, were somewhat toned and the only speaker who suffered from them was Mrs. James Murdock, wife of the Minister of Labor.

Appeal to the Women

Mrs. Murdock declared that there were tens of thousands of citizens who were watching the situation with the keenest of interest and who were insisting that the Ontario Temperance Act must be maintained. When they voted for the O.T.A. they did not vote for stronger beer; and so far as her particular section of Ontario was concerned, she could give the assurance that the women workers were out strongly behind the Prohibition Union and would give it their support and co-operation.

The speaker answered certain charges which had been made against the O.T.A. One was to the effect that there had been more drinking under prohibition than there was before; and Mrs Murdock declared, such was not the case. All one needed to do, to be convinced of that, was to go to Quebec Province and stand for an hour in a Montreal station. There was, she believed, not one-eighth of the drinking under the O.T.A. that there was under the old open-bar system.

"No! No!" came some voices from the upper gallery.

"There are better schools and churches," she continued; and then she went on to state that she had recently visited the jails of several counties and had found them all empty. Everything indicated that in the prohibition provinces there was less drinking and that in the wet provinces there was more drinking than ever before and so far as British Columbia was concerned she felt conditions were the worst in the history of that province.

Mrs. Murdock made an appeal to the mothers to consider the O.T.A. in the terms of their daughters. A few years ago, she recalled, a woman did not think of the danger of her daughters coming under the influence of liquors, but now, in these days of equal rights between men and women, the new menace had appeared and so her appeal was to the women to rise and join the fight with greater zeal than ever. The only way to succeed was through organization; and so far as the rural parts were concerned, she felt that the women of the country were with the prohibitionists but that they lacked the centralization of organization.

Classic

from 75 to 90 per cent of prescriptions filed were for hard liquors rather than for the milder beverages; and the growth of liquor exports to the United States from $426,000 in 1922 to $8,700,000 in the past year. This latter figure was held by the Attorney-General to indicate the extent to which "short-circuiting" was practiced in the province.

Hon. Mr. Raney for his part based his argument largely upon his declaration that Premier Ferguson had promised to uphold and enforce the O. T. A. if it should be sustained at the polls. The projected amendment for stronger beer he viewed as a broken pledge and as the first step towards the return of the old license issue. He strongly maintained that the beverage was not the non-intoxicant which the Attorney-General claimed it to be.

Mr. Raney's Address

When Hon. W. E. Raney opened his address,he said that his original intention some weeks ago had been to speak upon the O. T. A., merely to say that, should any onslaught be made upon the legislation, the Progressive party would be prepared to rush into the breach to defend it. Such intention, however, had perforce been abandoned as the result of an insignificant paragraph in the Speech from the Throne, which had heralded the stronger beer amendment.

Mr. Raney told the House what, before the Government's 'right about face' on its O. T. A. policy, he had intended to say upon the issue. He had purposed stating that the members from Windsor, Southeast and Southwest Toronto were seeking from the Government action which no administration could take and survive for a day. He had also intended to declare that his political party desired to reap no advantage for itself from the existing O. T. A. situation.

Continuing, Mr. Raney said that such allusions had not been allowed to him because of the policy which the Government had embraced. He regarded the proposed amendment as a definite attack upon the O. T. A. in its two essential features, namely, its definition of what shall constitute an intoxicating beverage and its restrictions upon the sale of intoxicating beverages. He cited that, for the purposes of the Volstead Act in the United States and of definitions of beverages in the United Kingdom, 1-2 of one per cent absolute alcohol and two per cent. proof spirits were respectively regarded as constituting intoxicating contents. The two and one-half per cent. allowed by the O. T. A. was regarded as liberal in contrast with these other standards. The unrestricted sale of the stronger beverage was also strongly criticised by the speaker.

Mr. Raney thereupon delved into the history of the O.T.A. legislation and of Premier Ferguson's record upon the liquor issue. He wondered if Premier Ferguson realized that his present policy was a straight rebuff in the teeth of the people of the province who had voted for O.T.A. in 1919 He wondered also, what had been the reasons for the "startling and shocking amendments" proposed to the O.T.A. Mr. Raney dealt vigorously with Premier Ferguson's alleged ascents and descents upon the beer wagon, commencing during his association with Premier Whitney, continuing during his association with Premier Hearst, when he had come down from the beer wagon, and continuing also during his own personal career as leader of the Ontario Conservatives. He had been four times on the beer wagon and three times on the water wagon during the past 10 years. Mr. Raney could only find a parallel to this record in that of the celebrated, "Off again, on again, gone again, Finnegan."

The Progressive leader painted the "sinister background" behind the Ferguson policy, declaring that it was supplied by the influence of the liquor interests, who were a unit in support of Premier Ferguson. The speaker asserted as a significant fact that every member of the present Ferguson Cabinet was opposed to the O.T.A. or else was the representative of a wet riding. He recalled the presence of Hon. Dr. Leeming Carr, Minister without portfolio from East Hamilton, at a recent caucus of the wet Conservative members and supposed that his presence there had been sanctioned by Premier Ferguson. If such was not the case, Mr. Raney asked, why was Dr. Carr still a member of the Government? He also called attention to Dr. Carr's recent statement that a bath-tub full of the stronger beer would not prove intoxicating to a person.

"Hear, hear," James McCausland, M.P.P. approved, adding in reply to further taunts by Mr. Raney that "We like good beer."

What else, Mr. Raney asked, could be expected from the Conservative Cabinet than its present O.T.A. policy. "One does not gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles. I assure the honorable members of the House that miracles do not occur in politics," he said.

Touching then upon the fact that the O.T.A. plebiscite had been held on October 23rd last he recalled that at the prevous session the Government had stated its willingness to trust the people. Why, then, he demanded, did it not trust the people? They had spoken in the plebiscite and the Government should bind itself by the mandate which they had given.

Mr. Raney quoted a scientific data of the Carnegie Institute to prove his contention that the 4.4 per cent. brew was intoxicating. Referring farther to the suggestion made by one House member that no person would drink a whole quart of beer, Mr. Raney assured the House that many young fellows deliberately sat down to carouses of an evening's or of many hours' duration, and that they would then consume several quarts of beer. Mr. Raney also quoted the Montreal Gazette as describing the stronger beer as a "fairly potent brew", and drew attention to this paper's prophecy that the stronger beer would be the first but not the last weakening of Ontario prohibition. He averred that the reintroduction of the licensing system at present would be "a little too raw", but he saw it as in the offing if the proposed step of the Government should carry.

FRANCES WILLARD DAY CELEBRATED

The Belleville W. C. T. Union celebrated Frances Willard Day by an overflowing gathering on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Pearsall, the President, occupied the chair. The opening devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. W. H. Merry. The program consisted of an excellent report of the Dominion Convention recently held in Toronto, by Mrs. J. Waddell; an appreciative and vivid presentation of the life of Frances Willard, founder of the Women's Christian Union, by Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth of Cannifton, and pleasing vocal solos by Miss Lavoie.

The reception committee consisted of Mrs. Dr. Baker, Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Waddell, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Macauley and Mrs. Farley. During the social half hour, Miss Hawley and Mrs MacTavish poured tea, while Mrs. E. W. Dickens, Mrs. Dr. Cronk, Mrs. Maurice Lavoie and Mrs. Hinchey served.

A warm reception was accorded to the former President, Mrs. Gibson, who has been laid aside for some time through illness. In a few well-chosen words, she thanked the ladies and urged them to renewed vigilance and devotion to the cause of temperance during the momentous days that are coming.

Was Bad Manners to Throw Down Your Liquor as Into a Funnel

Interesting Documents on 17th Century Manners Come to Light

HINTS TO LADYES

They are Told not to Smack Lips Like a Pig

(Associated Press Despatch)

Liverpool, Feb. 18.—Letters and other documents dealing with manners and customs of daily life in the 17th century which came to light recently tend to show that it was customary in those days for "persons of quality" to have sets of their own spoons, knives and forks which they took with them when invited out. These papers were of particular interest just at this time to collectors of antiques in connection with an addition made recently to the British Museum. This was the earliest hall-marked table fork known, engraved with the crest of Manners and Montagu, 1632. About the same time a silver spoon of identical hall-mark and crest was taken to Heddon Hall.

Mention of such a set is made in the will of Mrs. Katherine Ridgeway, dated May 9, 1627, which was among the documents destroyed in a fire some time ago at the Four Courts, Dublin. The will says:

"I bequeath to the Right Honorable the Lord Chancellor my little seller of chrystal bottles item. I give and bequeath to my Ladye of Elye my guilt spoone with the forks and penknife suitable to it." Mrs. Ridgeway was widow of George Ridgeway, secretary of the Irish Council, and the Lord Chancellor was Adam Loftus, Lord Loftus of Ely.

Books on etiquette and table manners were far from being the porerogative of the Victorian age, it is revealed, as in 1653 there was published in London a book entitled "The Accomplished Lady's Rich Closet of Rarities," in which the following rules are laid down:

"A gentlewoman being at table abroad or at home must observe to keep her body straight, and lean not by any means upon her elbowes—nor by ravenous gesture discover a voracious appetite. Talke not when you have meate in your mouth; and do not smacke like a pig—nor eat speenemeat so hot that tears stand in your eyes.

"It is very uncourtly to drink so large a draught that your breath is almost gone, and you are forced to blow strongly to recover yourself. Throwing down your liquor as into a funnel is an action fitter for a juggler than a gentlewoman. In carving at your own table distribute the best pieces first, and it will appear very decent and comely to use a fork; so touch no meat without it."

Reference to the fork was of particular interest to the museum authorities, for those present-day indispensable instruments had not then been long introduced, it appears.

Forks were first imported from Italy, and their use in England at the time was considered pedantic and laughable. One writer of the time speaks of a silver fork as "being used of late by some of our spruce gallants," which did not tend to make the fork popular at all among certain sets.

ENGLISH RADIO FANS BLAME OLD STATION

London, Feb. 18.—The wireless "howler" which so seriously interfered with reception from the United States during the recent wireless week, has been discovered. It is the old wireless station at Northolt, Middlesex, constructed 15 years ago, and described by up-to-date enthusiasts as being hopelessly inefficient, and whose "howls, splutters and wheezes, as it sends out its Morse message, as running wireless reception all over the country."

ROBBERS TOOK ROLE OF THE BELL-HOP

San Jose, Calif., Feb. 18.—The Hotel St. James, which adjoins the County Jail here, was held up on Monday by two men, who took $2,500 worth of jewellery from Clerk Harry Williams. After tying Williams and the bell boy in a room adjoining the office, the robbers registered a newly arrived couple and one of them enacting the role of bell boy, escorted the guests to their rooms and collected a tip.

MARRIED CHINAMAN, HAD ANOTHER ONE

Toronto, Feb. 18.—One of the recent marriages of a white woman to a Celestial was exploded Tuesday afternoon, when Margaret LeCroix, who was recently married to George Kwong, Chinese, was arrested by Policewoman Robertson charged with bigamy.

The marriage of the woman, aged 26, to the Chinaman took place on the 12th inst, performed by Rev. W. Hardy Andrews, of Queen Street East Presbyterian Church. Reading of the marriage, Antonio LePage, of Midland, noticed that the name was somewhat similar to that of his wife, who had left him. Le Page consequently came to Toronto.

The young woman was found working in a downtown restaurant, with her husband asleep in a Dundas street house. She at first denied knowing Le Page, but finally admitted the truth. The first marriage took place in Penetang Oct. 5, 1915, under the name of Cecilia LeCroix.

"I do not want to see her go to jail. All I want is a divorce," said LePage Monday afternoon.

Le Page had not seen his wife for about seven years.

Last week, Rev. Mr. Andrews, when spoken to in regard to her marriage with Kwong, said he had questioned the woman for an hour or more, and she insisted on being married to him, "because I love him."

PUT CLOSED SEASON ON PEARL INDUSTRY

Manila, Feb. 18.—One-half of the pearl banks around the Sulu archipelago will be closed for a period of three years beginning January 1, 1925, for the purpose of protecting the pearl industry of the Philippine Islands.

Insular officials, after an investigation, became convinced that the pearl banks would be exhausted within a few years unless steps were taken to protect the industry by establishing a closed season for a long period. The bureau of customs and the constabulary have organized a patrol to protect the banks.

It Pays To Beg Over in Leipsig

Some Made $25 a Day; Children Trained at School

(Associated Press Despatch)

Leipsic, Feb. 18.—It seemingly pays to beg in Leipsic. The municipal welfare office of this city has unearthed facts as to the profits of the begging profession that would seem fanciful, were they not borne out by first-hand testimony.

One blind woman, for instance, manages to scrape together 1,000 marks, about $250, a week. Daily earnings of $15 or $25 a day are not at all unusual with men and women beggars of experience. Two brothers who were offered jobs energetically declined them, saying they were making much more money with their concerts. These concerts consisted in singing before the houses of the middle class and following the performance with a sad story ending in a plea for alms. One of the brothers, it developed, spent his Sundays driving a motorcycle with his fiancee.

In another instance a beggar offered the owner of a certain clever dog $100 for the loan of the canine during begging hours because, he said, the animal would help his business. Another beggar engaged two cripples to beg for him. He paid them a regular salary, but claimed the entire earnings. In still another case a beggar who pretended he was a disabled war veteran paid two watchers twenty-five cents an hour each to warn him whenever a policeman appeared.

Investigation further developed that one of the most lucrative forms of begging was that of exhibiting children by way of winning public sympathy. It was discovered that there exists a school in Leipsic at which children are taught by experienced beggars what to say and what sort of doleful face to put up. Children thus trained are then hired out to professional beggars, who in return hand over a share of the proceeds to the director the school.

TWO events make 1925 notable in the annals of rail transportation. It marks the centenary of the locomotive engine and the fortieth anniversary of the completion of Canada's first transcontinental, the Canadian Pacific Railway's main line from Montreal to Vancouver. The first opened a new chapter in the history of the world; the second a new chapter in the history of Canada.

Looking back over the events of the intervening century it will readily be agreed that the introduction of the locomotive was one of the most important events in modern history. It has enriched the life of the Old World by delivering to it at low cost the products of the ends of the earth; while it has brought within the reach of the pioneer on the frontiers of civilization highly finished products which can be developed only where a numerous population makes possible a minute division of labor. It has given the settler in Northern Alberta, over 5,000 miles distant from London, a market in that great metropolis just as certain as that enjoyed by the English farmer. It has also made the same settler as much a customer of London as are the people of near-by countries.

The locomotive engine made its first appearance in Canada in 1837 on the Champlain and St. Lawrence Railroad. This road was only 16 miles long, and ran between the town of La Prairie on the St. Lawrence River and St. John's on the Richelieu. This railway was opened in 1836, being operated by horses during the first year.

However, it was not until with the incorporation of the Grand Trunk Railway in 1852 that the railway era in Canada really began. While a beginning had been made in 1837, still during the next fifteen years only 50 miles of line were added. The Grand Trunk linked up Ontario and Quebec, and gave both provinces direct connection with the Atlantic coast through Portland. It also laid the foundations for direct connection between that port and Chicago. Much railway building followed in Ontario. The next project of importance was the building of the Intercolonial, which was begun in 1868, and completed in 1876. This gave Ontario and Quebec direct connection through Canadian territory with a Canadian port on the Atlantic open all the year round. In the meantime an agitation for the building of a railway to connect Ontario and Quebec with the Pacific Coast culminated in the incorporation of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

On November 7th, 1885 at Cragellachie in Eagle Pass, a gorge in the Gold Range, British Columbia, Sir Donald A. Smith, afterwards Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, drove the last spike in the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, thus connecting Montreal with Vancouver. This was a notable event, not only in the history of Canada, but of the British Empire. By the connecting of the Pacific Coast with Montreal Canada secured its first transcontinental railway. Indeed, it was the first real transcontinental on this continent, for while in 1869 the east coast of the United States was connected with San Francisco by rail, and several other such connections have been added, still even now no single railway in the United States extends from Coast to Coast as does the Canadian Pacific in Canada. November 7th was also a notable day for the British Empire in that the Canadian Pacific provided a short cut from Britain to the Orient. As Sir Charles Tupper in his Reminiscences has pointed out, it brought Yokohama three weeks nearer to London than it was by the Suez Canal.

The history of the Canadian Pacific Railway is the history of Greater Canada. When it was first proposed there were only four provinces in Confederation, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Between 1870 and 1873 Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, and British Columbia entered, the last mentioned on the express condition that it would be connected with Eastern Canada by a line of railway. At that time Manitoba was a mere postage stamp in dimensions, and the regions between it and the Rockies were unorganized territory.

The promise of the Canadian Pacific not only brought British Columbia into Confederation, and gave Canada a window on the Pacific; but the building of it, by establishing direct and quick communication between the east and the west fixed the destiny of the vast regions west of the Great Lakes and north of the 49th parallel. The ties of sentiment were thus strengthened by the economic link of steel. Fifty years ago it was by no means certain that the territories between Lake Superior and the Rockies would not pass into the hands of the United States. The shortest route from Eastern Canada to Fort Garry, now Winnipeg, was via Chicago and St. Paul. Trade moved north and south rather than east and west, so that political absorption seemed likely to follow American economic penetration.

It is with the development of Western Canada that the fortunes of the Canadian Pacific have been indissolubly linked. As it has expanded the West has grown. In 1885 there were hardly more than 150,000 people in the whole country west of the Great Lakes. As a result of the Riel Rebellion the country was also in a state of utter confusion. Still the year 1885 marks the real beginning of the period of western development. The country continued its policy of aggressive construction by adding feeders to its main line. This encouraged settlement, for settlers felt themselves secure as long as they were not too far from the railway. Note how the population on the plains began to increase. In 1885, when there were not more than 1,000 miles of railway there were only 130,000 people in that vast territory between Winnipeg and Calgary and Edmonton, one-half of whom were located in Manitoba. Within the next 20 years, the prairie provinces, with about 4,500 miles of railway, had a population of 800,000. By 1923 these provinces had 20,000 miles of line, of which 8,500 belonged to the Canadian Pacific, and their population was 2,000,000.

The driving of the last spike at Craigellachie also marked the opening by the company of the most aggressive and sustained immigration and colonization campaign that Canada has witnessed. From that time to the present the company has spent nearly $70,000,000 on its immigration and colonization activities. And it got the immigrants too. During the years preceding the incorporating of the company immigrants were coming to Canada at the rate of only 35,000 a year. This was a very light inflow, for away back in 1832 as many as 52,000 were received; but during the period 1881-91 immigration was very nearly trebled; that is it came at the rate of 92,000 a year. Indeed, during the last two decades of the last century the Government seems to have left immigration pretty much to the company, for during the 1882-1903 period, the total expenditure on immigration was only $5,475,000, as compared with an appropriation of $3,400,000 this year. Through the company's agencies have come the greater proportion of the over 5,000,000 immigrants received during the last 40 years.

Coincident with the driving of the last spike at Craigellachie the company launched out as a promoter of foreign trade and transoceanic travel. In this department not only has it been by far the most important factor in Canada, but one of the most important within the British Empire, which is saying a great deal, when it is recalled that the latter is the greatest commercial unit that the world has ever seen. Within less than nine months after this spike had been driven there arrived at Port Moody, the then terminus of the Pacific, a brig with the first cargo from Japan for the railway. That little brig the "W. B. Flint" of 800 tons, has grown into a great fleet of over 400,000 tons, sailing on two oceans, and linking Europe, America, Asia, and Oceania. In 1887 a regular trans-Pacific service was established, and in 1902 a similar service was launched on the Atlantic. Begun originally as a feeder to the freight department of the railway, the passenger feature of these steamship services has now become of chief importance. As an evidence of how the trans-Pacific trade has grown it may be said that in 1885 Canada sold to China only $5,972 worth of products and to Japan only $21,780 worth, whereas during the 12 months ending October, 1924, her sales to China were $14,612,482 and to Japan $26,570,032.

Belleville Holds Second Bonspiel

All Entries Are Requested To Be In To-night

From this date, everything looks rosy for a real good time at the Belleville Curling rink on Thursday and Friday. On these two days, the second local bonspiel will be held for valuable prizes.

Officers made the request to-day that all entries for this bonspiel be handed in by to-night so that the draw for rinks can be made right away.

MUCH INTEREST IN SENIOR PLAY-OFF

Toronto, Feb. 18—Memories of other days were revived yesterday morning when a long line of fans waited patiently at the Arena for the opening of the sale of the Parkdale-Peterboro reserved seat tickets for the group play-off games on Thursday and Saturday. It was a good-natured and enthusiastic crowd that arrived early in the morning to form in line outside the Arena doors. Indications are that the teams will play to packed houses, interest having been revived as the teams race down the stretch in the O.H.A. senior race.

The defeat of the "etes" by the University of Toronto at Peterboro on Monday night has not damped the spirits of their supporters who believe that the Liftlock City players were not extended to the limit in a game which meant little to them. "Conny" Smythe of the University of Toronto has taken charge of the Peterboro team and the Easterners will likely arrive here today and go into seclusion until just before the start of the battle tomorrow night.

Smythe will likely order a practice at the Arena, after which the 'Petes' will await the test. They know what to expect and they are confident that on the large ice surface here they can defeat the Paddlers. In the games at home the "Petes" never showed to advantage. They won two and lost two but they were not defeated on the road in the O.H.A. or S.P.A. series. series.

Rumors were thick here yesterday that Harry Watson would not play, that Goalkeeper Joe Dwyer of the Peterboro team has a broken hand, and that there is dissension in the ranks of the "Petes". These are probably the usual before-the-battle calamity yells. Dwyer has a sore hand allright, but he will be there as good as ever tomorrow. If there is dissension in the ranks the players have cleverly concealed it during the games There is no more unselfish team anywhere than the team led by Dwyer.

Parkdale will be handicapped if Watson fails to stand up under the heavy grind. Watson's shoulder has been giving him trouble, but the P.C.C. officers think that he will be able to go the route tomorrow. The game will commence at 8.30 sharp.

DEMPSEY GETS LOTS OF OPPORTUNITIES

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Eddie Kane, manager of Tom Gibbons, said here yesterday that he has accepted terms for a match with Jack Dempsey in California, either in May or in June.

Kane would not reveal any other information, but it is reported the proposed match may be staged in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, which has a seating capacity of 53,000. Gibbons, he said, will start training for the match next month.

Wills Too

New York, Feb. 18.—Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, through his manager, Paddy Mullins, yesterday filed a challenge for a match with Jack Dempsey with the State Athletic Commission. Accompanying the challenge was a certified cheque for $2,500.

In presenting the challenge, Mullins said that, in the event Dempsey failed to accept within a period of six months, Wills would claim the heavyweight title. The commission refused to act on the challenge today, deferring action until its meeting next week.

Frank Carpenter of Freeport, L.I., was suspended until April 1 for participating in a match with Mike McTigue in Massachusetts last November. McTigue is in disfavor in this State, and all who meet him anywhere out of New York State are blacklisted for six months.

Commissioner William H. Muldoon presented a new rule, which would make it a foul for a wrestler to toss his opponent from the ring. Such offense will result in disqualification if the rule is adopted.

Why He Succeeded

From hard work on a farm to the study of medicine in Cincinnati, where he was graduated in 1862, was the course which Dr. R. V. Pierce took.

In his younger days he practiced medicine over a large district. It was then the new oil fields near Titusville, Pa. Finally he determined to put up some of his prescriptions in ready-to-use form in order to reach a larger number of families.

He thus early moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and established the World's Dispensary, where he put up Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for the blood as well as the Favorite Prescription for women, carefully preparing them from roots, barks and herbs and placed them with druggists everywhere.

During the last sixty years Dr. Pierce's Discovery, for the blood, has been sold in larger quantities by druggists than any other medicine. It is a tonic in its effects on the stomach and digestive apparatus; an alterative in its action on the blood, liver and skin. It increases the appetite, stimulates the digestion, enriches the blood, and makes both men and women feel as they did when they were young and care-free.

Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Discovery, in tablet or liquid form, or send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, in Bridgeburg, Ont.

New Ladies' League For Afternoon Play

Wolves, Mah Jongs, Industrials and Bankers are Winners

The new ladies afternoon league got under way at the Recreation alley Tuesday afternoon with some very good scores, the Wolves of the North winning from the MicMac.'s. Although Mrs. MacMillan kept rushing in her subs in every game, her team lost by over 200 pins. Mrs. North was high for the winners and Mrs. Duff for the losers.

Shave Mah Jongs

The Mah Jong girls team had their closest shave to losing a game in the present league, when the Strikers were leading the first and second game, in the third the Mah Jongs came through with good scores and won out by 112 pins, Miss Boyle rolling up a tidy score of 628, Mrs. Salisbury was high for the Strikers.

The M. P. Shops gave the Officials No. 2 the worst beating they have had when the M.P. Shops rolled a record score for the C.N.R. League, spilling the maple for 2776, with Gerow the topnotch of all with 704 for his three strings and 299 for his high single. "Slats" Kerr was high for the Officials.

Led by Tom Barrett the Industrials gave the Pencil Pushers a good trimming when the former rolled a high score for the C.I.A. league. T. Barrett was in his best form when he came within a few pins of breaking the alley record for a single game that has been hanging up over a year, Barrett rolled 351 having a mark in every frame and finishing the game with 6 strikes.

The K. of C. gave the Bankers a good run for the money in the junior league when they held them down to a 64-pin margin. Only one pin separated the teams at the end of the first game and seven pins in the second. Dr. Fahey and Morlock were high bowlers. Players and scores—

PRINTERS WINNERS BY SMALL MARGIN

The Excelsiors were in no sense of the word whitewashed by the Printers in their game last night but the latter quintette had the "blockletters" spread along so thick that Excelsiors could not make their usual progress Members of both teams were somewhat off their game last night due partly to the fact that they were not at all sure whether they were bowling or debating. In the latter department, honors were about evenly divided although the final outcome of the bowling contest saw Printers tucking away a win.

Canadian Canoeist Jumps Off Bridge

George Smyth thrills Crowd At Paris With Stunt Yesterday

Paris, Feb. 18—George Smyth, a Canadian canoeist, bearing his canoe with him in his descent, jumped off the bridge of the Invalides into the River Seine Tuesday, and although the craft shipped considerable water, he succeeded in bailing it out, righting it and paddling it to shore, to the accompaniment of cheers from a big throng.

The Seine was high from continued rains, making the distance from the level of the bridge to the water about thirty-five feet, but the swift tide accentuated the difficulty of the feat. Smyth was forced to swim alongside his canoe nearly 600 yards in freezing weather before he succeeded in emptying it.

Smyth is a former flight-lieutenant of the Canadian army. He canoed from Sydney, N.S., to New York in 1924 and in November of last year he crossed the English Channel in the same canoe. He is now on his way to Rome on an all-water route—the canals, the River Rhone and the Mediterranean.

When he finally was able to board his craft he paddled back against the current, finally clambering through a barge window to get some dry clothes and to escape the ovations of the large crowd on the river banks. The police who had been warned of the attempt, had a boat in readiness for any eventuality.

OTTAWA SENATORS NEED TO-DAY'S GAME

Ottawa Senators make their first appearance under their new ownership and their last of the regular N. H. L. schedule at the Arena to-night when they encounter St. Patrick's in a really crucial struggle. The result of the game means a lot to both teams, but most of all to the visitors. At present they are three points behind St. Patrick's and Canadiens in the league standing, and must dislodge either the Irish or Habitants from the first division if they are to get in the play-off for the league title.

A victory to-night will still leave the Senators in fourth place, but they will be only one point behind the locals, and will have the edge for the remainder of the schedule, as St. Patrick's have four games away from home and only two at home during the final three weeks of the season and Ottawa has three at home and the same number away, visiting Hamilton and the two trailing clubs, Montreal and Boston. A loss for the visitors to-night means that they will have to win practically all of their remaining games to have a chance of getting in the charmed circle, as they will be five points behind St. Patrick's and at least three in arrears of the champions, who meet Montreal to-night.

If St. Patrick's win to-night they will only have to win three of their remaining six games to get in the play-off unless Ottawa rides roughshod over their opponents in the six games. When Ottawa visited Toronto for the first time this season they defeated the locals and maintained a winning streak which lasted until they paid their second visit to the home of the Irish and took them well up the ladder. Since they lost to the locals here they have not been traveling any too well, cannot afford to drop a game. It is do or die with the Senators to-night.

HAMILTONS TAKE ANOTHER NOTCH UP

Boston, Mass., Feb. 18.—The Hamilton Tigers increased their lead in the National Hockey League by defeating the Boston Bruins 2—1 in an interesting game here last night. The advent of Carson Cooper to the line-up on the local ice speeded up the Bruins' attack, but did not improve the passing and shooting of the local forwards. The defeat was Boston's third at the hands of Hamilton by a 2—1 score. Herberts and Cooper led in the Boston attack.

The individual efforts of W. Green and Burch for Hamilton thrilled the 3,000 fans in the Arena. Brilliant dashes constituted the Tigers' chief means of offence, resulting goals by W. Green and McKinnon after pretty stick work and skating had carried them to a scoring position. Boston's goal came from Hitchman's stick after a frenzied Bruin attack had threatened the Hamilton goal for many minutes.

Referee—Dr. O'Leary, Ottawa.

The summary:

First Period

No score.

Second Period

2. Hamilton, W. Green 3.15.
2. Hamilton, McKininon 14.02.

Third Period

3. Boston, Hitchman 9.47.

Final Score—Hamilton 2, Boston 1.

AURA LEE DIDN'T HAVE A LOOK-IN

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Feb. 18—The Soo led Aura Lee a merry chase last night and wound up on the big end of a 13 to 3 score. The Torontonians appeared deplorably weak on the hard ice, which favored the homesters. Cain, Bond and Waikem appeared to advantage and worked hard for a closer result, Bond getting two of his team's tallies, and assisting Morris in the other. Cain was a marked man and was unable to get within dangerous distance of the Hounds' goal.

Donnelly, Brown, Woodruff and Lessard ran wild, and Phillips, with a closed left eye, put up a wonderful game considering his disability. The game was devoid of penalties.

The Soo blanked the visitors in the first frame, taking five goals themselves, two by Phillips, two by Lessard and one by Burke.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

"No," he said. "Afterward, if—if you will give me hope. Miss Delaine, can you not guess what it is I want to tell you—to say to you?"

Elaine's hand tightened on the book and she looked straight before her. If it were only over, and he had gone!

"I think you must have seen," he went on, his lips quivering, his hand plucking at the edge of his coat; "I think any one must have seen that—I love you."

The color flamed in Elaine's cheeks, and she drew back a step.

"Do not go on, please," she said coldly but quietly.

"Ah, I must!" he broke in, his hands gripping the whip he carried nervously. "I must speak! You will let me speak! I ought to be allowed to plead my cause! It—it is life or death to me, Elaine!"

Her lips tightened as he used her Christian name, but she said nothing.

"You don't know how I feel, how a man feels who loves a woman as I love you. I have been a changed man since I have known you. I can think of nothing but you day or night. I beg—I implore you to have some mercy on me! I have never seen any one so beautiful, so sweet, so gracious as you and—and I love you with all my heart and soul! Elaine, may I hope? I only ask you to let me hope! I will do anything; I will wait for years, if—if you will promise to try and love me and be my wife."

He had not pleaded his cause at all badly, and Elaine was moved, as a true, sweet-hearted woman must be moved when a man tells her that he loves her, though he be as ugly as the Prince of Darkness.

"I—I am very sorry," was all she could say, in a low and, indeed, a humble voice.

He winced and his light eyes sought her face for a moment, then shifted back to her feet.

"Don't say that, I implore, I beg of you!" he entreated. "It sounds as if—as if there was no hope for me."

"There is no hope," said Elaine, very softly. Was it not better to stop him at once?

His face flamed, then grew deadly pale.

"Why—why do you say that?" he exclaimed with a sudden passion. "You—you refuse me! Why? Why?"

"Because—ah, you should not ask me that, Captain Sherwin!" said Elaine almost piteously.

"But I do, I do!" he said, putting his hand to his lips as if to still their trembling. "I—I have a right. My—my love gives me the right to implore your patience. You—you scarcely know me."

Elaine looked up at him with sad gravity.

"Might I not say the same to you?" she said gently.

"No! It is different. Quite different. If I had only seen you once I should have loved you as dearly, as madly as I do now. No one could help loving you. There is not a man in the place who does not worship you, and—and you know it. I don't ask you to love me yet. I only ask for hope. It is not much. It is not much, Elaine dear, dear Elaine!"

Elaine turned slightly away from him.

"It is more than I can give," she said.

"Do you mean that you will never—never be my wife?" he said, and his usually soft voice was hoarse and thick now.

"Yes," she said. "I am very sorry. I did not know; indeed I did not know. Oh, will you leave me now, please, Captain Sherwin?"

He stood gnawing at his moustache, his fair face looking dreadfully weak and womanish with its expression of baffled love and bitter disappointment.

"There—there must be some—some reason for this," he said almost to himself, but Elaine heard him. "Why should I be so hateful to you?"

"You are not hateful to me," she said, faltering for the scene was growing almost unendurable. "I do not hate you."

"Then why do you treat me so coldly, so cruelly?" he responded quickly, passionately. "Why do you not at least give me some hope, unless——" He stopped, and his face lost all its fairness and became distorted by the passion which, in a weak man, is always the strongest—jealousy.

Elaine looked at him, not understanding the least, then moved away from him toward the bridge.

With something like the cry of a spoiled child he sprang after her, and actually caught her arm.

"I am right," he exclaimed hoarsely; "there is some one else."

Elaine's face grew crimson with indignation now, but she did not utter the denial that sprang to her lips; maidenly pride silenced it.

"Let me go!" she said, panting a little, for no man saving her father had ever held her thus. "You have no right——"

"Right! Yes! I have a right to know the truth, to know who it is who has come between us. I must know!" He stopped, out of breath, and Elaine tried to draw her arm from his grasp; but he still held her, his light eyes flashing jealously, madly, into hers and she uttered a cry. It was not altogether one of fear, for she was a soldier's daughter and the blood of generations of brave men ran in her veins, not fear altogether, but a commingling of dread and womanly indignation.

Before the echo of the faint, half-articulate cry had died away she felt rather than saw a third figure on the bridge beside them, and the next instant some one had struck Captain Sherwin away from her and she was free.

She drew back against the railing of the bridge and could distinguish nothing for a moment; then she looked up and saw a tall, stalwart man standing between her and her too passionate lover.

She could not see his face, but she knew that he was a stranger to her.

Captain Sherwin had been knocked against the railing, but he recovered himself in an instant, and, white almost to lividness, glared at the newcomer.

"How—how dare you?" he panted furiously, and he raised his whip.

The stranger caught it as it descended, flung it over the bridge, and then, by a movement which is an easy one for an accomplished wrestler, seized the young man round the waist, and lifting him bodily, held him over the stream.

"Go and pick up your whip, my friend," he said, and even in her agitated condition Elaine was conscious of the quiet, self-contained tones of a voice grave and deep beyond the common.

She sprang forward, and laid her hand tremblingly upon the strong one that held the captain in its iron grip.

"Oh, no, no!" she cried pantingly. "You—you will kill him."

The man turned his head and looked at her, a grim smile upon his face, and their eyes met for a second in silence: while the captain clung with one hand to the outside edge of the rail, helpless as an infant, his light eyes glaring with rage and terror.

CHAPTER III.

The stranger who had played the part of rescuer in half-dramatic fashion looked at Elaine for a moment with a grim smile. "No, no; you will kill him," she had exclaimed; and, answering her, he said quietly:

"I don't know about killing; it would cool him."

But he allowed Captain Sherwin to gain a firmer grip at the rail, and the next moment he stood on the bridge in safety.

All this has taken some time to describe. It required only a few moments in the acting, and indeed so neatly and promptly had the little feat in calisthenics been performed that Captain Sherwin was still panting as much with the shock of the surprise as with fear. And he had been in an awkward situation. The drop from the bridge might not have "killed him," as his opponent had said, but it might well have broken a limb.

The three formed a group on the little rustic bridge which would have supplied a figure-painter with a very pretty subject.

In the middle stood Captain Sherwin white with passion; on one side had dealt with him so easily; and, on had dealt withh im so easily; and, on the other, Elaine, pale and agitated, her hand pressed to her bosom as she struggled to quiet her wildly beating heart.

The stranger stood with one of his strong hands resting lightly on the bridge-rail, looking from one to the other, but Captain Sherwin was the first to speak.

"You—you shall answer for this!" he said, evidently making a great effort to recover his self-possession, and carry things with a high hand.

His opponent smiled just as grimly as before.

"As you please, sir," he said, and there was a touch of weary impatience in his tone as if the affair were beginning to grow slightly tiring.

"You—you have acted like a ruffian," frowned Captain Sherwin. The grim smile broadened very slightly. "But for the presence of this lady—"

The smile developed into a short, reluctant laugh. It was contempt and mockery epitomized, and it seemed to madden the captain.

"You are a ruffian and a bully, sir!" he said furiously. "And I insist upon knowing who and what you are."

"Excuse me," came the response, and the deep grave voice sounded strangely calm by contrast with the young fellow's shrill, passionate one, "but I think that question is my privilege seeing that you have chosen my grounds for the place in which to insult a lady."

"Insult! But I will not bandy words with you!" exclaimed Captain Sherwin. "My name is Sherwin. I am an officer and a gentleman——"

"An officer, perhaps," said the grave voice with with quiet scorn.

"Your name—your name! I insist!" shouted Sherwin, clinching his hands.

"My name is Nairne," was the reply.

The quiet response was like a douche of cold water on the captain's ire.

"The—the marquis!" he faltered, growing red as beetroot.

The marquis nodded.

"And now, as you have obtained the information you require, perhaps I may venture to ask you to leave my grounds. You will know where to find me if you should desire any further discussion," he added.

Captain Sherwin bit his lip and looked from one side to the other.

"I—I was not aware—or, if aware, had forgotten—that I was trespassing. There has been a mistake, a misapprehension. I cannot believe that—that—a gentleman so well known as—as the Marquis of Nairne would have wantonly attacked one who—who is a perfect stranger to him——"

The marquis shrugged his shoulders slightly.

"I saw this lady struggling to release herself from your grasp. I heard her call for assistance, and—I liberated her; there has been no misapprehension on my part."

"It—is all a mistake," said the captain, raising his eyes and letting them drop again instantly. "This lady and I had been discussing a matter of—of importance and—I think you ought to know, my lord, that I have the honor to be a friend of Miss Delaine's."

The marquis turned his eyes—they were dark and penetrating—upon Elaine.

"Is that so?" he said gently, and the question made the captain wince and crimson; it was so evident that the marquis declined to accept any statement of his without corroboration.

Elaine's only desire was to prevent any further conflict between the two men, and to get away as soon as possible, and although at another time she would have replied, "Not a friend—an acquaintance," she said almost inaudibly:

"Yes!"

The marquis raised his hat.

"There is no more to be said," he remarked. "If you deem yourself aggrieved, Captain Sherwin, you will find it easy to gain redress. We don't fight duels now; we let the lawyers do it for us."

"I—I am quite satisfied with the expression of your regret, my lord," said Captain Sherwin, whereat the marquis smiled grimly, "and I have no desire to carry the matter further. I wish you good-day," and he raised his hat and moved away.

As he did so he glanced imploringly at Elaine, but she did not move, and stood with downcast eyes, one hand resting on the rail of the bridge as Captain Sherwin walked slowly away.

VITAL FACTS FOR WOMEN

Sooner or later almost every woman is brought face to face with the fact that she is a victim of some weakness or ailment peculiar to her sex. It may be the young woman suffering from pain or irregularities, a mother who has brought on some weakness or displacement from overwork, or the middle aged woman passing through the most critical period of her life. For each of these trying periods Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved the greatest boon ever given to women, and there are women living in every town and city in the country who testify to its value.

Percy Marmont in Another Hit Role

"Idle Tongues" Playing at Griffin From Thursday To Saturday

Three stepping stones were all Percy Marmont required to achieve eminence on the screen. These were in the form of three motion pictures —"If Winter Comes," "The Marriage Cheat," and his latest "Idle Tonques."

Marmont began acting on the English stage, but there are few actors throughout the world who do not feel the magnet of the American screen, and Marmont, after several seasons in London, came to America.

He worked in minor roles in numerous pictures both in the East and West, and his natural histrionic ability finally won him his chance at stellar heights. This was in "If Winter Comes." His success here was noted all over the country, and when Thomas H. Ince prepared to film "The Marriage Cheat" Marmont was engaged to play the role of Paul Mayne, the solitary missionary of Hiti Huti.

His second step was as successful as his first, and now, in his third, "Idle Tongue," also an Ince production for First National, Marmont has carved a permanent niche in the hearts of film patrons for himself. Co-starring with Doris Kenyon, he fights the battle of love against gossip in a small New England town.

The story is an adaptation from Joseph C. Lincoln's novel, Dr. Nye," and was directed by Lambert Hillyer. Claude Gillingwater, the screen grouch," heads a fine supporting cast.

"Idle Tongues" coming to Griffin's Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Actor at Belle Took Many Chances

Takes Three Months' Vacation at End of Contract

Reed Howes, who has the leading male role in "The Cyclone Rider", which is coming to the Belle Theatre for a three-day run beginning tomorrow had so many hair-breadth escapes when the picture was being made that he announced he was going to take a three-month vacation from the camera just as soon as he completed all his contracts.

When you see "The Cyclone Rider," you will not wonder regarding the young daredevil's intention. Instead, you will wonder that he is still alive. Here are a few of the things he was called upon to do in course of the filming of this mighty William Fox thrill melodrama:

Fight for his life with an underworld gangster on a slender beam 300 fet above the ground.

In escaping from the same ruffian become a human pendulum and swing through the air on a rope to a building 100 feet away.

Allow a tunnel to be blown up and cave in on him while he is engaged in a fight with a desperate character of the Underworld.

Swing out in the air on a steel beam attached to a derrick and rescue a poor darky who has fallen out of a window and was clinging for life to the ledge of a building.

Jump across a gap of water, a distance of about ten feet, in a speeding automobile from a pier to a moving ferryboat.

Whizz through crowded city streets and over bumpy country roads in the same automobile, and then—

With the prize he was seeking just within his grasp forced to overturn his automobile to save the life of a little girl who had wandered from her mother in the path of his car.

After you see all these things performed in a manner that makes the pen seem a puny thing to attempt to describe them with, you won't wonder why Reed needs a vacation.

Others featured in the cast of this picture are Evelyn Brent, Alma Bennett and Charles Conklin. Thomas Buckingham is responsible for the scenario and direction and Lincoln J. Carter wrote the plot.

Last of Chautauqua

Napanee, Feb. 18.—The last of the Chautauqua series of entertainments given by the Young People of Trinity Methodist church, was given in the lecture room Monday night, before a large and appreciative audience. Each entertainment in the series was of a high order of merit and the programme rendered at the last one, by the Edith Marshall Clark Company, was well up to the high-class standard.

High School Closed

Almonte high school had to be closed last week owing to the prevalence of colds amongst the pupils. Half of the scholars were absent at the beginning of the week and many of those present should have been at home also.

Death of Capt. Hoadley

Captain John Hoadley, Alexandria Bay, aged sixty-eight, one of the oldest boat captains on the river, died Thursday, after a long illness.

Captain Hoadley was born in the village, Nov. 19th, 1837, and had lived in that vicinity all his life. While a young man he operated a boat shop and for many years built boats. Later he became a pilot and finally built the Ione, a steamship, which he chartered out. He did not run a regular passenger service, depending more on cruises for private parties, for his work.

Picton Items

Picton, Feb. 18.—Messrs. Lewis and Ray Spencer came down from Toronto with the remains of their father, who passed away in Buffalo, N. Y. While in Picton they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dougall Hoover, Main street west.

Colonel Grant Way and Chevalier Boyle of Belleville were in Picton on Friday last for the installation of officers of Picton Canton, No. 11, P. M., I. O.O.F. The following officers were elected: Commandant, Gerald Way; lieutenant, C. A. Newman; ensign, C. H. Hooper; clerk, G. A. Williams; accountant, E. A. Minaker. After the installation, J. E. Mulholland was the recipient of an address and a P. M. charm in appreciation of his services as commandant of the canton for the past three years.

Mrs. Dora Thompson was chosen delegate to represent Picton W.C.T.U. at the provincial convention to be held in Massey Hall, Toronto, February 17 and 18.

On Friday afternoon the local Salvation Army Corps visited the House of Refuge where they gave a sacred concert after which they served a delicious luncheon which was much appreciated by both inmates and management.

Miss Baldree, of Belleville, has opened up a studio in town for the teaching of Rag Time Music.

The Township Officers

The township council of the Front of Leeds and Lansdowne has chosen these municipal officers: Assessor for Leeds, William L. Sliter; assessor for Front of Lansdowne, Samuel E. Johnston; auditors, Joseph McCormack and P. Ross McVeigh; treasurer, George F. Johnston; sheep valuers, William Burns, Thomas Bell; road superintendent, Nathan McKay.

Fell on the Ice

W. W. Wood, Gananoque, slipped and fell on the ice while going from his residence to the boathouse and received quite a cut in the back of his head, requiring a doctor's attention. The injury was not sufficient to incapacitate him, however, and he was able to return to business later in the day.

Six Months Added

Frank Grice and John Westenhafer, two convicts who are serving time at the Portsmouth penitentiary, and who made their sensational escape from the snow shovelling gang on Saturday, January 3rd, appeared before County Magistrate J. W. Bradshaw, at Kingston on Monday afternoon and had six months added to their sentences. The two men had intended to go before judge and jury, but they changed their minds and appeared before Magistrate Bradshaw, pleaded guilty to the charge and had six months added to their sentences.

District Expenditures

In the main estimates tabled in the House of Commons Monday, the sum of $20,000 is given for the completion of the dormitory building at the Royal Military College at Kingston. For the completion of wharf repairs at the R.M.C. an additional sum of $1,800 is granted.

The estimates also show that $3,000 is given for a bublic building in Napanee, while for wharf repairs in Trenton a sum of $13,100 is set aside.

For Harbor

Oshawa, Feb. 18.—In the estimates tabled in the House of Commons Monday, the sum of $100,000 was set aside for Oshawa Harbor developments. It will be remembered that last year $50,000 was voted for this Harbor and the money expended in building piers and breakwaters. The additional $100,000 means that the work will be pushed vigorously this year. This is the largest sum voted for harbors in any place in the Province.

Y. M. C. A. Man Improving

Mr. H. Akerley, House Officer of the Kingston Y.M.C.A. who was struck down with a stroke several weeks ago, and who has been at the Kingston General Hospital ever since, has so far improved that he will be removed to his home today.

Cigarette Brown Out

Kingston, Feb. 18.—In paroling Arthur Brown, the Canadian Department of Justice has parted company with the last of the famous Stoney Mountain gang, the others, the Mecum brothers and Bonnar having meen deported during past years. Brown took part in the famous escape of that gang through the front door of the big Portsmouth institution some years ago which is still fresh in the minds of citizens. He secured his parole on Friday last and left the penitentiary quietly.

Arrange Church Name

When the United Church of Canada comes into existence early in June, Oshawa Presbyterian will be known as St. Andrew's, according to an announcement of Rev. F. J. Maxwell Sunda yevening. The selection of a name was recently decided upon by the Session. The church will be referred to as St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church until Union comes into effect.

Struck by Taxi

Muriel Branton, a girl of seven or eight, living at 66 McGregor street, Oshawa, was knocked donw by Johnston's Taxi Monday afternoon at the Central Taxi stand adjoining the Oshawa Y.M.C.A.

The car (new license No. 215176) was backing into the stand and when crossing the sidewalk struck the little girl knocking her down and dragging her some distance over the rough pavement.

The wheel passed over one foot throwing her to the sidewalk. Her hand and wrist were badly scratched and bled rather freely, but otherwise she did not seem to be severaly hurt. The driver took the injured girl and her two companions home in the car.

Darken Hair!
Look Young

NOBODY CAN TELL WHEN YOU RESTORE GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE TEA

Grand mother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for 'Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound,' you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known down town druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft bush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy soft and beautiful.

Bronchitis ended!

Sufferers from bronchitis need a quick-acting remedy like Shiloh. It brings away the phlegm, eases the chest pains and heals the sore tissues. Shiloh is made from the formula of a physician who specialized on throat and bronchial troubles. It is a concentrated remedy, pleasant to take. A few drops is an effective dose. Does not upset the stomach.

Estimates Smack Of Election Time

Two Elevators, Useless at Present, Take Over Million

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 18—In the main estimates tabled there is more evidence of an election than economy. Last year the total vote for main and supplementary estimates was $348,969,939. The vote asked for main estimates alone this year is $342,036,567. As the supplementary estimates each year approximate $10,000,000 the only conclusion is that the total vote will be from four to five million dollars more than for 1924-25.

How the money is being spent is seen in the votes to harbors and wharves. In Quebec Province there are votes of from $1,000 to $75,000 for 108 wharves, while Nova Scotia has similar votes for 52 wharves.

For the Toronto harbor $281,000 is placed in the estimates for harbor improvements. For the Welland ship canal, $15,000,000 is asked as compared with $11,000,000 last year. Two elevators, which will never be used for grain in the next twenty years, Halifax and Prince Rupert, receive liberal votes of $575,000 for the former and $500,000 for the latter.

A Summary

A comparison of the main estimates presented to the House of Commons with main estimates presented at the last session of Parliament is given below. The main estimates tabled last year included sums required for railways. This year the railway estimates were tabled separately and must be added to the total of main estimates for purposes of comparison.

Main estimates, 1924-25 (including railways) $400,571,850.

Main estimates, 1924-25 (including railways), $342,036,567.

Provision for railways and merchant marine, $60,868,000. Total, $40?,904,567.

The supplementary estimates last year amounted to $6,604,909. Supplementary estimates covering further requirements for 1925-26 will be tabled later in the session. Further supplementary estimates for 1924-25 will also be tabled.

Official summary of the estimates says:

"As there are additional supplementary estimates for 1924-25 still to be presented, the reduction of the total estimates for 1925-26 will be considerably greater than this amount.

"The estimates may be classified under the following headings: Uncontrollable and controllable expenditures both show net decreases. The uncontrollable expenditures show an increase of $1,010,000 on account of European war pensions, in consequence of the adoption by Parliament of the Ralston Commission's report, and an increase of $226,500 on account of superannuation; also an increase of $187,500 on account of subsidies to provinces, due to payment of subsidy to Saskatchewan on basis of increased population."

GREAT EXCITEMENT

Toronto, Feb. 18.—News was received from Cobalt Tuesday afternoon that "great excitement" prevails there by reason of a discovery on the 300-foot level of the Provincial Mine of a vein twelve inches wide, heavily mineralized with smaltite and impregnated with native silver. Letters To The Editor

NORTHERN ONTARIO NEEDS UNION

To the Editor,

Sir:—Just a word from the firing line of Northern Ontario. Viewing the vantage point of a Northern Ontario Home Mission Field, I am forced to the conclusion that much of the opposition to Union would disappear if those opposed could sufficiently appreciate the Home Mission situation in our own beloved land, and to come still closer in our own beloved province. History shows that the Christian people of Canada are always responsive to a cry of need when they fully realize it; for instance we remember the generous response to the fire sufferers appeal of two years ago, when car-loads of necessities moved Northward to Haileybury and the stricken district. In fact no people of the earth are quicker to respond to a cry of need than the Christian people of our own fair land. We are wondering if, in the heat of controversy the real issue has been lost sight of, namely, the great need of the increasing Home Mission fields of Northern Ontario and of all Canada.

One who has never travelled through Northern Ontario can scarcely appreciate its possibilities and its problems. We have a veritable empire lying between the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the C. P. R. and Hudson Bay, an empire whose wealth and possibilities can scarcely be estimated. It comprizes six sevenths ofthe whole province, with a population of less than 300,00; but we can hear the tramp of coming millions. The settler is looking this way. This great rich territory must be claimed, and we predict a great filling up of the Northern spaces within the next twenty five years. This constitutes a great responsibility for the Church. Denominationalism cannot meet the challenge. Denominationalism failed in Northern Ontario long ago. Church Union has been tried and has proven a great success, and the only hope of Northern Ontario for the future is more Church Union. We may take a trip Northward from Sault Ste Marie over the A. C. R. and pass through a territory of two hundred miles where the voice of the preacher is not heard; within that territory there are many scattered settlements and hundreds of lumber and mining camps; this is known as the Michipicoten field, but the Home Mission Board have been unable to supply it because of lack of men and especially money. There are many fields in Northern Ontario like this one, and we are hoping that in the future the United Church will be able to meet the challenge of Northern Ontario. Church Union has already done wonders in this country; it has made it possible for a struggling field to have the services of an experienced ordained minister, where otherwise it would have been impossible. If anyone doubts the success of Union, they might be convinced by visiting the Richards Landing field, where Methodists and Presbyterians are both much happier than they were under Denominationalism. It is the hope and prayer of the men at the front that the Christian people back home may catch the larger vision of the golden opportunity that awaits a United Church in our great Northern Mission fields, and forget the little things in the presence of the great challenge.

H. J. L. WOOLEY.

The Manse, Richards Landing.

CANARY BANISHED AS MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 18.—Canaries are barred as "musical instruments" at Johnson Hall, the new dormitory for women graduate students at Columbia University. Mice as pets are beyond the pale too.

Miss Frances Hawkins of Denver, Col., brought her pet mouse when she took up quarters in the dormitory. Nine graduate students hit the ceiling when they saw the mouse, so he had to go.

Miss Hawkins then adopted a canary, but the student governors of the dormitory have ruled the bird out under the section prohibiting musical instruments. The decision was that the canary might keep the students awake after 10.30 o'clock, the retiring hour.

Once the finest instrument of its kind in the world, the great pipe organ of Notre Dame, in Paris, is now reported to be perishing from dry rot.

Mystery Woman Was Identified

She Refuses to Tell Police Her Story, However

Montreal, Feb. 18.—The "woman of mystery" who was found driving a palatial Cadillac limousine which was later discovered to have been stolen and which contained in its tonneau, a club bag, with a complete set of up-to-date burglars' tools and a revolver, has been unmasked and her real identity revealed. She gave her name as Alice Roy, when arrested, but was identified yesterday as Alice Savanti, Spanish-Irish girl, who left her parents in Monte Bello a few months ago to make her way in the city. A tearful sister yesterday morning pleaded with her to tell the police all she knew of the affair in which she is implicated but the prisoner was proof against her tears and politely told the pleader to mind her business.

According to police information gathered through other channels, the girl was first employed as a maid with a highly respectable family but left the home suddenly three weeks ago and never returned. She refuses to say anything about a man who was in the car with her and who escaped and maintains that she had never met him before Saturday night when he asked her to go for a drive.

The police doubt this story because of the fact that the girl drove the car after the man jumped from the macine and because she apparently knew the contents of the club bag as she made an attempt to get the revolver when being taken to the station. She is held on charges of stealing an automobile, having burglars' tools in her possession and carrying a revolver.

One hundred British farm families are due to reach British Columbia early next spring. These are the fore-runners of 3,000 families that are to come out to settle in Canada on the land. Provincial and British Government assistance is being given them to get started.

A remarkable statue modelled entirely in ice is to be seen at Quebec. It represents one of the latest or 2300-type locomotives of the Canadian Pacific Railway, about one-fourth full size and is perfect in every detail. Ice statuary has been brought to a fine art in the Ancient Capital.

Skaters from New York, Boston, Montreal, Toronto and Ottawa will compete with Quebec champions in a great international amateur figure skating contest, to be held in Quebec city February 23-24, for handsome trophies and medals donated by the Frontenac Winter Sports Clubs. A record attendance of spectators is expected.

Skiing parties over the week-end are being conducted by the Laurentian Winter Club in different points in the Laurentian Mountains, the tours being superintended by a competent skier. To those remaining in Montreal the big six-chute toboggan slide on Mount Royal has an added attraction in toboggan races every Saturday, winners receiving prizes.

That Canada is on the verge of a trade boom which may last until the end of this year was the statement made in Toronto recently by Richard Conway, Vice-President of the Brookmire Forecasting Service of New York. The main factor responsible for the upswing of Canadian business, he said, is the opening of the foreign markets to the grains of the past year.

Federal control of United States railroads, adopted as a war measure during the period December 31, 1917, February 29, 1920, cost the country $1,674,500,000, of which $1,123,500,000 was total loss, $536,000,000 estimated expenses and $15,000,000 was required to reimburse small deficit roads, according to James C. Davis, Director General of Railroads, who has just submitted his annual report.

Remarkable absence of timidity is being shown by wild animals in the neighborhood of Banff, Alberta, it is reported, as a result of kindly treatment. Heavy snows recently brought elk and deer into the main part of the town, where a parade by these animals is not an uncommon sight. They make the rounds of the houses, looking for tit-bits, which are not denied them. One big elk, with a magnificent set of antlers, is as regular on his schedule of calls as the milkman.

The most recent addition to the Canadian Pacific Railway's British Columbia fleet of 28 passenger ships, freighters, barges, ferries and tugs is the British Admiralty Rescue type tug, "St. Florence," which will leave Glasgow at an early date to make the 8,500 mile journey to Victoria under her own steam via the Panama Canal. She will be one of the largest towing tugs in Pacific coast waters and is capable of towing the biggest liners making use of ports in that ocean.

PETERBORO WOMEN RALLY TO PARTY

Peterboro, Feb. 19—One of the energetic organizations of Peterboro is the Women's Conservative Association over which Mrs. Howard Fallis presides. The annual meeting was held on Monday. The atmosphere was charged with dominating notes of loyalty to and endorsation of Right Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, and their policies, while preparedness for activity in next Federal election was voiced by the President as an objective not to lost sight of.

Another marked feature of the gathering was the practical appreciation of Mrs. Howard Fallis' outstanding worthiness as head of this organization by her re-election for a third term as president.

Similar and commendable recognition of Mrs. Roland Denne as an exceedingly capable secretary, was also forthcoming in her re-election for a third year.

Extending a warm welcome to both old and new members, Mrs. Fallis reiterated the two-fold objective of this women's association—

First, to meet as Conservatives, believing in the principles of their party, to keep in touch with the political issues of the day, and always keeping their powder dry for the next election.

Second, we believe women now having their franchise equal with men, they should acquire an intelligent enthusiasm for the Conservative cause founded on knowledge, because knowledge is power. A Conservative woman cannot expect to convert another woman to Conservatism unless she has faith in her own party and can give concrete reasons why others should vote for that party. She herself must be well up on the issues of the day.

And so, the main objective of the Women's Liberal-Conservative Association is to promote an intelligent enthusiasm for the Conservative party and its leaders and to gain a keener insight into the political problems that face the country for solution.

These problems to-day, Mrs. Fallis continued, are—Development of Canada's natural resources. Unemployment, immigration and emigration; taxation, of which we all perhaps know too much.

TOURISTS OF STATES LEFT HUGE FORTUNE

Hambourg, Jan. 0.—More than 200,000 United States citizens visited Europe during the year 1924, it is estimated by the Hotel Proprietors' Federation, and each traveler spent, on an average, the sum of $2,000. This means a golden trail of some $400,000,000 was left behind by these visitors from across the Atlantic, and mostly in England, Switzerland and Italy.

Swiss tourists business around the Lake of the Four Cantons has almost reached pre-war dimensions, according to a circular issued by the Lucerne Cantonal Bank. There was an increase of 22 percent in 1924 over the number of guests registered in 1923. The bulk of the business was furnished by tourists from England.

Port Arthur	17,021	20,031,168	46.49

The tax rate in all these cities varies but very little, and, of course, has no bearing anyway on the actual cost of running the city. It is the amount of money raised each year that tells the story, and the story, as indicated by the above, is not an unpleasant one for Belleville citizens.

Toronto, which has been popularly supposed to be a cheaper place in which to live than some of the smaller cities, comes twenty-first on the list with a per capita cost of $45.12. The density of population in that case has apparently heightened the cost instead of decreasing it. Toronto has very nearly as much population as the other 23 cities put together. The population of Toronto is given as 542,187.

George Shepard Is Son Of Belleville

Life Story in Brief is Published in Toronto Telegram

A Belleville old boy is the subject of the Toronto Telegram's daily feature "A Peep Behind the Curtains of Time" where each day the life history of a well-known Toronto man is given briefly.

On Wednesday George Shepard was the man. The article says:

"George Shepard, president of the George Shepard Printing Company, was born in Belleville, Ont. In 1883 he went with the Turner Ferry Co. as ticket agent, when their ferries made daily trips to Centre Island and Hanlan's Point, later becoming manager. In 1886 he left to serve his apprenticeship with the Mail Job Printing of the job printing department, he left in 1894 to enter into partnership with his brothers in the printing business under the name of Shepard Bros Tiring of being a landlubber, George went on the Great Lakes and obtained his Captain's papers, In 1907 he went prospecting and mining in the North Country, traversing the territory near Elk Lake, Latchford, Hillerbury and Gowganda. In 1910 he formed the George Shepard Printing Co. He is a member of the Toronto. Typothetae, the Board of Trade and the C.M.A. Prominent in fraternal circles, he is a Thirty-Second Degree Mason, a life member of Rameses Temple a member of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine and the A. O. F."

BOOK TELLS STORY OF CEMENT INDUSTRY

The Intelligencer is indebted to the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne for the neatly printed and bound eighty page book which has been received, the title of which is "The Cement Industry in Canada." The book which was written by A. C. Tagge gives the history of the industry, processes of manufacture, locations of plants, and other interesting information with mention in several places of the Point Anne plant. The publication resulted from a desire to preserve a record of the principal facts connected with the early history of what has grown to be one of the greatest industries in Canada. Information from which the book was written was procured from government records; private books and documents and correspondence or interview with prominent officials of old cement companies. It is an interesting little book.

Ciaco Club Selects Officers For Year

Elect Major McManus President of Social and Athletic Club

Major D. T. McManus was elected President of the "Ciaco" Social and Athletic Club in a hotly contested election yesterday. The Vice-President is Mr. P. Chesher and Mr. J. V. Boyle is Secretary.

The election occupied the attention of the staff of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company pretty nearly all day and a lot of good-natured but energetic lobbying was due by the various departments to elect their men.

The "Ciaco" Club is rapidly making its presence felt in the athletic life of Belleville. It has a strong team in the City Hockey League and a whole league of forvent bowlers. Already plans are laid for a first class team to represent the big Corbyville plant in base ball during the coming summer.

Concerning bowling, an amusing challenge has been issued by the Pessimists Bowling Club, through Bert Blane, Chief Pessimist. The Pessimists are made of bowlers not considered good enough to catch a place on the regular "Ciaco" Junior team, but they practiced faithfully and strenuously in secret and in a challenge match outscored the regulars, who have not yet recovered from the shock.

Flushed with victory the Pessimists have challenged the Ladies' team to a match on Saturday afternoon next, the losers to pay for a chicken supper. The ladies are hesitating, but it is probable that the match will be played on the Recreation alleys. If they win the Pessimists will likely change their name—if they lose—well, they are pessimists anyway.

CHICAGO MARKETS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Feb. 19—Owing largely to predictions from a leading exporter, that wheat trade of United States will be on a domestic basis during April, May and June, wheat market scored a material advance today in early dealings. Months named are as a rule those in which the demand from abroad becomes urgent. Sharply higher quotations at Liverpool today tended also to lift values here. Opening which ranged from 1-8c to 1 1-4c high May $1.86 to $1.87 and July $1.57 1-2 to $1.58 was followed by something on reaction but then by fresh gains with May up 7 1-2c above Tuesday's low point. Corn and Oats were firmer, sympathizing with Wheat. After opening at 1-8c to 1 3-4c advance, May $1.30 5-8 to $1.30 3-4 Corn sagged somewhat and then rose higher than before. Oats started at 1-8c to 3-4c up May 55c. Later there was a slight further upturn. Provisions were responsive to higher quotations on hogs and grain.

ONTARIO GROUP HAS OBTAINED REDUCED RATES

Farmers Are Helped by Action of Conservative Government

LEGISLATURE NEWS

Conservative "Dry" Speaks To-day; Church Union Bill Coming

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 19.—The committee of the select agricultural committee of the Legislature, headed by Dr. Jamieson, which visited Montreal to request lower freight rates on fertilizer lime from the Canadian National Railways secured a satisfactory concession. Dr. Jamieson said this morning. The Railway agreed to carry lime fertilizer to any part of Ontario at $4.00 a ton. There are some places in Ontario which can get this rate now, but in many others the rates are much higher so that the general reduction is considerable.

Outlines Legislation

A deputation from Wentworth County waited upon Premier Ferguson, Minister of education, this morning, requesting assistance to counties in regard to pupils who are sent to the city high schools. The Prime Minister outlined the proposed legislation which has been designed to afford relief to Counties, without adding unduly to the burden of cities.

Debate Continues

In the Legislature this afternoon(R. H. Kempt, Progressive of Lincoln, will continue the debate on the reply to the speech from the throne. He will be followed by C. R. McKeown, Conservative, Dufferin. Mr. McKeown is one of the most ardent Conservative drys, but his attitude on the stronger beer amendment has been revealed by his remarks to this constituents over the week end that he thought the Government's amendment to the O. T. A. was in the best intgrests of Temperance.

Questions Asked

Geo. Sewell, progressive, Norfolk, has a question on the order paper in the Legislature asking what the revenue from taxes on race courses has been since tax was imposed. D. J. Taylor, Progressive, asks if Hon. Dr. Carr, minister without portfolio, is still a member of the Government, and if he used the following words in an address said to have been held by Conservative members.

"I have not resigned, but if it comes to an issue whether I will remain a member of the Government or whether I will stay with this group and support what you are trying to bring about, I will be with you."

It is stated that the meeting referred to was called to consider the securing of freedom from the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act.

To Introduce Union Bill

A. M. Rankin, Conservative, Frontenac, will introduce the Church Union Bill in the Legislature. Last year it was introduced by C. R. McKeown, Conservative, Dufferin, who is Mr. Rankin's seat mate in the house. The bill is not yet completed in its details.

Goes To Jail For Month As Lesson

Belleville Man Pleads Guilty to Fraud

Belleville police court produced a modern "Wallingford" this morning whose methods proved a washout. His name is Percy Edwards Deline, but when he went to board with Charles Reid on unlucky Friday February 13, he told Reid that his name was "Percy Edwards". He lived beyond Bancroft he said, but was employed at the Tiger Tire and Rubber Company. On Saturday night he explained to his landlord that his "chief" did not have sufficient change to pay him, but that the bill would be paid. He then touched Reid's heart to the extent of $3, but did not turn up to board longer.

Reid got busy and today Deline was charged with unlawfully and fraudulently obtaining food and lodging. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve thirty days in the county jail with hard labor, and will be required to pay Reid when he gets out.

Accused carried a number of blank cheques and promissory notes of the Tiger Tire and Rubber Company in one of which the word "Belleville" appeared. On another, figures had been made. Accused denied having handled the pencil, saying that he could not write, and told of taking them because he saw other men taking them as they were no use. He suggested using them for fuel.

"Probably he took them to light his pipe," suggested the bench. Accused was married in England when overseas and left his wife there when he came back. He expects her to visit him this summer.

"There is too much of this sort of thing, and it must be stopped," asserted the Magistrate. "When a good honest man, who is in hard luck, asks assistance, people like you make it very difficult for him to convince others who have been fooled, that he is honest."

SHE HURLS DEFI

San Pedro, Calif., Feb. 19.—Mrs. S. Nuncey, little woman of 102 years, was hailed into the police court here yesterday charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

"I have been drinking liquor all my life and I don't intend to stop now," she told the court.

Government Firm For Stronger Beer

Premier Ferguson Tells Dry Deputation Exactly Where He Stands

Toronto, Feb. 19.—The view that the campaign of temperance could not longer be advanced by more turns of the "thumbscrew" of the law, but that it would have to be furthered instead by education and not restriction of the individual, was expressed yesterday afternoon by Premier Ferguson to a deputation of prohibitionists who waited on him at the Parliament Buildings. Accompanying this analysis of the problem was the Premier's definite statement that the legislation contemplating stronger beer would not be withheld by the Government, nor would it be modified in the matter of the alcoholic standard which it would prescribe as the prohibition forces were urging.

The persons who waited upon the Premier came in advance of a memorial which was being forwarded from the temperance convention, and they represented prominent figures in the prohibition movement. Headed by Dr. T. Albert Moore, they included also J. A. Austin, of Toronto, and Charles Austin, of Chatham, Dr. G. H. Gisborne of Ottawa, Mrs. R. G. Smythe and Mrs. Wm. Pugsley of Toronto. Their visit took largely the form of a round-table discussion and was remarkable for the moderation of tone which was used towards the Government's 4.4 per cent. proposal.

To the members of the deputation the Premier said that the Government had carefully gone into the whole matter of alcoholic content and other proposed amendments before coming to a conclusion, and had decided that 4.4 per cent. beer presented a way in which the greatest good could be done towards curbing illicit sale and towards improving the temperance sentiment of the province. He definitely stated that the Government did not intend to withdraw the measure or to alter it in that respect.

"We discussed the attitude of the Massey Hall convention," said the Premier, "and I pointed out that my view was that the Hearst campaign in connection with the O.T.A. demonstrated pretty clearly that most people put their politics ahead of their sentiments in matters of this kind. While they carried the Act by 430,000, they snowed under Sir William Hearst by about as many. I thought a lot of people were disgusted; the temperance organizations had said they were playing politics, and many lost interest, and others said 'now we have passed the Act our duty is done.' There has been no effort since toward carrying on propaganda, with the result that interest has faded away and indifference grown up and we have gone on and, instead of carrying on educational work in favor of temperance, we have been carrying it on with restrictions, penalizing the people, and giving the thumbscrew a few extra turns, rather than by relaxation.

"I told them," Hon. Mr. Ferguson continued, "that we did not expect the organization to endorse the Government; we were not asking anything of the kind; but what we did ask was that they have some confidence in the good faith and honesty of purpose of the Government. I told them that we realized that if we had blazed out a wrong trail we would go over the precipice."

Use Politics

A decision to attempt to attain the aims of prohibition by direct political action was reached yesterday at the closing session of the annual convention of the Ontario Prohibition Union, and in addition to this it was resolved that an attempt would be made to gain complete prohibition for the whole of the Dominion by approaching all candidates in Ontario for the Dominion Parliament, and to use their influence on members of the Legislature with the aim of defeating the amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act when it appears before the local House. An attempt was made on the part of the committee which reported on political action to dissociate the Prohibition Union from all further plebiscites "until such time as the will of the majority is respected by Governments," but through the attitude of R. J. Fleming, president, the clause was struck out. In discussing this point, Mr. Fleming made it plain that in his opinion, it would be a mistake to abandon the plebiscite, for he could foresee the time when the prohibitionists might want another vote on some question or other, and their hands would be tied if they adopted such a motion. It was, accordingly defeated by a standing vote.

The chief feature of the day's proceedings centred around political action, which was taken in two ways. One form was a long resolution, which was adopted by the convention, and the second was a decision to send a delegation to interview the Prime Minister and the Attorney-General and register general protest against the present amendment to the Act.

Detroit Policeman Is Killed When Thugs Invaded Store He Was Guarding

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Detroit, Feb. 19.—Assigned to protect a drug store in Hamilton Avenue here last night, because of the number of successful holdups perpetrated in that district, Patrolman McDonough was killed when he opened fire on three holdup men who invaded the store.

In an exchange of shots, McDonough received a bullet through his breast and died in a few minutes, after reaching the Ford Hospital.

Its The Example That Does Harm

So Magistrate Tells Man Accused of Speeding To-day

The high "costs" of speeding was demonstrated in police court this morning when a Dundas street man, charged with reckless driving, was convicted on the lesser charge of speeding over a street intersection, and was fined the minimum of $5 and costs of $5.50.

"One fast driver is like a britchy sheep in a flock," explained the bench "The others follow him. You may be favoured by a good eye and good judgment, but the driver in the car behind, following your example may not be so favoured, and he may meet with an accident. The penalty for reckless driving is from $10 to $200 or up to sixty days, and if I ever find a driver guilty of speeding recklessly across intersections, he may expect a heavy fine and "time" too probably.

P. C. William Evans stood at the corner of Bridge and Front streets last Sunday afternoon when he sighted a car coming north on Front Street. The speed of the machine attracted his attention so he took down the rear license number. On the stand this morning Officer Evans suggested that the car would be travelling from 25 to 35 miles per hour and said it was swaying in and out of ruts. He told of the car increasing speed instead of slackening, and crossing the intersection at a fast rate of speed. There were several pedestrians and two cars travelling on Front street at the time, but no cars were crossing his path to go east or west on Bridge street.

Provincial constable Robert F. Davis, who was conversing with officer Evans at the time, corroborated his evidence on the stand estimating the speed to be 25 miles per hour anyway.

City engineer, C. D. Campbell was also a witness and testified that the car was travelling from 25 to 30 miles per hour on Front street.

Accused denied that he had driven his car at the speed at which the three witnesses stated, and said that at the intersections, he slowed down to ten miles per hour. His wife who was a a passenger, also stated that the speed never exceeded twenty miles per hour and might be as low as eight miles per at the intersections.

The weight of evidence was against accused however, but the court consented to reduce the more serious charge of reckless driving to the speeding charge.

C. A. Payne defended accused, and P. S. Arthur Harman conducted the case for the Crown, no provision being made for the Crown Attorney in such cases.

Clock Was On Strike For 158 Years; Starts Again At Request Of Staff Man

London, Feb. 9.—An old clock that stopped working in 1727—158 years ago—recently was restarted after a year's effort by a member of the Admiralty staff. The clock is about 200 years old and contains more than 600 parts which weigh about 100 pounds. It is made of brass of such fine quality that an ingot of it could be beaten almost like gold leaf.

The clock was made by a carpenter named John Harrison for His Majesty George II by order of the Board of Longitude which appears to have been an admiralty commission appointed to superintend the installation of chronometers and navigation apparatus on the ships of the British navy. The board gave Harrison $1,250 for the job and he took two years to make it. It is really a clock within a clock, the smaller one running for four minutes only, being wound every three and three-quarter minutes by the larger clock, which has to be wound daily.

"Let there be harmony in things essential—liberty in things not essential—Charity in all"

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

The Stranger

AFTER all, no better term has been formed for man than that he is a "a pilgrim and a stranger" on this planet.

It is easy for us to get egocentric ideas and think the world was made for mankind, and especially for ourselves.

It is well once in a while to take another view of things, to inject ourselves possibly into the viewpoint of other creatures.

So doing, man discovers that he is not regarded with a friendly eye by any other creature that God has made, except, perhaps, the dog.

You have noticed in the woods how all wild things run away from you.

There is probably more life under the surface of the ocean than above it, and yet all that life is alien to man.

Perhaps this fear that other creatures have for us is well founded. We use them for our meat and for our slaves. We take their life, and restrain their liberty, without any maudlin sentiment. Man is the tyrant of the universe.

It is rare to find one who has broken down this barrier and has become friendly with the other creatures, a man of whom the birds are not afraid, and with whom the animals form a companionship.

Daniel Henderson, in a recent book of poems, says:

> "Races whose titles run from God
> Dispute my warrant to the sod!
> I am Intrusion! I am Danger!
> Familiar, but for aye—the Stranger!"

Most animals are shy creatures. Perhaps they have reason for being so. And it takes a good deal of effort to overcome the fear that is inbred in their blood and make them friendly to us.

Have you ever watched a bird eating? John Burroughs tells us of how all birds look up and around between bites. They are looking for possible enemies. Their ancestors have for years and centuries been used to foes, and it takes them a long while to get used to kindliness.

Kindness to all creatures should be taught children. They will gain many human values by being kind to birds and animals, for civilization is founded upon an increase of pity.

THE WRONG METHOD

"Let's Make Canada Prosperous", shouts the Montreal Herald, the staunch supporter of Premier King. And it devotes two pages of its issue on Tuesday in an endeavor to persuade Canadians that they should support Canadian industry.

"Canada has approximately 100,000 worth of goods in Foreign Markets."

"anada has approximately 100,000 unemployed."

"126,129 Canadians emigrated to the United States in 1924."

"Canadian Industries crying hard times."

These are quotations published under the front page cartoon published in that paper under the heading, "Can the Canadian consumer be indifferent?"

The main article starts off in this way:

"In the twelve months ending November 1924, Canadians purchased foreign goods to the value of "$812,905,157

"We are so used to talking in millions that there is nothing startling in the above figure, even when it is put into black type, and given a whole line to itself.

"But it is a startling figure nevertheless. It means that Canadians are paying out their good money to support industries in other countries to the tune of nearly $3,000,000 for every working day in the year, or at the rate of over $300,000 for every working hour.

"Can you imagine what it would mean to Canada if this money were spent on "Made in Canada" goods instead of on foreign importations!

"It would mean that there would be no more unemployment in Canada; that every industry in this country would be working full time; that capital would be pouring in for developments; that immigrants would be flocking here and find plenty of work to occupy them; that our railway problem would be solved; and that our crushing burden of taxation would soon be lifted.

"Perhaps you think we paint too rosy a picture. You will say it is not possible to buy everything we need in Canada without importing anything.

"Well, let us suppose that half the foreign-made goods we buy were dropped and replaced by "Made in Canada" goods, and an analysis of our trade returns show that this could be done.

"What would that mean? It would be more than equal to giving to Canada immediately another industry with the same employing powers as the whole organizations of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railway system combined."

It is indeed a very rosy picture the Herald paints for us. But the Herald would handle the problem in the wrong way.

There is only one real reason why Canadians buy goods manufactured in the United States and other countries. Premier King and his short-sighted advisors not only refuse to raise the tariff wall, but whittle down the present inadequate duties.

How can Canadians be expected to buy Canadian goods when a government sees to it that products of the United States and elsewhere may be shipped in so easily to compete with the goods of our own manufacturers?

There will be no need to beat the air with such admonitions as the Herald offers, when a sane government gets an opportunity to KEEP OUT foreign goods.

WHAT CANADA NEEDS

The following is Mr. Meighen's national policy which he will move in the House of Commons as a resolution:

"That, to meet the situation which has resulted from a strengthening in late years of the protective system the world over, particularly in the United States, to give new life to industry and productive enterprise; to preserve and enlarge the Canadian market for Canadian farm products, to stimulate the development of the Canadian resources by the Canadian people, and thus create employment for our workers; to increase the traffic of our railways, by which alone an all-round reduction of freight rates can be secured; and, as well, to provide added revenue, and thus bring about a reduction of internal taxation, this Dominion requires an immediate revision of the Canadian tariff on a definitely and consistently protective basis.

"That such revision should apply to natural products, such as farm produce, fish and coal, with no less thoroughness than to manufactured goods.

"That to the same ends steps should be taken to conserve for Canadian development our essential and irreplaceable resources in material and power.

"That while every effort should be directed toward the establishment of a system of preference for preference within empire, no preference should be given at the expense of the Canadian workers, and all preferences should be conditional on the use of Canadian ports.

"That a tariff commission should be appointed representative of the three great classes of Canadian industry, agriculture, manufacturing and labor, and entrusted with the duty of studying Canadian tariff problems in their every bearing and of making from time to time such recommendations to the Government as it deems in the general public interest, with the reasons therefor, and with power also, where it finds unfair advantage is being taken of protective duties, of making recommendations to be given effect by the Government for removing or reducing tariff schedules or imposing special excise taxes upon products in respect of which such advantage is taken, and that its reports, findings, recommendations and reasons therefore be given to the public.

"That to enable the products of Western and Maritime Provinces to reach more readily the markets so developed, the special transportation burdens borne by those provinces should be shared by the whole Dominion, either by contribution to long haul freight costs, or by assistance in some other form."

PORTUGAL WOMEN JOYOUS IN FREEDOM

Lisbon, Feb. 19.—The women of Portugal slowly are emerging from the almost Moorish seclusion in which they have lived for so long, and the first thing they do, under the new freedom, is to go to work. The shops and offices of Lisbon are besieged these days by girls eager to follow in the footsteps of their sisters in other countries, and earn their own livings.

Much had to be overcome by these Lisbon girls. There was the resistance and ill-will of the masculine elements, grounded in the precedent of many centuries, and a large group of minor state officials, in fear of their own jobs, voiced violent opposition.

In the schools also Portuguese girls have won their victories. They have exploded old traditions, and to-day are along with their brothers.

Crosswords And Schools

How long will the cross-word puzzle craze last?

It's a hard question for you or I to answer, but we might be fairly safe in guessing that when the evenings become brighter and nature begins to beckon one outdoors, we'll lose interest in the black and white squares and be content to drop this form of amusement until next fall at least. Then perhaps by that time, someone will devise something new to divert our attention in our leisure hours.

There are still a number of scoffers at the cross word puzzle fiends, but I notice that several new fans have been attracted by the Intelligencer's Cross Word "Funnies", selected by Judge. There has been some criticism concerning the number of references to the Volstead Act, but on the whole the amusement provided is wholesome. (The pun was unintentional.)

There is not much doubt but that cross word puzzles have done a considerable amount of good this winter. If they did nothing more than send people to the dictionary, their appearance has been worth while. But they have done something more important in setting the little grey matter working in the top of man's head.

It has been brought to my attention that crossword puzzles as an educational medium are proving very popular in the Woodstock Collegiate Institute. In such subjects as Latin and French it is reported that the use of them tends to add greatly to the students' vocabularies and they are said to be no less helpful in subjects like history and science.

Puzzles are composed by the pupils and they are dealt with by the teachers during the spare periods by drawing the design on the blackboard with the definitions and having the class solve the puzzle.

The pupils are said to be very apt in evolving new puzzles and the thought required in the making and solving of them is undoubtedly of value educationally.

The teaching profession in Canada has advanced by leaps and bounds of recent years. Higher standards of education to which the present day teacher must attain before obtaining his certificate and a greater amount of thought brought to bear on the best methods of teaching have been responsible for this. But the personal relationships between the teacher and the pupil are the same to-day as they were forty and fifty years ago. There are those teachers who seem to have a strange power of keeping the attention of the scholars and others who are continually banging down the ruler and clapping their hands to maintain order.

In the California News, Dr. Arnold is quoted this way:

"If I find a room in tumult, I blame myself, not the scholar," said Dr. Arnold. "It is I who have faield, not they. Were I what I should be, every one of my pupils would reflect my work. I hold the key to the situation. I set the pace, and if my soul is in disorder, the school will be in confusion."

Some teachers devote so much time to the task of securing the attention of their pupils that they have no time left for teaching. If the teaching is what it ought to be the attention will develop automatically, so to speak.

I haven't heard much of late on that pressing question before the education authorities in the city, the enlargement of the Belleville High School. Perhaps we shall hear more about it following the meeting of the School Board to-morrow night.

That more accommodation for the boys and girls of the city and district is needed, is unquestionable. The fact that the Government grant was held back because of the present crowded conditions is proof of that. A Collegiate Institute or a bigger High School must come.

Let's hope that when definite plans are laid down, we do not get into the hopeless situation in which Stratford, St. Thomas and Welland have arrived, due solely to differences of opinion on the cost and nature of enlargement.

To-day's Smile

The landlady of a well-known London boarding house made a point of asking her departing guests to write something in her visitor's book. She was very proud of some of the names of people inscribed in it, and of the nice things that were said, "But there is one thing I can't understand," she confided to a friend, "and that is what an American put in the book after stopping here. People always smile when they read it."

"What was it?" queried the other.

"He wrote only the words, 'Quoth the raven.'"

Thirty Years Ago

Several upsets are reported owing to the uneven state of the streets and roads leading to the city.

Mr. Thos. Walters, merchant tailor, who has been visiting his son in Florida for a few weeks, returned to the city on Saturday. He says the cold weather did great destruction in that state. The peach trees and strawberry vines were just in bloom and they were badly frozen, as was also the root crop. The frost was the heaviest experienced there in fifty years. Mr. Walter's son is doing well on an orange plantation.

The roads are so bad that a cutter in which were a gentleman and his wife upset yesterday in a pitch-hole said to be five feet deep or more, near the University church. Fortunately no damage was sustained. A stage and several other vehicles upset in the same pitch-hole.

Rev. Mr. Lord, of Grafton, occupied the pulpit at John St. church Sunday morning and evening.

A COUNTRY CEMETERY

(By Alexander Louis Fraser)

Though once they owned all these paternal hills
That bask their spacious uplands in the sun,
How small a space it is that each one fills,
Now that his day is done.
'Twixt birth and death, 'tis true, some wandered far
From the old home to see earth's wide domain,
But in this acre many gathered are,
About her knees again.
While some with Luxury abode, and some
Where pining Want and restless Care were found,
All on one level meet when here they come
To mingle with the ground.
We find where each one lived another name,
And other feet pass through the well known door:
But the old world is busy just the same,
Though it knows them no more.

The theft of bonded liquor from the Hartigan block, North Sydney, N.S., reported recently, resulted in the arrest of three men and the recovery of eight cases, which is now believed to be the total amount of liquor stolen. The men arrested were Albert Slade, on whose premises the liquor was found, Fred Blackmore and Vicent Henneberry.

A Dislike For Food

Every healthy man and woman should have a natural desire for food at meal times. This means that the digestion is in working order and that the blood is in good condition. But if you feel a dislike for food—if the sight and smell of wholesome food repels you—then you may be sure that Nature is telling you that all is not well. If after a night's rest you have no appetite for breakfast, your digestion requires attention. If your food is distasteful, or if you feel that it is a trouble to eat, your stomach is rebelling. You do not digest properly the food you are taking and are therefore not hungry.

All these symptoms of a disordered digestion mean that the blood is not absorbing proper nourishment from the food, for the work of the blood is to collect proper nourishment from food and impart it to the system. The stomach tries to refuse food the nutriment from which the blood cannot absorb, and this causes the lack of appetite. If you force yourself to eat, the undigested food becomes a clog to the system. Nature is warning you. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills alone give the blood the richness and purity that it requires to perform its natural function. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills relieve the most obstinate cases of indigestion—why they will help any trouble due to poor blood.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BLOW OF CROW BAR GAVE HIM HEADACHE

Montreal, Feb. 19.—The celestial quiet of Montreal's chinatown was harshly interrupted at 3.30 Wednesday when two highwaymen attacked a member of the community on Lagauchetiere as he was carrying home the proceeds of the day's business amounting to $553 in silver. For a time the police thought a tong war had broken out but after investigations had been made and some order restored the true cause of the excitement became known.

John Fleming alias Slater, colored, and Leung Gim, chinaman, who is alleged to have covered his features with stove polish in order to look like his companion have been arrested and are charged with highway robbery. Chuh Lee the victim is suffering from a head ache as a result of a blow from a crowbar but was in Court Wednesday morning to lay a charge.

According to information given the police by a chauffeur, a negro hired his cab about 3 o'clock in the morning and told him to drive to 118 St. Felix street when another man, with dark features, whom the driver took to be a negro, got into the machine. The chauffeur then drove the couple to the corner of Clarke and Lagauchetiere streets where they waited.

Government Restrictions Keep Many From Listening In

(Associated Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 19.—The United States leads the world in radio development but Europe, though still hampered by governmental restrictions, is beginning to "tune in," according to E. A. Brofos, European manager of the International Western Electric Company, who recently returned to this country.

"England is the only country which compares with the United States," Mr. Brofos said. "Germany, with 12 stations, is progressing" rapidly. Czecho-Slovakia sees the radio as a means of establishing Prague as one of the outstandin gmusical and cultural centers of the world. The plan is to broadcast the national opera. Other countries are also considering musical programs to knit the national spirit and to advance culture."

Installation of receiving sets is still illegal throughout continental Europe generally, but outlaw listening is being practiced on a wide scale, Mr. Brofos continued. The freedom with which the governmental regulations are being ignored, he said, indicated a trend of policy which forecasts acceptance of broadcasting on a systematic plan.

"Licensing of owners of receiving sets and diversion of part of the proceeds to the broadcasting companies, is an almost univeral characteristic of the expanson. Germany has under consideration a plan for renting receiving sets at a low price. Spain makes it profitable for the broadcasting companies by allowing publicity.

"Expected interference between broadcasting stations in the several countries is said to have been one of the reasons for governmental restrictions of radio. Italy has effected a combination of groups which has received the concession for the entire country. It is understood that Spain will follow this procedure.

"England's system centers about the British Broadcasting Company which operates 17 stations. A license fee paid to the government by 800,000 people is partly diverted to the company. Holland has seven concerns, but no regular programs are as yet sent out. France has five stations, three of which are operated by the government with a license fee for receivers.

"Norway installed one of the first broadcasting stations on the continent and is considered among the leaders. Sweden, with one station erected and two in prospect, has plans for a comprehensive system of inter-linked stations. Switzerland and Ireland each have one station, but no organized broadcasting. The first station in Turkey began operation February 1. Hungary, Austria, Denmark and Baltic states have just begun to awaken to the possibilities of broadcasting."

Oil has been discovered welling through the earth in three places within the immediate vicinity of Clarkes Harbor, Cape Sable Island, off the southwestern tip of Nova Scotia, according to a despatch from Clarkes Harbor, appearing in the Halifax Chronicle. In one case, it is stated, oil is to be seen bubbling up in the main street of the town.

The Game Laws For Ontario

An individual license must be obtained for almost everything under the terms of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Act and it is well to bear this in mind. For instance it provides for a fur dressers' and tanners' license and for a permit if you wish to forward skins to be dressed or sent out of the province.

It is also necessary to remember that no hunting is allowed on Sunday and that shooting at night that is between sunset and sunrise in respect to any game is prohibited. also shooting for hire, gain or reward or in the hope of gain or reward.

The Act prescribes the manner in which you may hunt for wild duck, goose or other water fowl. In the first place you may not do it from a sail boat, yacht or launch propelled by steam or other power; nor where such animals are more than two hundred yards from shore or natural rush bed. Nor may you use a swivel gun or one having a larger bore than "8"; and no contrivance known as sunken punts or batteries may be used. Nor may you place decoys at a greater distance than two hundred yards from shore, and they must be removed during hours when shooting is prohibited. The decoys must not exceed fifty in number; nor may there be more than one flock of same;

Two hundred wild ducks per year, twenty-five per day is your limit.

You may not purchase or sell wild ducks, geese, snipe, quail or partridge

You may not use poison to kill any game except wolves and then only if you have a permit. Nor may you take deer or any game bird by means of traps or similar contrivances.

The Act restrains you from taking eggs of any game bird except under a permit. You may not indulge in masks or disguises while hunting. You may not use automatic shotguns; or carry loaded firearms in motor cars nor have firearms in a lumber camp without a license.

The Act deals with another matter which is of interest to our subscribers There must be no trespass or pursuit of game on lands where there is growing or standing grain. Moreover trespassing in pursuit of game may in any instance be stopped upon any enclosed land in one of the following manners: by verbal or written notice; or by maintaining sign boards at least one foot square—within eighty rods of each other—stating "Hunting or Shooting is Forbidden."

Fishing and Shooting

We now come to the provisions of the Act as to fish and fishing. It restrains you from fishing in certain waters protected by Statute, and from poaching in private preserves. It also prescribes that sturgeon shall not be fished; that nets used in fishing shall be legibly marked with the owner's name.

Except in certain limited waters no resident needs a license to fish during the seasons. The Act permits the Deputy Minister to lease certain waters for the natural and artificial propagation of fish, and restrains any person without written permission from using these waters for the purpose of fishing. For entering on such preserves without permission you are deemed a trespasser and are liable as such in addition to being liable for any fishing you may attempt to do.

The Act provides for the appointment of game wardens, inspectors and other officers charged with the administration of the Act and it is a serious matter to obstruct or hinder them in the discharge of their duties. The Act permits them to enter upon and pass over private property, and it gives them the authority of constables and in certain instances to act as Justices of the Peace. In prosecutions instituted under the Act the burden of proving innocence where charged with unlawfully having killed game is upon the accused.

There are also in force in Ontario two other Acts administered by the Fisheries Department—"The Wolf Bounty Act"—which provides for a bounty of $15.00 for a brush wolf over three months, and $5.00 for wolf pups under three months; and another Act for the protection of insectivorous birds known as the "Birds Protection Act."

Only a Summary

In closing, we would point out to our readers that this article is not meant to be exhaustive; the provisions of the Act are too many and detailed for this, but we have covered it's main provisions so far as they concern the average reader.

There are, however, certain Orders-in-Council which have reference to certain limited counties or districts so that any of our readers would be well advised before entering into the pursuit of game to ascertain from the local game warden whether there is any especial Order-in-Council affecting the district in which they happen to reside.

The department also issues a very concise synopsis of the Act, to be had on application. which is valuable to the average sportsman.

Carefree Society Woman Succeeds

After Twelve Years, She Becomes Department Head of Bank

New York, Feb. 19—The remarkable rise in finance of Mrs. William Laimbeer is a chief topic of discussion by New York society. From a society woman who had never done a stroke of work as a wage earner until 12 years ago, she will be head of the woman's banking department in charge of all business done by the bank with women

Mrs. Laimbeer assumed a business career after her husband, a Wall street broker was killed in an automobile accident on Long Island and the responsibility of caring for her three children were thrust upon her. She began in a position little above that of a clerkship and steadily advanced to the rank of executive in the first $1,000,000,000 commercial bank in America.

A popular debutante as Nathalie Schenck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Spotswood D. Schenck of New York and Newport, Mrs. Laimbeer had many suitors, but her first marriage was with Captain Charles Glen Collins, who served with the British army in the Sudan and Boer wars. They were married at Monterey, Cal., and spent their honeymoon in Honolulu. They separated later and Mrs. Collins obtained a divorce. A child was born by this marriage.

Captain Collins later had difficulty with the law. He last figured in newspaper dispatches in 1923 when he was acquitted of charges of a gem swindle in Bombay, India.

Mrs. Laimbeer is the first woman to become an officer of the National City bank. Her rise has broken a century-old tradition of a conservative bank.

KILLED HER SISTER TO END MISERY

Paris, Feb. 19.—A tragic parallel to the crime for which Mlle. Uminska, young Polish actress, was recently tried and acquitted—the killing of her fiance to save him further agony from an incurable disease—has been enacted in Paris.

Anna Levasseur, middle-aged dress maker, yesterday shot and killed her sister, Anais, aged twenty-nine.

Anna, when arrested, told the police: "I killed my sister at her direct request. She was suffering from an incurable malady—tuberculosis of the bones.

"Seated in her chair she implored me to fire behind her ear."

The prisoner added that the Uminska case had made a great impression on her.

KING SETS EXAMPLE FOR HIS SUBJECTS

Bagdad, Feb. 19.—King Feisul of Iraq is trying to teach his subjects to practice self-denial, and in order to cut state expenses, has offered to forego half the monthly allowance to which he is entitled under the civil list. He has taken this step on learning the true condition of the Iraq treasury, which suffers from a serious deficit.

One Arabic newspaper, while thanking Feisul for this acknowledgment of the country's financial difficulties, suggests that leading officials might copy the king's excellent example. While such a course is hardly probable, there can be no doubt that further cuts will have to be made in the expenditure of the government on salaries and allowances.

Mrs. Pankhurst Spreading Gloom

Declares Islamic Engulfment of Europe is on Its Way

New York, Feb. 19.—Miss Christabel Pankhurst, who weekly prophesies the doom of Western civilization found fresh cause for alarm in her address at Calvary Baptist Church. Defeat of Spain by the Moorish Riffs presages an Islamic engulfment of Europe, she said.

Between the Mahometan hosts of Africa and Asia adn the Russian Reds Miss Pankhurst sees the early ruin of the Western world. In that cataclysm, she prophesied, Jesus wil return "on the clouds of heaven" to rule the earth.

"If England and France were beaten down by Bolshevism," she asked, "what difference will it make if the world does come to an end?"

Links Bible to News

Miss Pankhurst, feminist turned mystic, divided her sermon into three parts. In the first, speaking with suppressed intensity, and oratorical rhythms, she aroused the fears of her hearers by linking Biblical prophecy and news of Europe's distress. Then she reaffirmed her belief in the second coming, and, thirdly, appealed in revivalist fashion for personal regeneration.

Toward the close her audience, exalted to a high emotional pitch, were startled by a loud cry. It came as the speaker urged the necessity for spiritual rebirth.

"Well" came a shout in roughened masculine bass. 'Glory to God!"

It was as stirring an interrruption as would have been a pistol shot or a woman's scream. Scores turned in their seats, old ladies nudged closer to their companions. The man sat rigidly in a rear pew. No one was within ten feet of him.

Hearer Interrupts Again

He was disclosed to be a tall, spare, middle-aged man decently dressed. His body was bent forward, his eyes fixed blazingly on the exhorter. Perspiration stood on his forehead in shiny beads, the muscles of his cheek were in ridges.

Miss Pankhurst, trained in the handling of crowds, at once lowered her voice to soothing accents, taking no other notice of the intrusion. A few seconds later, as she assured the audience that Jesus would know whether the individual has been reborn, the man called out again at the top of his voice. This time his face was working and he appeared to be in an ecstacy of excitement.

"Yes," he cried, "and some one else will know it, too!"

After the meeting the man hurried away without revealing his identity.

VIENNA LOVES GAY CLOTHES

Vienna, Feb. 19.—Vienna cannot lose its reputation for gaiety. Someone in the garment trade has estimated that during 1924 the dancing Viennese, women and men, ordered 10,000 new dresses and 3,500 new dress suits in which to go to balls, and that together they called on the shoe-makers for 100,000 pair of dancing slippers.

FIEND IS SENTENCED

Midland, Mich., Feb. 19— Victor Badgley, 29, was sentenced to solitary confinement for life for the murder of 11-year-old Lena Todd, at Coleman, Michigan, Wednesday. The little girl was killed on her way home from school.

Kiwanis Lost to Hikers in Senior League at Recreation

The Durant's won from the Rovers in the junior league at the Recreation Alleys last night by nearly 300 pins, the Durant winning the three games. Bob Moher for the winners was high bowler with 616 and Salisbury was high for the Rovers.

The Supt's Office team No. 1 lost their first game of the season to the Yard team by 287 pins. The Office team played minus 2 of their regular bowlers, but at that the Yard rolled one of their best games totaling 2477; by the Office team losing last night puts the M. P. Shops at the top of the league. High bowlers were Edgecomb 520 and Ford 519.

The Hikers gave the Kiwanis their worst beating they have had for some time winning by over 300 pins, although the Kiwanis had to bowl a John Doe score the said John Doe was second high bowler. For Hikers, Harry Pearson was high with 617 and Art Donohue rolled 679 for the Kiwanis high score. Players and scores.

ST. PATS STRENGTHEN PLAY-OFF CHANCES

Toronto, Feb. 19—While the Ottawa Senators still have an outside chance of getting in the play-off for the National Hockey League championship their hopes received a terrific jar last night at the Arena when they were forced to accept a 4 to 2 defeat from the improving St. Patrick's who last night scored their sixth successive victory, and earned it on the play. As a result of the two games last night St. Patrick's and Canadiens are still deadlocked in second place, but they have a five-point margin on Ottawa and the latter, with six games to play, are faced with the almost impossible task of winning all their remaining games to oust either St. Patrick's or Canadiens.

As was expected, the meeting of the two teams produced an exciting contest and there was plenty of brilliant play by both teams but both teams paid a little too much attention to the man, and while the visitors were the greatest offenders the locals were not at all backward in retaliating, and secured one more minor. The strenuous going culminated in a big mix-up between Jack Adams, Boucher Smith and Clancy with about a minute to go and Adams and Clancy were awarded major penalties.

The Ottawa defence played the man all night and the local attackers particularly Adams, Day and McCaffery, had a rough passage. Boucher and Clancy both seemed to have chips on their shoulders from the start, but they had respect for "Babe" Dye's shot, and the local sharpshooter managed to beat Connell three times, all on individual efforts, although twice he was accompanied by a team-mate on the attack.

BROCKVILLE KIDS PUT PETERBORO OUT

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 19.—Peterboro juniors were eliminated from the O.H.A. race here last night when B Brockville held them to a 2-2 tie after winning at home, 4-2. The goalkeepers were the stars of the night, both having a great deal of luck. Kennedy and McInrue were the best for the visitors while McDougall and Solomon led the Peterboro team. The game was fast throughout and play was very open.

The visitors scored their two goals in the first period, one on a long shot and one from close in. The second period was scoreless although the homesters had most of the play. Half way through the third McDougall scored for the Petes and two minutes before time he scored again. The home team threw everybody up on the attack, but the Brockville defence held and the game ended with the score tied. The teams:—

Brockville—Goal, McMahon; defence Woodcock and Sheridan; centre, H. Garand; wings, Kennedy and McInrue subs, Walsh and P. Garand.

Peterboro—Goal, Lebarr; defence, Salmon and Collins; centre, McDougall wings, Chen and Ridpath; subs, Maudsley and Milloy.

Referee—Lou Marsh.

BRIGHTON HOCKEY CLUB ENTERTAINS

The Sheiks Hockey Club, of Brighton, were hosts last night to many Brighton and out-of-town visitors at their first concert and dance of the season.

Prior to the dance program, a musical concert was given by members of the Bon Ton orchestra, of Belleville, consisting of solo numbers on various novelty instruments.

The town hall was prettily decorated for the occasion, and many new novelty dance numbers were introduced by the orchestra.

Peterboro Fans Sore Over Game

Don't Like Idea of Playing Home Games in Toronto

The Peterboro Examiner has received a letter from a hockey fan who claims he is voicing the feeling of hundreds of others complaining about the action of the Peterboro Hockey Club in transferring the home game of the Parkdale play-off series to Toronto.

The writer of the letter declares that the change has been made because the prospects for a big gate are better in Toronto. And points out that the Seniors have been well supported here all season, while the Juniors have played to small gates.

Says the Examiner:

So far as the transfer of the Parkdale game is concerned the move was made simply because the Peterboro management and players are unanimous in their belief that their chances of victory are much better.

It is simple truth that at no time this season have the Petes hit their stride at home. The records speak for themselves: Parkdale beaten 7-2 in Toronto, won a 1 to 0 victory here; Varsity lost 4 to 1 at home, were victorious here by the same score; the Petes beat the Soo in Toronto, and tied them one game in Sault Ste. Marie and were beaten 5 to 0 in the game played here; and in the Hamilton series the blue shirts won by a bigger margin in Hamilton than at Brock Street Rink.

The Petes, in fact, have lost three out of six games at home, and have been outscored by 12 to 8 on local ice, while away from home they have lost but one game out of eleven, and have beaten the combined opposition by 45 to 22.

The players and management feel that they have a much better chance of bringing home honours by playing both games in Toronto and anyone who has seen the team perform at the Arena is of the same opinion.

Conquering Wolves Win 4th Straight

And National Castings Blank Boosters 3-0

It is remarkable how the Turnbull street ice surface is kept up with such mild weather, and it is surprising the brand of hockey the city league teams dish up to faithful fans on that ice surface.

There were two dandy games down at Arnott's place last night, which kept the interested crowd of fans "on their toes" all evening.

National Castings six defeated the Boosters with a white wash application to boot. The score was 3-0. Whitewash was also applied to the Tigers in the second tilt by the conquering Wolves of the North, who trimmed them 4-0.

The Wolves of the North have won four games and have not had one loss to date. That probably explains why the great majority of fans shouted themselves hoarse for the Tiger cats, who they vainly called upon to administer defeat. The Tigers could not measure up however.

Good fast hockey was the verdict of everyone, and Ken Colling who handled the bell last night, was very satisfactory to players of the four teams in action.

CANADIENS FINALLY DEFEAT MONTREAL

Montreal, Feb. 19.—After two unsuccessful attempts to win from Montreal at the Forum here, Canadiens finally broke the jinx last night, winning their National Hockey League tussle, 1 to 0. For two periods both teams battled in a scoreless deadlock, and it looked like a third overtime game between the two teams this season. But eight minutes after the start of the third session, Aurel Joliat, star Canadien wing, trapped the puck at centre ice. He feinted with it for a moment and then flashed. Before the Montreal players were aware he had circled the defence and sent the puck into the far corner of the Montreal net for the winning goal.

The tally kept Canadiens in a tie for second place with St. Patrick's in the N.H.L. race, and placed them comfortably ahead of Ottawa in the contest for a play-off berth.

The game was not marked by much brilliant hockey, but it was at all times exciting, with Canadiens having an edge the whole way. Canadiens were two short in the final period for a time, and Montreal missed some golden chances. A score at that time might have changed the complexion of the result. The teams:

Canadiens—Vezina, goal; Couture and Mantha, defence; Morenz, centre; Joliat and Boucher, wings; O. Cleghorn, Matz, Headley and Ritchie, subs.

Montreal—Benedict, goal; D. Munro and G. Munro, defence; Noble, centre; Dinsmore and Broadbent, wings; Lowrey, Rothschild, Parkes, Berlinquette, Scott, Skinner and Cain, subs.

Referee—Cooper Smeaton, Montreal.

Was Tough Game For Belleville

When Queen's Basketballers Won Out Towards End By 49-41

Two games were played Wednesday night at the Y. The first game between C. L. A. and Y. M. C. A. girls proved a walkaway for the Y girls. The Ciacs lacked experience and will do better when they get under way. The final score was 36-2.

The big feature was the Queens vs. Y. M. C. A. O. A. B. A. fixture, which was a battle all the way. Queen's are big and rangy, and have a good system of play. At that the local boys had them on the run at times. The half time score was 28-25 for Queen's and in the second half Belleville led 38-30 at one time, but seemed to lose their shooting eye and the College boys forged ahead to win 49-41. Chantler and Sexton were the big scorers for Queen's, while Bryce and Weir did the honors for Belleville.

Queen's—Sexton, 16; Young, 2; Chantler, 21; McKenna, 3; Clarry, 7; Bleeker; Dunlap; Total 49.

Second Bonspiel Commences Tonight

Belleville Curling Club competition Should Provide Fun and Excitement

Despite spring-like tendencies this afternoon, it is expected that the ice at the Belleville curling rink will be in very fair condition when the second big bonspiel of this season gets away there at 7.30 o'clock this evening, the hour set for the first draw. The second draw will get away at 9 o'clock.

Belleville devotees of the good Scottish game—and there are many accomplished members—will be given ample opportunity of showing their playing ability and generalship in this spiel, and should be favoured with enjoyment opportunities not experienced in curling rinks every day of the season.

Then another encouraging feature conducive to top notch curling, is the fact that valuable and useful prizes are to be awarded the winners of the two day spiel. With plenty of entries and prizes at stake, fur should fly up on the George Street hill whether or not it is sufficiently cold to wear "woollies."

So far as the direct political action was concerned, the decision arrived at was a somewhat sweeping one, as is indicated by the carrying of the following resolution;

To Interview Candidates

1. We insist on Government by majority as the primary principle of democracy.

2. We desire to be absolutely fair and non-partisan in our efforts.

3. In order to further the intelligent exercise of the franchise it is our duty to ascertain the views, policy and past record upon this issue of any candidate for whom our suffrage is requested.

4. To this end we request the executive of our Provincial Prohibition Union immediately on the selection of any person as a candidate for either Provincial or Dominion Parliaments to approach that person to ascertain his views and proposed policy on the prohibition issue.

5. We hereby pledge ourselves to support only such candidates as prove themselves faithful, and to resolutely oppose such as put party loyalty before prohibition principles. We particularly urge our people to loyally protect any representative who supports our policy in either Parliament. Recommend that where no candidate favors our policy the prohibition Union of that riding takes steps if they deem such action at all practicable to secure a prohibition candidate.

6. We recommend that our executive organize the constituencies according to these principles, pledging the voters to this policy, and urging them to attend and work in their party primaries for worthy candidates.

7. We declare our intention to pursue this policy in the Provincial arena by demanding that our representatives retain and strengthen the O. T.A., and in the Federal arena by insisting on legislative action to secure the following: (a) Supplementing Provincial legislation to make the same effective. (b) Prohibition of the manufacture of alcoholic liquors in prohibition provinces; also import of these out of such provinces. (c) As soon as practicable national prohibition.

8. And to this prohibition policy we hereby solemnly and publicly pledge our support, and we do this realizing the difficulties and subtle temptations involved in keeping this pledge.

NEWS BRIEFS

Robert Oliver, 22, a native of Galt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Oliver, Galt, was killed at Jackson, Michigan. He was working for a power company, and was run over by a trailer carrying a heavy pole.

For the purpose of tightening up the police system in the London district, High Constable A. J. Wharton of Middlesex was sworn in by Judge Ross, at St. Thomas, as a constable for Elgin County.

Rt. Rev. David Williams, Bishop of Huron, officiated at the dedication of Warner Hall, London, Ont., the new Parish Centre of Cronyn Memorial Church, named in honor of the rector Rev. G. Quinton Warner.

Completing a 12,000 mile journey over land and sea from Australia, Romyn Warmuth, new United States consul at St. John, N.B., succeeding Henry S. Vulvert, who retired from the service last fall, arrived with his wife and two boys, and has now taken up the duties of his post in St. John.

If wild geese and green frogs know anything there's going to be an early spring. The first flock of geese this year flew over Owen Sound, Ont., recently—northward bound. And one resident reports frogs hopping about an ice bound pond on the outskirts. These are true signs, according to the oldtimers.

Regina will be the distributing centre for the new Saskatchewan liquor system. A warehouse has been leased in the city by the Saskatchewan Liquor Board, for the purpose of a distributing warehouse for the system. The appointment of John Anderson, of Yorkton, as warehouse manager, is also announced.

Because Magistrate Jelfs, of Hamilton, Ont., grew tired of seeing Thomas Street forever in the dock, he decided to fine the man five cents for every previous appearance. Court records were inspected and Street was ordered to pay $2.50. Failure to pay resulted in a 30-day jail term. Drunkenness was Street's oft-repeated offence.

COAL GAS ALMOST CLAIMS VICTIMS

Toronto, Feb. 19.—A mother and her 12-day-old babe had a narrow escape from death through suffocation from coal gas escaping from a defective furnace to-day, when Mrs. Rachael A. Smith, aged 33 years, 28 Seymour Ave., and her baby were found overcome by the escaping fumes by another daughter of Mrs. Smith. Both mother and child were taken to St. Michael's Hospital in the police ambulance.

Mrs. Smith was confined to her bed. When discovered by her daughter, she was very ill. Dr. Victoria Reid was called and rendered first aid to mother and babe, ordering their removal to the hospital.

When musical instruments were first used in the services of the great Scottish churches many strict Sabbatarians objected to the iniquitous proceeding. One of these persons, who had left the kirk because of the introduction of a harmonium, said with a sneer to the minister: "Well, and how is your new fanner getting on?" "Oh, splendidly," answered the reverend gentleman. "It's just keeping the good corn and blowing the chaff away."

Elaine
BY
Charles Garvice

The marquis saw that she wished to be left alone, and after waiting a moment or two until the other man had begun to climb the hill, he raised his hat, and without a word left her.

But before he had gone many yards he saw her book lying, where it had fallen from her hands, and he picked it up and held it for a moment as if he were asking himself whether he should take it to her; then he turned back and held it out to her.

"Your book," he said. "I am afraid it has not been improved by its fall."

Elaine took it with a murmured "Thank you," and he seemed to be going again, but once more he stopped and stood regarding her, reluctantly, and almost against his will.

"The gentleman who has just left us mentioned your name, Miss Delaine," he said. "May I ask if you are related to Major Delaine of the 166th?"

His voice was still grave, but its sternness was tempered by a gentleness which came as a kind of shock to Elaine.

"I am his daughter," she said in a low voice.

"I thought you must be," he said. "I have not the pleasure of Major Delaine's acquaintance, but I have met Lord Delaine, and heard him speak of your father. I very much regret that I should have been the means of so much annoyance to his daughter!"

It could not but strike Elaine that though he had refused to apologize to the captain he was doing so to her. And she felt that it was not fair.

"I——You were not to blame," she said, with all a woman's desire to do justice. "Excepting——" And she stopped; but he seemed to divine her meaning.

"Excepting in being too violent, you were going to say," he said with a ghost of a smile. "I plead guilty, Miss Elaine; but before you pass sentence in your mind, please recollect the situation. I did see that man's—this gentleman's hand on your arm and—you did cry out, did you not?"

"It—it was foolish of me," said Elaine, the color sweeping over her face but leaving it pale again. "He did not mean to hurt me; there was no cause for alarm; but I was upset and frightened——"

"Forgive me," he said, his eyes seeming to penetrate hers and read the workings of her mind. "But you have acquitted me. If he only alarmed you there was sufficient excuse for what I was beginning to think my impertinent interference. I wish you had let me drop him over. I give you my word I think he deserved it, and I'm sure it would have done him good."

There was a spire of grotesque humor in the tone in which he said this that appealed too strongly to Elaine's always acute sense of the ridiculous, and she smiled, but very faintly.

The marquis glanced at the hill up which the captain's figure was slowly disappearing, and smiled too.

"I am afraid he is very angry," he said, but without much fear expressing itself in his voice. "I hope it will not cause you any further trouble——"

"No, oh, no," said Elaine hurriedly.

"If it should I shan't be able to forgive myself. I have an ugly temper, Miss Delaine," he added. "But you don't need any information on that point, I'm afraid."

Elaine colored, and looked down.

"I thought—I thought you were very cool and self-possessed," she ventured to say.

He laughed, the short, mirthless laugh.

"That was pure deception on my part, I'm afraid. I am always in the worst rage when I seem the coolest. I'm afraid if you had not been here our friend would have got something worse than a ducking."

"If I had not been here it would not have happened," said Elaine, blushing again and feeling angry with herself for doing so. "It is really all my fault. If I had not been trespassing."

He stopped her with a gesture.

"Ah, that's almost unkind!" he said reproachfully. "You remind me of the words I used to Captain Sherwin! You know that I did not include you in them even in my mind. I hope that you will consider the Castle grounds and all that is in them, at your absolute disposal, Miss Elaine. I should regret this business more keenly even than I do now if I thought it would be the cause of your avoiding the park."

His voice had grown still gentler and was almost appealing in its earnestness; but Elaine remained silent. The conventional "Thank you" would have been out of place.

"Do you come here often?" he said, looking round at the little glade, and especially at the bank beneath the lilac where she had been sitting.

MISS HAYES

224 FRONT ST.

Over Sinclair's Store

"Yes," she said. "It is near the cottage—our house—and so quiet," she added apologetically, "and there is no one——" She stopped with momentary confusion.

"There is no one to break the solitude," he said, again finishing her sentence as if he understood her thoroughly. "Yes, I am not often here. More's the pity," he added, glancing round. "It is beautiful, as you say." He was silent a moment, as if he were realizing the loveliness of the scene for the first time. Then he went on slowly. "But I am a restless man, and have got into the bad habit of soon tiring of a place."

He leaned against the bridge, and looked down with a graver and darker expression on his face. It almost seemed as if he had forgotten her presence, and Elaine had for the first time an opportunity to look on him without meeting his eyes; womanlike, she availed herself of it.

The marquis was a handsome man, but it was not the beauty of the face that struck Elaine. Some one says that few women fall in love with a man because he has regular features and fine eyes. Beauty is woman's privilege and right divine, and a "beauty man" poaches, so to speak, on her preserves But there was also another expression difficult to define: Alas! poor humanity! Nature endows some of us with the fatal gift, casts us in the divine mold, but Sin and Folly too often set their stamp upon the image and mar its beauty.

Elaine was a girl innocent of the world, and could not read aright the expression which marred the handsome face; but she noted the shadow on it, not divining that it was thrown there by the Dark Angel, who, wherever his feet rest, leaves behind him the prints of sorrow and remorse.

The face was dark, but not sufficiently so to make it un-English, and young though it was, there were one or two silver threads in the closely-cut hair on the temples. A moustache, cut in military fashion, concealed the upper lip, but left the lower free to convey the impression of a strong will indicated by the rest of the face. The eyes were dark also, and Elaine had found them penetrating; but they were capable of expressing a brooding melancholy at that moment, and Elaine, with feminine instinct, knew that they could be gentle.

He was dressed in a by no means new suit of rough tweed. Captain Sherwin probably took him for a game keeper!

His silence lasted only for a moment then he looked up and seemed to dispel the cloud which had fallen upon him.

"I hope you will not avoid the park because I happen to be here," he said, as if no pause had occurred. "It is not likely that I shall remain many days and while I am here I will promise not to disturb your solitude. I will give orders that, excepting quite early in the morning, no one, I mean none of the woodmen or gardeners, shall come here. It shall be territory sacred to you, Miss Delaine."

Elaine looked up earnestly.

"Oh, no, please do not!" she said. "I—I could not accept that."

"It isn't much, after all," he said, with the rare smile. "The park is large enough to spare a few yards like these. I shall think you have quite forgiven me if you will promise to come here with your book as you have been accustomed to do. As I say, you may rest assured no one shall disturb you. If you like I will have a gate put up at the end of the hedge, and give you the key." He said it quite simply, as if it were a mere nothing which Elaine could accept without scruple or hesitation; but she blushed scarlet as she shook her head

"Of course I could not do that—have you do that," she said. "But I am very grateful, and—and I will come sometimes——" She meant "when you have gone" and he understood.

He inclined his head softly.

"May I ask what you are reading?" he said.

Ealine held out the book and he took it and opened it.

"Poems!" he said. "Rosetti; I know; I mean I have heard of him. I don't read much, I haven't time—or patience," he added almost to himself. "Is it good? Do you like it?" he was running his eye over a page—one of the sweetest in the volume—as he spoke, then he looked at her.

"I suppose they are good," said Elaine. "They are very musical and——" She stopped.

"And you understand them," he said, scarcely in the form of a question. "Yes, you are young and the world seems as good and beautiful as yourself." He seemed to have been unconscious of the significance of his words but they effected Elaine naturally enough, and for a second her eyes fell and her color came. "Ah, yes, that's right enough," he said. "I hope it will always seem so. I'll get the book," suddenly.

It was on the tip of her tongue to say "Keep this, I will lend it to you" but she stopped in time, remembering that it would be as well that her acquaintance with the Marquis of Nairne should not go further.

"There it is," he said, "and I hope you'll bring it, and others to your favorite spot. You have not promised to do so, I remember. Well, I have no right to exact a promise from you. I have no right——" He stopped suddenly, and the cloud darkened his face again.

Elaine seized the opportunity, and with a murmured "Good-evening," left him.

She walked along the bank to the point at which she began to climb the hill, and felt rather than saw that he was standing where she had left him, and looking after her; and when, half-way up, she glanced down, she saw that he was still there, leaning against the rail, his hands thrust in his pockets; his head sunk upon his breast.

Seekers Of Thrills Get All They Want

In Picture Showing Now at The Belle Theatre

All the world is seeking thrills and no one knows it better than Lincoln J. Carter, author of "The Cyclone Rider," a William Fox special production billed at the Belle to-day as a "thrillodrama." Lincoln J. Carter has been writing stage plays for a great many years—so many that his name was a household world when the moving picture industry was in its infancy. Some time ago he was induced to join the Fox staff. That his genius for turning out scenarios is every bit as great as his genius for play-writing was proved in the success of his first two screen entertainments, "The Fast Mail" and "The Eleventh Hour."

Now along comes "The Cyclone Rider" with ten times the speed and action of its predecessors and a great deal of romance and humor which they lacked. It was directed by Thomas Buckingham, who has always excelled in productions of this type, and it features, in the title role, a young man named Reed Howes, who looks the part so thoroughly that he could act only half as well as he does and still put it across.

As James Kent, a young engineer, he has many chances to do breath-taking stunts on swinging cables, and on steel construction poised thousands of feet in the air, the reason for most of the heroism being a girl named Doris Howard, played by Alma Bennett.

The big scene, and the biggest thrill of the picture comes in the automobile race which he enters, hoping to win the $5,000 purse. Doris' father has decreed that he shall earn this amount before he can win the girl, which makes plausible the death-defying chances he takes to cross the line first. And then with the race practically won, a child wanders out across the track and he is obliged to wreck his machine to save her. That gives an opportunity for the picture to run on into even more thrills.

The audience doesn't mind. If "The Cyclone Rider" were twice as long it would sit clutching its chair arms and gasping joyfully through to the end. No one walks out in the midst of such excitement as this—and no one has the least chance to get bored. Even the wedding at the finish is not an ordinary wedding in the sense. The hero arrives through the window swinging on a steel derrick beam, in time to prevent Doris from marrying a blackguard, and then, since the minister was there and everything ready, he marries her himself.

Supporting Mr. Howes and Miss Bennett in the leading roles are William Bailey, Margaret McQuade, Charles Conklin, Ben Deeley, Frank Beal and Evelyn Brent.

Mob Scenes Are Most Realistic

In "Idle Tongues" Showing At Griffin Theatre To-night

Those who have seen "Idle Tongues," the Ince-First National production now at the Griffin Theatre, can attest to the fact that the mob scenes in the picture are among the most realistic ever screened.

And so can Percy Marmont, who, in the role of "Doctor Nye," bore the brunt of the mob's fury.

When the mob hustles Doctor Nye from the town meeting, where they have suddenly become blood-thirsty through seeing a wound on the doctor's head, the script called for several healthy blows to be delivered to the doctor's face and jaw.

During the taking of the scenes, the extra players who were to do the "punching" were told to hit just hard enough to give the effect of a fairly heavy blow. They attempted to follow out these orders, but failed. As they swung at Marmont, several others just behind them also struck at him. These players hit the elbows and arms of those nearest the victim of the mob. The result was that the blows that were struck were terrific and all but stopped the picture.

A player with less stamina might have called "enough." Marchmont continued with the scenes, however, and it was not until Director Lambert Hillyer had given orders to stop the cameras that it was learned just how hard Marmont had been hit.

The mob scenes are just a few of the many dramatic moments in this screen story, adapted from the Joseph C. Lincoln novel, "Dr. Nye." A splendid cast, including Marmont, Doris Kenyon, Claude Gillingwater, Lucille Ricksen, Malcolm McGregor, Vivia Ogden, Ruby Lafayette and Dan Mason appear.

Mrs. (Dr.) J. A. Faulkner, Bridge St., is spending a few days in Toronto.

Judge G. E. Deroche and Mr. C. H. Vermilyea left this week for a trip to Florida.

Mr. A. Kincaid, of Madoc, is in Belleville this week.

Rev. Dr. McTavish has returned from the Prohibition Union in Toronto, where he was chairman of the Committee on Legislation and Law Enforcement.

Miss Evelyn Toner of Strathcona, has returned home after spending a few holidays with Claire Elliott, Brassey street.

Mr. F. P. Thompson, general manager of the Ritchie Co., and Mr. H. B. Poste, manager of the home furnishing department are in Toronto, Kitchener, Stratford and Waterloo this week, visiting the largest furniture manufacturers on an extensive buying trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Brockhurst, 31 Earl St. entertained about thirty young people at their home last night. The evening was spent in playing games. At midnight a lunch was served and soon afterwards the party drew to a happy conclusion.

A surprise party and miscellaneous shower was given last evening for Miss Marguerite Van Norman at the home of her parents, John street, at which about eighty were present. Cards, dancing and songs were indulged in. A dainty luncheon was served at midnight. One of the features was the reading of an address by Miss Hutchinson from the Woolworth Co. The bride-to-be received a number of handsome and useful presents, for which she thanked all in a short speech.

Belleville friends of Mr. and Mrs. Havelock Robb will be interested to learn that they were invited to the Huntington Library and Art Gallery, in Pasadena. This is a private library, worth a hundred million dollars, has the BLUE BOY and many other priceless paintings. It is to belong to the Nation upon Mr. Huntington's death. As it is a part of the Huntington home and as private as any other library privately owned, it is a great courtesy to be invited. Books and maps, treaties and historical documents relating to Canada and with no means of knowing their value in money, were brought out and handled and studied. One book about the early history of Montreal is priceless. Another of 1603, the first copy of the first edition of Champlain cost five thousand dollars.

A monthly card party held last ev- O.P. Society proved to be the most successful held this winter. The spacious hall of the society was filled with players who occupied 20 tables and late arrivals were compelled to play in the ante room. The prize winners were as follows:

Ladies

First Prize—Mrs. H. Culhane.
Second Prize—Mrs. A. W. Lane.
Consolation Prize—Mrs. S. M. Sprague.

Gentlemen

First Prize—R. Morgan.
Second Prize—T. Robinson.
Consolation Prize—E. Riggs.

At the conclusion of the card playing refreshments were served after which the floor was cleared and dancing was indulged in for some time. Music for the dances was furnished by Young's Orchestra and was all that could have been desired.

An informal dance was given last night for those who took part in the play, "Nobody's Baby," and their friends at St. Thomas' Parish Hall. About eighty young people were present, and reported a wonderful time. Dr. Hough and Messrs. Allison and McCormick supplied the music. The refreshments served were very much enjoyed. The dance lasted until shortly after midnight.

KERR—PREST

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, February 18th, at two o'clock at Foxboro Methodist Church, when Eva Pearl, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Albert Prest was united in marriage to Mr. Thomas Kerr, of Latta. Rev. Mr. I. Snell performed the marriage. The bride looked charming in her navy silk crepe-de-chine, and her travelling suit was sand with a white silk blouse.

She carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kerr will leave for Toronto where they will spend a few days.

SPENCE—BUSTARD

A pretty wedding was performed in Queen street Methodist parsonage, at Kingston on Tuesday morning by the Rev. W. H. Raney, when Miss Lena Charlotte, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bustard, Wolfe Island, became the bride of Mr. George Arthur Spence, Prescott. The bride looked charming in a suit of navy blue tricotine with crepe de chine blouse, grey picture hat and veil to match. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Edna Viola who wore grey tricolette with hat to match. Mr. Garnet Rogers, cousin of the bride, acted as best man. Only a few relatives were present. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea set, to the bridesmaid a string of pearls and to the best man a pearl tie pin. The bride and groom were the recipients of a number of handsome presents, also a substantial cheque from the bride's father. They will take up residence on Wolfe Island where the groom is a prosperous young farmer.

BEAR AT VICTORIA LOOKING FOR MATE

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 19.—An attempt is to be made to capture alive a mate for Ursus Kermodei, a lonely white bear, the only one of its species known to be in captivity, now housed in a new $1,000 home of its own at Beacon Hill Park. A report has been received from Princess Royal Island, on the northwestern British Columbian coast, that bears of the same species are at large there. Smaller than polar bears, they have a limited habitat and, owing to the isolated and rugged character of the islands, it is almost impossible to capture the animals alive.

Itchy Eczema Is Healed By This Sulphur

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

District News

Blame Snowplowers

Alderman Crowe led an assault on the snowplow men at Peterboro for their failure to clean the streets during the recent thaw. The Engineer is responsible for calling the snowplow men out, it was said, and Alderman Crowe believes that a fine of $5.00 should be levied on either the Engineer or the contractor for any neglect, as the people pay good money for taxes and are entitled to much better work in this line than they have been getting. There had been no complaint about the ordinary snowplowing, but the slush in his neighbourhood had not been removed until after he had lodged a complaint.

Alderman Fife announced that he would father a by-law in the council requiring the citizens to clean off their sidewalks after the passing of the plows and that the Works Department do those portions left undone, charging the cost against the property. A motion of Aldermen Denne and Phelan was passed, leaving the matter of enforcing the contracts to the Engineer's Department and providing that those not doing their duty be checked up.

21st Battalion Club Event

On Monday evening the 21st Battalion Club held a euchre and dance in the Orange Hall, Kingston, fifteen tables of cards being in play, for which useful prizes were given and won by the following ladies and gentlemen: Ladies' first, Mrs. M. Leighton; Ladies' consolation, Miss Carman; gentleman's first, Mr. R. Leslie; gentlemen's consolation, Mr. H. Hoffman. At 10.30 p.m. dancing was commenced to the strains of Art Christmas' orchestra. The success of the evening was due to the following committee:—W. McCullagh, R. Irwin, W. Kay, A. Pullen.

Father Chases Son

As a result of action taken in the Kingston police court a "lazy young man" has been made to work.

The young fellow was before the court some time ago, and Magistrate Farrell ordered him to go to work. He was before the court again on Wednesday morning, and when questioned by the magistrate, stated that he had been engaged nine days in shovelling snow.

"Keep at work of some kind," remarked the magistrate, and he further enlarged the case to give the chap a chance to make good.

The charge against the young man was made by his father.

The Negative Won Out

Adolphustown, Feb. 19.—The thaw last week reduced the snow that it is much easier to get about and a great deal of teaming is being rushed. The debate held in the Methodist church, on Feb. 5th, passed off very pleasantly. The subject was "Resolved that Canada has greater national resources than the United States." Conwaytook the affirmative was represented by Messrs. H. Allison and F. Wright, Adolphustown by R. M. Roblin and Mrs. C. F. Allison. Both sides presented strong arguments but the negative won by a small majority of points. The judges were J. A. Robertson and Miss C. Friskin, Hay Bay, and Rev. H. B. Neal.

County Orange Lodge

The Prince Edward county Orange lodge elected these officers: Master, Bro. Alex. Vanhorne; deputy master, Bro. Frank Demore; chaplain, Bro. Lockyer; recording-secretary, Bro. Lewis N. McFaul; financial-secretary, Bro. Wray Carley; treasurer, Bro. Robert Wood; first lecturer, Bro. F. Legge; second lecturer, Bro. William Benn; director of ceremonies Bro. William Wight; senior com., Bro. Burton Wilson; junior coms., Bro. Jotham Moon and John Rupert.

It was decided to celebrate the 12th of July at Wellington. The next annual meeting of the county lodge will be held at Consecon.

Died From Injuries

Picton, Feb. 19.—An accident which resulted fatally, occurred at the home of Thomas Alexander, third concession of Hillier on Sunday. A friend, Mrs. Albert Way of Hillier, and her husband, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alexander. After dinner Mrs. Way assisted in washing the dishes and when finished stepped backwards to hang a towel to dry. In doing so she stepped into the cellar doorway area, and fell to the bottom, alighting on her head. The injured lady was rushed to Dr. McCullough's office in Wellington and died on her way to Picton hospital. Her skull was fractured. Deceased had been married twelve years, and leaves no children. There was no inquest. Burial took place at Wellington yesterday afternoon.

Pain

Nothing Suspicious

Fire Marshall Heaton, of Toronto, who conducted an investigation in the Kingston Council Chambers on Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of inquiring into the circumstances in connection with the recent fire which took place at Robertson's Limited, crockery store, Princess street, January 30th, declared after hearing the evidence of twelve witnesses, he was satisfied there was no ground for suspicion. The place of origin was in the packing room, located on the first floor of the building at the rear.

Ninety-five Years Old

Kingston, Feb. 19.—Mrs. Miriam Graham, the mother of Reeve C. J. Graham of the Township of Kingston, celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday Tuesday, receiving the congratulations of her very many friends and spending the day quietly in the home of Reeve Graham with whom she resides.

Mrs Graham's father, Mr. Gordon, came out from Scotland to this country over a hundred years ago, settling in Cataraqui where Mrs. Miriam Graham was born ninety-five years ago. Mrs. Graham is wonderfully hale and hearty and quite sprightly for a lady of such advanced age. She takes a very great interest in current events especially in connection with the affairs of the township over which her son is Reeve. She reads, sews and undertakes domestic work generally left to much younger people.

In addition to Reeve C. J. Graham, Mrs. Graham has another son living, Dr. Hedley Graham, of Rochester, New York, who is a graduate of Queen's University.

A Clean Sheet

Peterboro, Feb. 19.— The Assizes, which were scheduled to open with a clean docket Wednesday afternoon, after being adjourned from Tuesday, were again adjourned for good Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Justice Mowat did not appear and notice was given that hearing of the consent in the one case which has been settled out of court would be given in Toronto.

The case of Sherman and Merson the two cattle dealers, who were charged with obtaining with intent to defraud, will come up at the June Sessions of the Peace. This was not set down for hearing at the Spring Assizes.

Gas on Stomach Won't Let You Sleep

Gas pressing on heart and other organs sometimes causes a restless, nervous feeling and prevents sleep. Adlerika helps any case of gas on the stomach, unless due to deep-seated causes. The QUICK action will surprise you. Because Adlerika is such an excellent intestinal evacuant it is wonderful for constipation—it often works in one hour and never gripes. J. S. McKeown, Druggist.

Heads Cleared

In Colds or Catarrh

The way to clear the head quickly is with Ely's Cream Balm. Apply it in the nostrils and breathe it. The fumes are antiseptic. They combat the germ attack. The head is cleared, the inflammation is subdued, the whole trouble is checked at once.

Internal treatments deal only with results. They are slow. Combat the germs where they attack. End the misery, stop the cold.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Get its quick relief. That is the right way with a head cold or catarrh.

NAMES

YOU meet Mr. Howard and Mr. Walters in a gathering. Their names are to you but two of many you hear.

A few days later you meet Mr. Howard again. And again. He becomes a friend, perhaps an intimate in your social as well as business life.

Mr. Howard's name grows to mean a lot to you. Mr. Walters is rarely seen again and soon forgotten.

In this newspaper are other names—names of advertised products. Day after day you see them. They are like old friends—to be trusted. Their names mean economy, full value and integrity.

The unadvertised products—perhaps you see one in a store—or in a friend's home. Soon the name is forgotten—a stranger about whom you know little.

Fill your medicine closet, your pantry, your wardrobe with products whose names are guarantees of their integrity,—advertised products. Like intimate friends—you know what they are and will do.

Mooseheart Now Big Wonder Home

Salvation of Unfortunate Children, Remember Old Folk Too.

TEACH TRADES THERE

Interesting History of Idea Since Inception In 1913

Mooseheart, Ill., a city of childhood, a wonder home and sensational and successful vocational school, is the result of the practical idealism and dream of James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor in President Calvin Coolidge's Cabinet. Mooseheart was started by the Moose order because they wanted a place where the boys and girls who had lost their fathers might go and be cared for and educated. Mooseheart is not a charity. It is a service which is purchased by the father for four cents a week before he dies.

Twelve years ago those who had charge of the welfare and destiny of the Loyal Order of Moose came to the conclusion that fraternal societies could not much longer justify their existence by merely furnishing to their members selfish and individual benefits, advantages and pleasures, but if they were to continue to be a factor, they must do something worth while to solve some of our great national problems. These men heard the cry that goes up every day in every American community of the despairing mother, left a widow. And so they determined to consecrate all of the power, the influence, the assets and the eagerness and activities of the Loyal Order of Moose to the idea that every boy and girl is entitled to at least a high school education and a vocation or useful trade.

Mooseheart Is a Miracle

Mooseheart was founded in 913, when Vice President Thomas R. Marshall stood under a circus tent, spread over a part of a farm of 1,023 acres of land in Illinois, 35 miles west from Chicago, and la'd the cornerstone. Five years later he again visited Mooseheart and said, regarding his visit at the time of the dedication "I felt that, like many of the good ideas and good devices of human kind, it was only a circus performance and that when the tent went down the show would be over. Thank God for miracles! Thank God to-day that I can stand before you and say that, notwithstanding what all the higher critics may say upon the subject, the age of miracles has not passed. All I hoped for and prayed for has come to pass at Mooseheart."

Mooseheart has scrapped all the old traditions that usually surround the old-time orphans' home. The one thought that dominates the souls of the members of the Moose and especially those employed there is to give a square deal and a fair chance to childhood. Therefore, it is not an orphanage but a great school and a great home.

Among the three or four million cradles now rocking in the world are some who will have an unhappy childhood, but there have been 2,000 fatherless children at Mooseheart, who have been shielded from the sorrows in the train of poverty and ignorance.

The Moose have in Mooseheart what they believe to be a solution of the social and industrial problems. The Moose have developed social insurance through Mooseheart, not only for having the protection in operation as a shelter over the heads of millions of children, but as well this order can point with pride to more than 2,000 boys and girls who through this plan have been lifted from the depths and started on their way to the right, the true and the beautiful.

There are now 1,200 fatherless children, some from Canada at Mooseheart. There are 120 mothers here with their children on their knees and their arms about their necks. They do not live in dormitories, but in cottages and homes that are like normal and wholesome homes. The mothers are given employment at something they are physically able to do and are paid a salary.

Vocational Training is Feature

There are 30 useful trades and vocations taught at Mooseheart. The boys and girls take pre-vocational training in each, they are permitted to select the one they like best. The Mooseheart school is not to graduate children, but to educate them. The potato patch is the gymnasium, the corn field the campus and the pasture the running track. Mooseheart believes that it is more important to educate than to graduate.

Ninety-five per cent. of the work is done by hand. Therefore, Mooseheart believes it is 95 times more important to teach the hand than the head. Mooseheart impresses upon every child the dignity of labor, and that it is more noble and more important to be a useful artisan, a useful farmer, than a discontented college graduate. Boys and girls when they leave Mooseheart are ready to take their places as mechanics, printers, business managers, scientific farmers, sheet metal workers, commercial sign painters, carpenters, milliners, dressmakers, nurses, household managers, cooks, school teachers and in many other lines.

In addition to getting a high school education and being taught a trade, all receive religious training in the faith of their parents, an advanced training in music, athletic training, military training and many others.

Mooseheart children are fed scientifically. A dietician prepares the menu. Children subject to hereditary diseases are given the food they should have and they do not get food they should not have.

Home for Old Folks

Moosehaven, Fla., is where the Loyal Order of Mooser has its home for aged members and their wives. This also is a service which members buy by paying two cents per week. The aged members and their wives if physically able are expected to work so that they may wear out rather than rust out. They are paid for their services and while they are busy their thoughts are not upon themselves. They live in modern bungalows.

The Mooseheart and Moosehaven extension service is for mothers and children who may not wish to come to Mooseheart and for the aged who may not wish to go to Moosehaven. They are being taken care of in their own homes. The Moose order gives to them a sum of money each month, bigger than their income has been, fixes up their homes, insists that the children get at least a high school education and be taught a trade, and, further, they must lern the American language an dalso get a religious training in the faith of their parents.

The Loyal Order of Moose has 649,-661 members and its net assets total $25,000,000.

Mr. Ferguson's O.T.A. Move As The Sentinel Sees It

"Mr. Ferguson has not broken his pledges, as The Sentinel sees it. He promised to stregthen the O. T. A. and stop bootlegging. In our opinion he has done so. He proposes prison for the bootlegger, the purveyor of spirituous liquor. Each step is consistent with his promises. He is endeavoring to remove the dissatisfaction of seventy-five per cent. of the opponents of the O. T. A., and he will make illegal sale of whiskey a precarious and dangerous means of getting a living. Whether his proposed measures will succeed remains to be seen. But the experiment he is making does not open the way to drunkeness. No harm can come from it as far as we can see, and he should have (and we believe he will get) the support of all the sane, sensible temperance men and women in the province. As a piece of constructive legislation we regard his plan as wise statesmanship.

"In the first place we warn the Prohibition leaders against extreme measures and extreme statements. To say, as Rev. Ben Spence is reported to have said, that because of the proposed increase in the strength of beer, "There will not be a place in the British Empire that will be as wide as Ontario," is so manifestly untrue and absurd that it works serious injury to the cause for which he speaks. Reasonable men are driven to revolt by such language. The cause of prohibition cannot be advanced by such methods. The better way to proceed is to calmly consider the probable effects of the change, and of other factors. The Sentinel has no knowledge as to what authorities the Prime Minister has consulted, but we can say that of a score of reputable physicians who have given their opinions to the editor every one of them agrees that a five per cent. beer is not an intoxicating drink. If that is the case, as we have reason to believe, then MR. FERGUSON'S ACTION IS THE VERY BEST MOVE THAT COULD BE MADE IN THE CAUSE OF TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Letter from Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Spring Valley, Sask.—"I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement, when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights, my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement and this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's Telegram' and wrote you for one of your books. We have no druggist in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since baby came. (She is as good as she can be.) Yours is the best medicine for women, and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it." — Mrs. ANNIE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, Sask.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system so that it may work in every respect as nature intends. All druggists sell this dependable medicine. Give it a trial.

GETTING TOO FAT? TRY THIS—REDUCE

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. But if you find the fat accumulating or already cumbersome, you will be wise to follow this suggestion, which is endorsed by thousands of people who know. Ask your druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets and follow directions. One dollar is the price the world over. Get them fro myour own druggist or send price direct to Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit Mich. By doing this you will be able to reduce steadily and easily, and pleasantly, without starvation diet or tiresome exercise. Start taking them to day and get slender.

HAVE NO TRACE YET OF PROF. ANDRE

Kingston, Feb. 19.—Up till 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Prof. Joseph Andre was still reported as "missing" and the police had no word of him being apprehended at any point.

The Ottawa Journal of Tuesday has the following:

Local authorities have been asked to lend their efforts in the search for Prof. Joseph Andre, who has been missing from Kingston since last Wednesday, and whose bride of a few weeks has asked for police aid in the search for her missing bridegroom. Prof. Andre, who is referred to in the Kingston despatch as "a well-known music teacher," was two years ago prominent in Ottawa as the director of the Ottawa Opera Singers, who put on two light operas in the Russell Theatre.

During the year that he spent in Ottawa Prof. Andre gave music lessons and organized the local opera company. His efforts proved fairly successful, and his operas, which each had a run of three days at the Russell Theatre were well patronized.

RABBITS DESTROY TREES

Niagara Falls, Feb. 19—A plague of jack rabbits has struck the area above Chippawa on the Niagara Boulevard, and complaint of their depredations is being heard from fruit farmers. They appeared for the first time last fall on this side of the Welland Canal and have done a great deal of damage in the Winter. Young trees are their special prey, and scores of them have been ruined.

George Mara, aged 67, a veteran resident of Point Edward is dead. He is survived by his wife and two brothers. He was employed as a stationary engineer at C.N.R. roundhouse.

OUR CITY IS THE BEST

I've looked and I've lived on this old
Earth of ours,
For nearly a score of years,
I've shared with it's pleasures and beauties,
And also it's sorrows and tears.

I've travelled West for a number of miles,
And visited the prairies wide,
I've watch them thresh their wheat and grain,
Those large crops they so much pride.

On the other hand, I've travelled East
For a few miles, and visited towns
Where beauties abounded a hundred fold,
And where people had smiles and had frowns.

I've visited the Niagara District,
Where peaches and luscious fruit
grow,
And looked upon those wonderful Falls,
And along the Welland Canal drove.

Amid all these travels I've mentioned,
There's none that appear to me,
Any more beautiful than Belleville,
That is, as far as I can see.

We have numerous opportunities here,
Staring us in the face,
And if we don't really appreciate them,
It's our fault, and not the place.

We can boast of education,
With out Public and High Schools,
Our Colleges and Institutions,
Where they teach the Golden Rule.

We have our thriving industries,
So many too in number,
And wonderful opportunities,
For the fruit grower and the farmer.

There's our railways to of which to speak,
And the water transportation,
A stop-over for tourists
With our hotel accommodation.

We have surpassing facilities,
For fishing and hunting to,
A Paradise for the Sportsman,
A pleasure waiting for each of you.

We have talent abounding in our city
In every mentionable form,
Just visit our theatres now and then,
When a local play is on.

We can boast of a Member of Parliament,
And our Mayor, he's one of the best,
Our City Fathers in general
Are all rather sociable chaps.

There's many other things as well,
Of which we might be proud,
Our city is the Gateway to Ontario,
Beautifully situated and bountifully endowed.

OLD TIMERS KEEP UP JAIL RECORD

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—Two old-timers re-entered the familiar precincts of the Ottawa jail Wednesday. Patrick Navan has been sentenced to jail once for every year of his life since he was twelve, and this is the 76th year of his age. Actually he first went to jail 55 years ago.

Paul Christie has a longer record. His age is 64, but this is his 117th conviction and his 37th year of jail experience. Both were convicted of vagrancy.

Curiously, although they have spent so much of their lives in the local jail, they have rarely been there together before.

Morphine valued at about $10,000 was seized when Gordon McDonald and Jack Arthurs were arrested in Moose Jaw, Sask., by Mounted Police officers. The drugs were found on the men and in the rooms occupied by them.

Artillery Officers Took Exception

To Insidious Campaign of Unpatriotic Against Military Training

Toronto, Feb. 19.—A large number of artillery officers from all points of the province attended the 40th annual meeting of the Ontario Artillery Association, and displayed the keenest interest in one of the most technical arms of the militia service. Very considerable concern was expressed over the reduction of the appropriation for training made by the Dominion Government, which had, prior to the training year of 1924, been reduced below what the officers considered necessary for the efficiency of the batteries, even in skeleton form, and strong resolutions bearing on the same were passed, and will later be forwarded to the departments concerned.

Strong exception was also taken to the insidious campaign being carried on by various foreign organizations, and some unpatriotic Canadians against any form of military training, this in the face of the daily demonstration that foreign nations are still contemplating warfare in spite of which many residents of Canada are endeavoring to keep themselves in the public eye by preaching a doctrine that would leave the country helpless.

The following batteries—R.C.H.A. A. and B., 1st, 2nd, 9th, 12th 15th, 16th, 29th, 30th, 34th, 40th, 53rd, and 54th.

SCHOOL BOARD MOVES TOWARD BETTER SCHOOL

Committee Appointed to Confer With High School Inspector

HAD BUSY SESSION

Suggest Health Committee; Much Illness Among Pupils Here

The Board of Education in regular session last night took another step towards getting more accommodation for High School pupils. A committee was struck off to talk over the question with the High School Inspector.

Owing to the Council Chamber being engaged by performers who were taking part in an entertainment in the City Hall the members met in a committee room in the city building. Some members of the Board entered a protest at not being able to occupy the Council Chamber as their accustomed meeting place and also intimated that the attention of the City Council would be called to the matter.

Saving School Days

During the session of the Board, considerable business was transacted. A motion by Col. Ponton was adopted, that the teachers convention be held on a Friday and Saturday and not held on two teaching days. Mr. A. McGie will be the Board's representative at the annual meeting of the urban school trustees of the Province to be held at London in a few days.

Members present were: Messrs. J. Elliott, chairman, H. W. Ackerman, A. McGie, Col. W. N. Ponton, J. W. Cook, F. S. Anderson, G. B. Smith, W. Harvey, A. E. Geen, F. Potter, J. Bone, G. Sprackett, A. Jones, F. H. Chesher, Mrs. A. McFee and Mrs. F. Boyes.

Mr. H. W. Ackerman was chairman of committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc

The finance committee's report recommending the payment of a number of accounts was adopted.

New School

A recommendation was read from the Sites, building, and repair committee that the Secretary be requested to write the Education Department at Toronto to send an architect to look over a proposed site for a new High school.

It was learned however, that the de the department would not interfere n partment had no architect and that the matter.

A special committee composed of A. McGie, H. W. Ackerman, F. B Smith, G. B. Smith, Col. Ponton, J. W. Cook and Mrs. McFee was appointed to confer with the High School Inspector in reference to the matter.

Nurse Sinclair reported that the auxiliary training class was progressing favorably.

High School Inspection

Mr. Geo. F. Rogers, a High School Inspector reported in reference to his recent inspection.The condition of the school premises was most unfavorably commented upon, and no grading was made as to accommodation. The staff of teachers was competent.

Capt. Herron, inspector of the Cadet Corp, presented his report and some new uniforms were necessary for the High School Corp.

The matter was referred to the High School committee with power to act.

Medical Inspection

Col. Ponton referred to a letter from Mr. McLaurin Principal of the High School which stated that there had been considerable sickness in the school the past month.

The Colonel thought that Dr. Cronk the Medical Health Officer of the city might be invited to see that every precaution is taken at this school in regard to a proper inspection. He would favor a health committee being appointed from members of the Board to act in conjunction with the Medical Health officer and Board of Health.

Grant for Athletics

A grant of $50 was made to the girls and boys athletic Association in connection with the High School.

Col. Ponton gave notice of a motion for the appointment of a musical committee from members of the Board.

A grant of $22 was made to the agricultural department of the High School for the purpose of having a lot ploughed and seeds procured for the raising of vegetables.

A motion was carried that Messrs. J. Bone and W. N. Belair be appointed on the Advisory Board of the night school.

Col. Ponton was of the opinion that the night school might be discarded in order to relieve the teachers. Mr. Ackerman said this matter could be considered this fall before the night school re-opens.

Principal McLaurin stated that the night school duties were by no means as arduous as the teaching in the day time.

The secretary was authorized to send $25, the board's membership fee to the urban trustees association.

Motions

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. H. W. Ackerman, that the minister of education be memorialized to have the teachers' convention held on Friday and Saturday rather than on two days in a teaching week.

Col. Ponton stated that Hon. H Ferguson, Premier and Minister of Education was in favor of this idea.

The motion was adopted.

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr A. Jones that in future the field day of sports for the High School be held

W.C.T.U. Offering Prizes For Essays

Subject Will Be "Temperance"; Details to be Announced Later

At a business meeting of the W.C.T.U. held yesterday it was decided to offer prizes for the best essays on temperance subjects to be written by High and Public Schools' students, and prizes also for posters. Details will be announced later including the judges for the competition. So far plans have been made to offer two prizes of $5.00 and $3.00 for the best efforts of the High School students, and $3.00 and $2.00 for the Third and Fourth Books of the Public schools.

Acting upon Premier Ferguson's suggestion that the children be educated to the evils of intemperance, it was decided that this was the psychological time to appeal to the Premier, asking that a scientific text book on temperance be procured for the schools.

Plans were made for a membership campaign when the members will be divided into groups to canvass for members.

Concert To Help Make Fair Better

Successful Program at the Prince of Wales School Last Night

Prince of Wales school community club concert held last night was highly successful with a good program and a splendid crowd.

A worthy collection was received and it will be used to help make a bigger and better school fair for which the school is now noted and for which plans are now well under way, under the capable direction of Mr. Fred Hart.

Following is the program.

Piano Solo—Miss May Brooker.

Vocal Solo—Tura-lura- laddie given in a most pleasing manner by Mr. J. K. Williams.

Reading—Mr. C. B. Scantlebury.

Dialogue—"The Painted Chair" in which the following took part, instructed by Mrs. Fred Hart:—Miss Bessie Hart, Jack Harvey, Gordon Miles, Durwood Dafoe.

Sketch — Special request — "Bill Atchews School Days" written by Mr. S. H. Turner. The whole family taking part. A feature of this sketch was the singing of the chorus "Hit the Trail" by five-year-old Wm. Maxwell Turner which was heartily applauded by the audience.

Guitar Selection — Echoes of Old Black Joe by Miss Beulah Harkins.

Recitation—Mrs. T. Ramsay.

Piano and Harp Selection—Miss Harcourt and Mrs. Eugene Harkins.

Sketch—"Uncle Hiram's Cold"—The principal actors were Miss Millie Sharpe and Master Eddie Turner assisted by Miss Irene Wilson Miss Helen Flunder, Miss Molly Grey Joe Miles, Wm. Flunder.

Recitation—Molly Grey.

Comic Song—Mr. S. H. Turner.

Dialogue—Advertising for a Companion which was well rendered by Miss Martha Harris and Miss Ida Morrell.

Bridge St. Choir Entertained Well

Well Balanced Program Offered To Guests Last Evening

The concert given in the Bridge St. Sunday School room on Friday evening under the joint auspices of the choir and the Sunday School left nothing to be desired, for the program was of a very high order, and well balanced.

The choir numbering some thirty voices under the direction of Prof. Hunt rendered four delightful part songs, "The Miller's Wooing', "Now tramp o'er Moss and Fell," "Scots Wha Hae", and "There's a Land". When it is said of the recitations of Miss Jessie Tuite they were given in her own best style, no more need be said, for that implies that her audience listened to her with the greatest delight. Again and again was she recalled, and she always graciously responded.

Mr. Allan Schryver and Mr. Jack Deacon sang tenor solos which were greatly enjoyed, and the same may be said of the baritone selections of Mr. Fred Sprague, Mr. Harold Howard and Mr. W. C. Chater. Miss Jessie Barlow and Mr. Percy Robbins rendered piano selections which were listened to with pleasure.

A duet, "A Venetian Boat Song," by Mrs. Stobie and Mrs. McKinnon was exceedingly well rendered, and a quartette by the same two ladies and Messrs. Sprague and Schryver was really delightful. A trio by the Colclough sisters was so sweetly rendered that the audience demanded another which was given. The chair was occupied by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, Superintendent of the Sunday School, and the accompaniments were played by Prof's Hunt and Anglin.

Editor Claims Man Who Stole Bible Has Garbage Can Where His Heart Was

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Emporia, Kan., Feb. 21.—The Emporia Gazette, William Allen White's paper, is without three of the most valued books of its library—a dictionary, a concordance, and a Bible. White has frequently voiced opposition to the cross-word puzzle craze and he blames cross-word addicts for the theft. The Gazette, in announcing the loss of the books says:

"A man who will steal a dictionary is enterprising and there is hope for him. A man who will steal a concordance is a hair-hung and breeze-shaken sinner who is dancing on the sulphurous fumes of a four-letter word meaning Ottawa, Kan. But a human billy goat who will calmly walk off with the Bible for no nobler reason than to get aid in solving cross-word puzzles has a vacuum where his brains were, a garbage can where his heart was and is also a cross between a five-letter word meaning a civet cat and a frightening word meaning a number of things."

GASOLINE TAX WAS FAVORED BY CLUB HERE

But Belleville People Want Reduction in License Fees

INTERESTING TALK

Motor League Official Says Motorists Pay Much for Roads

The Belleville Motor Club at a general meeting of members held at the Chamber of Commerce went on record as favoring a tax on gasoline for the province of Ontario but stipulated that it should be accompanied by a proportionate reduction in the license fees now paid by motorists.

Mr. G. A. Hodgson of Toronto, Director and past president of the Ontario Motor League, who was present, gave an illuminative address during which he showed that motor vehicle fees last year amounted to [illegible]56,000; and this year with the new scale of motor fees the income from this source would be, approximately, [illegible]00,000. As the expenditure to be made by the Provincial Government on roads of all classes this year was understood to be in the neighborhood of $10,000,000 the motorists' contribution would already therefore represent 55 percent. of the total cost of road construction and maintenance borne by the Province.

The Motor League estimated, he said that the two cent tax on gasoline would mean the payment of $2,000,000 more annually by motor vehicle owners. It had also been announced that the drivers were to be licensed this year. At $1.00 for each license, and estimating the number of persons requiring licenses at 500,000, we have another half-million to pay; a grand total [illegible] $8,000,000 to be assessed against motorists, or 80 percent of the Governments' probable expenditure on roads. This is surely an excessive percentage, claimed Mr. Hodgson.

The League contended that any tax on gasoline should be accompanied by a reduction in the Annual License Fee so that the average car owner would not be called upon to pay a greater total sum to the Government than at the present time. The tax on gasoline purchased by tourists who now contribute nothing to the Provincial exchequer would open to the Government an entirely new source of revenue, and, as a total of over three million cars entered this province from the United States last year, should yield a tidy sum.

An Investment

The revenue which the Ontario Government derives from motor license fees cannot in fairness be compared with the Government's total expenditure on roads for during recent years the Government has spent great sums of money on building road foundations and bridges which will be of service for a long period of years. The money spent in this way should be regarded by the Government as an investment for the benefit of the people of the Province.

A fair comparison however, might be made between the annual cost of road maintenance and the contribution toward that cost by automobile owners. This contribution is already more than double the annual cost of road maintenance borne by the Provincial Government. At the same time, it should be kept in mind that there are other road users besides motorists and that property owners and indeed the entire community reap the benefit of a well kept system of highways. The cost of building and maintaining the Provincial Highways should therefore be distributed in equitable relation to the benefits derived.

There is no feature of motor car operation to-day, continued Mr. Hodgson, about which the people are as much concerned as the accident situation. Accidents naturally have increased with the number of cars in operation, but fortunately not in proportion to that increase.

Safeguarding Public

The more important legislative measures in prospect related largely to the question of public safety—such measures as the licensing of all drivers; the compulsory stop at railway crossings; compulsory automobile insurance; lights on all vehicles, and many others of less striking character.

The Ontario Motor League for years has advocated legislation requiring all vehicles to carry lights at night. Failing to secure a provincial law, owing to strong opposition in the rural districts, the League secured the passing of a Bill giving power to cities to frame local by-laws requiring lights on all vehicles. The City of Toronto and a number of other municipalities have passed lighting by-laws under this authority. In Toronto the question was submitted to the electors three years ago and the majority in favor was so large (31,460 for—13,356 against, a majority of 17,893) that the City Council, despite the organized opposition of companies owning horse drawn vehicles, at once gave effect to the popular will. The opposition has since disappeared and the lighting law is now accepted as a reasonable precaution by all who use horse drawn vehicles at night.

A very important development occurred recently when Wardens of the Counties of Ontario, at a meeting in Toronto, passed a resolution recommending that all vehicles be required to carry lights at night when in use on the Provincial Highways. This resolution indicates a considerable change in sentiment in the rural districts and is to be taken as a hopeful indication that a Bill will be introduced by the Government at

Suggests Citizens Start Overhauling And Repairing Early to Provide Work

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held yesterday afternoon Mr. H. W. Greenleaf, Secretary of the Parks Board, who was present made an excellent suggestion. There is considerable unemployment in the city at the present time due to the season of the year and a consequent cessation of building and similar alterations and other improvements to their property and numbers of others had in mind the question of repairs and over-hauling of equipment of various kinds. Much of this work, Mr. Greenleaf believed, could be done quite as advantageously now as later on when everybody would be busy. If those who contemplated any work of this kind during the coming spring and summer would set about it now he believed that practically all of those who were now out of employment could be provided for and the general situation greatly relieved.

Splendid Party By Eastern Star

Largest Crowd Organization Ever Had in Oddfellow's Hall

The largest crowd that ever attended a function staged by the Order of the Eastern Star, congregated in Oddfellows' Hall here last night, the occasion of the visit of Mrs. Lulu B. Wood, Worthy Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of Ontario, O.E.S., of Hamilton. There were about three hundred people present, for the inspection before the official visitor. After the order of business, a dainty buffet luncheon was served in the banquet hall.

After the luncheon, unique favours were issued to the guests, consisting of fancy hats and "noise makers." Dancing was then enjoyed to excellent music supplied by the Black and White Orchestra. Dancing was concluded at one o'clock, the feature of which was a balloon dance—a veritable riot of fun.

The tables were prettily decorated in yellow and white and the hall was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting.

Visitors were present from Kingston Trenton, Wellington, Colborne and Ameliasburg.

Mrs. Norman Kerr, Worthy Matron, deserves much credit for the success of the function, as well as Donald Bleecker, chairman of the social committee.

Skip Wm. Harden And Company Win

Two Rinks Tied For Second Place in Belleville Bonspiel

Skip William Harden and his good rink of curlers won the point competition laurels in the two day bonspiel, which concluded at the curling rink here last night, after having been given a very close run for the honors. Skip Harden secured a grand total of 18 points over all in the four games which he like each of the other eight rinks in the competition were required to play.

The fact that two rinks tied for second place shows the keen nature of the 'spiel, and the fact that each of the runners-up totalled 17 points in their four games, giving the verdict to Harden by one shot, also shows the class of the curling.

Skips Dr. M. J. Clarke and Charles J. Symons were the tie rinks for runners-up honors. Skips of the other five rinks in the bonspiel which were out of the prize running in order of their scores were Skip Dr. M. A. Day, 13; J. A. Kerr and A. R. Symons, each 12; Captain Bottum, 11; and A. P. Allen, 10.

Skip Harden's winning aggregate was made up of 5 5 5 3—18.

Skip Symons' winning aggregate was made up of 5 3 4 5—17.

Skip Dr. Clarke's aggregate was made up of 5 3 4 5—17.

Despite the mild weather, the ice at the rink was the best which was ever used in any curling bonspiel in the city, a fact which is not so unusual when skilful ice makers and a tight rink exist. The 'spiel was one of the most successful ever held, the exhibitions of curling ability and the close nature of the contest causing it to be an epochal event. It was one grand success.

There is an interesting menu for local curlers next week too. Cobourg and Picton rinks will be here some night next week to try their luck against the Quinteville "stane and besam" artists, and the Belleville Curling club members are invited to visit Detroit next Saturday as guests of the Detroit Curling club where a friendly competition is being held. It is expected that two or three rinks will leave Belleville on the International Limited next Friday for Detroit, where the games will be played on Saturday. They will arrive back in Belleville Sunday night March 1st Two rinks from Kingston two from Napanee and one or two from Cobourg will leave on the same train for Detroit so an interesting time is assured.

The prizes for winners and runners up in the competition which concluded last evening are to be presented at the annual banquet of the Belleville Curling Club which will be held in the spring-time.

Here are the names of the champion rink players and the two tie runners up.

Champions—Fred Liberty, J. A. Borbridge, W. N. Belair, William Harden Skip.

Runners-up—Dr. Rutherford, T. E. Ketcheson, R. J. Wray, Dr. M. J. Clarke (Skip).

W. E. Gartley, W. A. Elliott, T. J. Hurley, Charles J. Symons (Skip).

Mike Regan; Political Leader, Gives Real Nice Party; 11 Coats Await Their Owners

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 21.—Michael J. Regan, a Brooklyn political leader, gave a party to some 4,000 of his ward friends at Coney Island recently. It was a nice party until midnight. Then the guests decided it was time to go home. Each and every one of the four thousand thought he should be the first to get his hat and coat. The coat room was rushed and every one started to make his own selection. Result: A score of private fist fights over rival claims, leading to a general riot and a call for police reserves. Eleven of the guests went home coatless rather than face the battle, for there are still eleven coats at the Coney Island coat room awaiting claimants. They are by no means the best of the four thousand.

Butter and Eggs On the Decline

Former Sold at 48; Eggs Down to 35 Cents

A feature of the market this morning which was fairly well attended was the decline in the price of eggs and butter which were offered for sale in considerable quantities.

Fresh dairy butter sold at 35c. to 38c. per pound, and strictly fresh eggs sold at 45c. to 48c. per dozen. Shippers were offering but 42c. for basket lots.

Dressed Chickens while quite plentiful brought good prices, namely $1.50 to $2.00 a pair, according to size and quality. A few of an inferior quality sold at $1.25 a pair. A few ducks were sold at $1.40 and $1.50 each. Cream sold at 25 cents a quart. A considerable quantity of saurkraut was offered for sale selling at 10c. a quart or three quarts for 25c. cents.

Home made cooking was readily disposed as was also, was flowers. There were no changes to note in the prices of vegetable. Potatoes sold at 75c. per bag.

Considerable quantities of meat was cut up and many purchasers were about the stands. Beef sold from 12c. to 18c. per pound and pork from 15c. to 22c. per pound, according to cuts.

Beef by the quarter was sold at 9c. for hind quarters and 7c. for fore quarters. Dressed pork sold from $15.50 to $16 per hundred weight.

Threatening Life Of Labor Member

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 21—Threats to the effects that he will quietly disappear have been received by David Kirkwood, labor member of Parliament for Dunbarton since his heated attack in the House of Commons on the estimates for Prince of Wales tour of South Africa and South America.

Kirkwood has received over three hundred letters since he delivered his speech, some reminding him that "he had been previously warned and must mend his ways", others informing him that his way home from the houses of Parliament at nights is well-known and he is being watched. Some of the other laborites, who supported Kirkwood, also received similar threats.

U.S. PRESIDENT ASKS CITY FOR FORMAL LETTER

Is Pleased with Courtesy Extended to Him By Belleville

SIR THOMAS TOO

Famous Yacht Owner Gratified to Have Invitation for Visit

Mayor W. C. Mikel, has received two interesting replies to invitations which he has forwarded to dignitaries, asking them to attend the 110th Peace Anniversary between Canada and the United States and the Belleville Old Boys' Re-union, next August.

One letter is from Sir Thomas Lipton, Bart.; the other from the White House, and signed by E. T. Clark, acting secretary to the President.

The Lipton letter states:

Your very kind letter of the 17th ulto. is to hand and I feel very gratified to have your kind invitation to visit Belleville during the time of the Peace Celebration and the International Yacht Races.

I only wish it was possible to accept right off, but at this distance of time I cannot really say how I shall be situated in August. I shall be glad, however, to keep the matter in mind and will be pleased to advise you should I find it possible to be with you on that interesting occasion. In any case let me assure you that I appreciate more highly than I can express the kind thought which prompted you to extend to me the invitation.

Yours faithfully,
THOMAS LIPTON."

The letter from the White House follows:

White House,
Washington, Feb. 14, '925.

My Dear Mr. Mikel,

The generous invitation extended by yourself to the President has been received.

The President has greatly appreciated the courtesy and asks me to make his most gracious acknowledgment. He is much impressed with the significance of the anniversary which you are celebrating. If a formal invitation for the occasion should be sent to him later it will be possible for him to have a definite reply sent."

Yours sincerely
E. T. CLARK

Let there be harmony in things essential, liberty in things non-essential, Charity in all.

UP TO INDIVIDUAL

A suggestion was made at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce yesterday. It was a good suggestion. But like others of its kind, it may bear no fruit.

Only to the degree that the individuals apply such suggestions to themselves, are such suggestions profitable.

H. W. Greenleaf was the man who offered something for the public to think over. He felt that there was much repair work, alterations and overhauling to be done in Belleville and that a great deal of it could be started immediately. If this were done, practically all unemployed in the community could be given work, before the busy season comes around.

There is merit in this proposal. It is up to the individual to make it successful.

What is there that you can do now, instead of two months from now?

DISCOURAGING

One of the worst features of dabbling in counterfeit money, whether professionally "shoving the queer" or just passing it along when you find that you have been stung yourself, is that the bad money may turn up in the hands of a poor, horny-fisted son of toil, to whom it gives sad discouragement. An instance is related in a late Boston paper:

Street Fakir—What's the trouble, Bill?

Second ditto—Here I worked half a day paintin' up a sparrow into a red-headed Belgian canary, an' I'm blowed if the guy I sold it to didn't gimme a phony dollar bill."

EVILS OF INDUSTRIALISM

The front page writer of Toronto Saturday Night is responsible for the following observations relative to industrialism with which a great many will agree:

It seems the height of folly to suggest such a thing, but under existing conditions the fact cannot be denied that we have too many people in our industrial centres. Here we are, on the one hand, clamoring for population, and, on the other, we have not sufficient work for those we now have. Long ago I heard Sir Andrew McPhail state in a public address, that not so far back as human history goes has the world ever been six feet ahead of starvation. At the time I thought him unduly pessimistic. But I have changed my mind.

Industrialism has cast many favors at our fete. It has also caused untold misery. Big business has also caused the country boys to flock to the industrial centres, where when times boom they live like fighting cocks and when dull days come they walk the streets as they do now.

If you are of middle age, think back to your youth, particularly if you lived in a small community. Did you see much real poverty or distress? I think not. Of course there was always the village poor family, but somehow even it got along without difficulty. Broadly there was no real poverty, and there was little real wealth.

I look upon Prince Edward Island as, probably, the only spot on this continent where the conditions of the boyhood of now middle aged people still applies, and there is no poverty in Prince Edward Island. Nobody is really rich on "The Island" and no one is really poor, so far as I know. The people have stuck to the land. That seems to be the secret of it.

STABILIZING THE EMOTIONS

Seattle Post-Intelligencer:

Often when you pass a band playing a lively martial air, it gives you new energy, and you walk with a springier step. You stand straighter. Then, after having walked some distance away, out of hearing of the band, fatigue comes back with a rush. The effect has been only emotional, has given place to nothing, and has caused nothing palpable which lasted after it had passed. William James said that no resolution is valuable unless it contains something to do immediately. Emotional exaltation is of use to us only as it passes into conduct. When you read a book that inspires you to be a better person, you should make up our mind to start in at once on some actual failing. It is very easy to let our emotions pass away like summer clouds, and it is hard to get down to brass tacks long enough to select one specific step that we are going to take, and take it. A certain wise man once said: "Wisdom is knowing what to do; virtue is doing it."

City Hall Packed To See Valley Farm

All Those in Cast Took Part Extremely Well

The City Hall was packed and extra chairs had to be procured to accommodate the crowd which gathered to see the play "Valley Farm" as presented by the Christ church Dramatic Club last night.

All those in the cast took their parts extremely well. Mr. Walter Symons as Silas Holcomb, a farmer, was outstanding. He was made up well and acted his part to the life. Miss Edith Bone playing the part of Alvira Holcomb, sister to Silas, was good also, and Miss Dorothy Robinson, as usual, was splendid.

The part of Hetty Holcomb was well taken by Mrs. C. Bishop and the plot centres around her marriage to Harold Rutledge of New York, acted by Bert Wells. Mrs. Rutledge, Harold's mother which part Doris Pauley took is anxious to break up the marriage as she is ashamed of her son's country wife. She succeeds so well that Hetty returns to the country, but later she and her husband are re-united and the play has a happy culmination.

Many humorous situations are provided when Silas and Alvira come to visit Hetty in New York.

The others who helped to make the play successful were Miss Ada Edwards, Miss Hazel Barber, and Messrs. W. B. Humphreys, Frank Bowyer, A. Bryce Aylesworth and David Batchelor.

The directors of the play were Mrs. R. A. Backus and Mrs. C. Clarke; the stage manager was Mr. George E. Watkin and much credit is due to these people for the fine management of the play.

During intermissions Christ Church orchestra supplied pleasing music and Mr. Blain contributed a monologue which was well received.

Dutchy's Diary

Saving Time and Towns

I was very much interested in two articles this week, which I am passing on in the hope that they will interest you. The first was written by John Blake in the San Francisco Bulletin, who says:

Twenty or more years ago I rode from Portland to Ashland in the State of Oregon with a new superintendent who had been transferred to that particular railroad line.

He rode in a day coach and, as this was his first official trip, he was unknown to the train crew.

Whenever the train stopped he would get out and, standing on the platform, watch the conductor and engineer.

At the third stop, when considerable time was spent getting the engineer's pipe lighted, he stepped up to the conductor and said:

"Why don't you give the signal to go ahead?"

"What business is that of yours?" said the conductor.

"The train is ten minutes late already," returned the superintendent. "We lost one minute at the first station, two at the second, four at the third, and the rest at other stops. We are going to lose a couple of minutes here. We'll be 20 or 30 minutes late at the end of the division."

"You seem to be in a h—l of a hurry," said the conductor. "Who are you?"

"I am in a hurry and I'll tell you why on board," was the reply. "The engineer's pipe is getting started, so we can be going on."

On board the train the superintendent told the conductor quietly and without any ostentation who he was and why he was interested in getting trains through on time. "The road is getting a bad name," he explained. "We lose connections, and we lose money on account of it. Just a little briskness at every station will cut all that out. I wanted to find out why the trains were all late, and now I know. There won't be any more delay, will there?"

"Not if I can help it," said the conductor with a grin, which was born of the unexpected good nature of the "super."

After that trains ran on schedule on that line, unless there was an accident of some sort to cause delay.

All the unnecessary waste caused by a little idling here and there, a little too much conversation between trainmen and station men, was eliminated.

There was a difference in the dividends and a tremendous difference in the reputation of the road, merely because the superintendent, instead of sitting in his home office and issuing orders, had gone over the route, found out the trouble and showed the trainmen how easy it would be to avoid it.

"Making time" is an inaccurate expression, although it is used widely on American railroads.

Time cannot be "made," but it can be saved, which amounts to the same thing.

We all waste far too much of ours, and regret it later when we are rushed and hurried and have to half do our work in order to catch up.

But if we will go over our own lines and find out where the wasting is, they can be easily remedied, as were those on this railroad.

And extra time we gain can be put to good use, even if it goes to more careful doing of our work, which is the only way that it can be done as it ought to be done.

The other article appeared in the Stratford Beacon-Herald and the author's name is not given. It sounds like Robert Quillen and contains some real homely truths:

The small town has been the butt of the cheap humorist ever since the somewhat larger town came into existence.

A small town is any town smaller that the town in which the humorist resides. If he lives in a town of 1,000 a town of 500 is a joke. If he lives in a town of 5,000 any town of 1,000 is a joke and so on up.

City folk call small towns by witty names—tank towns, hick towns, in the sticks, towns on the bowl-and-pitch circuit.

Small towns do not have scandals, jazz orchestra, gun men, floating indebtedness or traffic problems.

A man can park his car in front of his place of business and leave it there for a week, if he so desires.

On a hot day he can take off his coat and walk down the main street without losing public esteem.

In a small town bluff doesn't get him anywhere. People like him for what he is, not what he pretends to be. He lives too close to his fellowman to be other than his real self.

In a small town there are neighbors who whirl in and help in sickness who like you just as well in your old clothes as in your new clothes, who put on no airs and make no pretensions.

In a city a young man may take his girl to the theatre then to a jazz palace and then via the taxicab back home all at a cost of $25.

In a small town a young man can take his girl to the movies, stop at the ice cream parlor, and be home and sitting in his girl's porch swing by 10.30 p.m., having spent seventy five cents and had all the fun the town afforded.

In a city a man spends at least one third of his time putting up a front in order to impress other people who are doing the same thing.

At 305 this morning an alarm of fire was sounded, and it was found that a blaze had started in a house occupied by Stephen Bolyea, stonecutter. The brigade subdued the flames before much damage had been done. The No. 1 Co. were at the scene of the fire in two minutes after the alarm was given.

While some children were sleighriding on the sidewalk along the Merchants Bank on Campbell street, a little girl named Thompson had her left leg severely injured by being run into by a sleigh. A deep gash was made which penetrated to the bone. A "Good Samaritan" heard the child's cries, got her home and procured a doctor.

Made Her Baby Plump and Well

Nothing makes a mother more grateful than a benefit conferred upon her child. Mothers everywhere who have used Baby's Own Tablets for their children speak in enthusiastic terms of them. For instance, Mrs. Zepherin Lavoie, Three River, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are a wonderful medicine for little ones. They never fail to regulate the baby's stomach and bowels, and make him plump and well. I always keep a box of the Tablets in the house and would advise all mothers to do likewise." Most of the ordinary ailments of childhood arise in the stomach and bowels, and can be quickly banished by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets relieves constipation and indigestion, break up colds and simple fevers, expel worms, allay teething pains and promote healthful sleep. They are guaranteed to be free from injurious drugs and are safe even for the youngest and most delicate child. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Frivolous Sal is Coming on Monay

Eugene O'Brien and Mae Busch Play Leading Roles

Some of the screen's most popular players are in the cast of J. K. McDonald's First National picture, "Frivolous Sal," which comes to the Griffin Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Eugene O'Brien, who has been Norma Talmadge's leading man for the past year, was borrowed for the principal male role. Mae Busch was borrowed from the Metro-Goldwyn company. She had to work Saturday night and all one Sunday so she could join the McDonald company that evening when they started on their four weeks' location trip to Mount Ranier, in Washington, and the Idaho mines.

Ben Alaxander is under contract to First National, so he was immediately available, but Mildred Harris had to decline several other offers for her part in "Frivolous Sal." Mitchell Lewis rushed back to Hollywood from Arizona, where he was working in "The Mine With the Iron Door," and barely made the train with the McDonald company. Tom Santschi also had to hurry through another engagement to enact the role for which he had been cast in the McDonald picture.

The First National producer was insistent on having these particular players, not only because of their popularity with theatregoers, but because each one was ideally suited to the role in which he was to appear. The story is laid in a pioneer mining town of the west some twenty years ago. A girl and a little boy help a man overcome inherent weaknesses in his character and work out his destiny.

The direction was by Victor Schertzinger, one of the most successful directors in pictures.

Talented Cast in "The Alaskan"

Well - Known Supporting Players in New Meighen Film at Belle

Through the unusual care exercised in the selection, the most talented cast which has ever supported Thomas Meighen, appears in his new Paramount starring vehicle, "The Alaskan" which Herbert Brenon produced from Willis Goldbeck's adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's great novel.

Featured in the cast are Estelle Taylor, John Sainpolis, Charles Ogle, Frank Compeau and Anna May Wong. Others include Alphonz Ethier, Maurice Cannon, Bernard Siegel, Milt Brown and Laska Winters.

The feminine portion of the cast, Estelle Taylor, Anna May Wong and Laska Winters, is particularly noteworthy inasmuch as they are considered three of the most unusual young women in motion pictures.

All three were born in America but their parentage links east and west in a bond which stretches from China to Spain. Miss Taylor is of Scotch descent; Miss Wong is Chinese; Miss Winters is Spanish and French.

In motion pictures the three young players have established themselves with a series of remarkable characterizations. Estelle Taylor's performance in Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments" gained for her wide spread approval. Anna May Wong's genius has found expression in the portrayal of Chinese and other Oriental roles. Laska Winters, once a dancer of national repute, has recently established herself as one of the most promising of the younger players on the screen.

"The Alaskan," declared by all who have been privileged to get a preview of it as the greatest picture in Meighan's notable screen career, comes to the Belle Theatre next Monday to remain for three days.

Col. W. N. Ponton Gave Stirring Talk

He Caused Brotherhood Thermometer to Rise to Top

"With his genial sunny personality and glowing eloquence, Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., caused the thermometer of brotherhood to rise to the very top," says the Bowmanville Statesman, dealing with the Colonel's excellent address, "Mixed Memories," which was delivered before the Men's Canadian Club at a banquet held recently in the Balmoral Hotel at Bowmanville. The Statesman gave two columns of space to the event, the greatest part of which dealt with the address of the evening by Col. Ponton.

In relating "Mixed Memories" of youth, young manhood, adult life, of vision, of hearing, of friendships, of travel, of peace and war, history and poetry, Col. Ponton held his hearers in deep and silent interest as they enjoyed his unique oratory which the Statesman described as being magic.

Col. Ponton, who through years of travel and associations knows most everyone, was well able to reminisce with interest as to his associations and college companionship with several of Bowmanville's leading citizens in past and present. Intensely interesting were his references to his trip last summer through the Motherland with 300 members of the Canadian Bar Association, when he was royally entertained in Scotland where he visited the British parliament in session towards the close of the Labor party regime and during which period sights in Paris and other interesting features crowded the trip with interest.

Particularly interesting were his stories of "bonnie" Scotland, the land of his ancestors, where he selected several interesting souvenirs which he passed about so that everyone might inspect them.

An enthusiastic vote of thanks was seconded and the welcome return visit of the Colonel to Bowmanville is eagerly anticipated.

Peterboro Girls "Rudely" Treated

Local Girls Defeat Guests in Bowling Competition

When the 5.20 o'clock morning C. N. R. train steamed out of the upper station this morning, it carried among the passengers the weary Peterboro lady bowlers who paid their annual return visit to Belleville Friday. They were "rudely" treated on the Y. M. C. A. alleys too, for the local girls defeated them.

When the party of twelve arrived on the three o'clock train Friday afternoon, they were met at the staton and taken to the Y. M. C. A. One game was then played in the afternoon, the others following in the evening.

At 6.30 o'clock some twenty-five local bowlers with their guests enjoyed a dinner at the New Queen's Hotel where a jolly sing song held sway, Ab Adams at the piano.

Following the evening games, the guests and locals were served a lunch in the Assembly Hall, of the Y. M. C. A. and later, on the gymnasium floor, interesting games, echoes of which resounded through out the silent dormitories, and fell upon deaf ears—mostly; were enjoyed.

A large gallery of bowlers and non-bowlers were attracted to the alleys last night to see the games, standing room being limited.

In the afternoon two ladies teams met two teams from Belleville and Belleville won both games. The first game in the afternoon was very evenly contested with Belleville up by 121 pins. In the evening the Belleville team stepped out and put in a win by 455 pins. Belleville Ladies played six players and subbed in both games. The party was lead by Mr. Mac Sloan, social Director of Peterboro Y. M. C. A. Scores follow:

Stratford Blanks Niagara Falls

Score Was 3 to 0; Brilliant Hockey Dished Up

Stratford Ont. Feb. 21.—Playing brilliant hockey and minus Graham their regular defence player Stratford Indians shut out Niagara Falls, 3 to 0, here last night in the first game of the play-off the "Big Six" group championships. Over 5,000 bowling fans saw the hard-fought contest packed with thrills. It was rough in spots, but on the whole was a snappy exhibition of the indoor sport. The Indians play the return game in Niagara Falls on Monday night. A crowd of 225 fans accompanied the visitors and about the same number will go to the Falls.

There were no stars on the night's play, all goals coming through team play. Frank Carson got two of Stratford's counters and Griffin one. Dolson played a marvelous game in goal. Hartington was the outstanding man for the visitors, with Kitchen being next best. It was particularly an endurance test with the best conditioned team coming through on top. Timely penalties in the first period gave Stratford a golden opportunity, which was seized, the goals being scored with the visitors a man short.

Dizzy is the best adjective to describe the pace at which the game started. Both teams were anxious and the first few minutes were hectic. However, the fans were not kept in suspense long as five minutes after the fray started F. Carson drew first blood on a beautiful pass from Brother Bill. Half a minute late Griffin scored against on a pass from Bill Carson. The visitors were a man short when the two goals were scored, as Kitchen was serving time for tripping Burke. Just after the goals were scored Bill Carson got a rest for bumping Harrington. There were no further scores in this period and although Dolson had more shots to handle than Mayo, they were from outside the defence. Gross and Burke played beautiful defence and not once did the visitors get past them to shoot. Stratford, on the other hand, broke through repeatedly and gave Mayo a busy time.

Scores on Rebound

The Indians had decidedly an edge on play in the second period, the boys from the big roar appearing to tire suddenly. With about five minutes gone, Frank Carson scored when he caught the rebound off Burke's shot after the latter had made a solo rush from end to end for a shot. Things began to get rough and Jerry Laflamme got a kink in his shoulder from warning the boys off. At that, there was much heavy body checking. Gene Fraser was singled out for much attention and was badly shakup on two occasions. Harrington was about the only effective man from the noisy water so far as offensive tactics were concerned. Kelterborn, of whom much was expected, failed to show any real stuff and finished the period in the penalty box for starting a fight with Frank Carson.

Both Teams Mix It

The final frame was rough, both teams mixing freely. Siebert spent the last five minutes in the box for holding Burke's stick and then talking back to the referee. Frank Carson scored in the last five minutes on an off-side pass, which the referee saw. Harrington worked hard and twice in the last period was right on top of Dolson, who played brilliant goal. Mayo was severely tested by Gross' long hand drives. In fact; the visitors owed to Mayo the fact that the score was not much larger, for he had a flock of them all close-in hot ones to save. Kitchen turned in a nice game, both offensively and defensively, but was not effective on the offensive. Teams:

Stratford—Goal, Dolson; defence, Gross and Burke; centre, W. Carson; wings, F. Carson and Griffin; subs, Cook and Cole.

Niagara Falls—Goal, Mayo; defence, Kitchen and Fraser; centre, Rice; wings Harrington and Kelterborn; subs, Siebert and Murray.

Referee—J. Laflamme.

Y.M.C.A. Basketball Team Are Winners

Went to Kingston and Defeated "Y" There 26-24

The Y. M. C. A. Intermediate Basket Ball team broke the Kingston "jonah" last night and came out on top of the heap in a game at the Kingston Y and at that they had to fight hard for at half time the home team were leading 13-11. It was not as good a game of basketball as the Queen's-Belleville game here on Wednesday. Neither team were playing to form and on the small floor was anyone's game until the last whistle. The locas were a shade better in the second period and managed to pull out two points to the good with 26-24 score and it looks like a real battle for the return game here next week.

Kingston 5-9's:—Brunke, 6; Smith, 9; Harper, H. Heugill, 1; Graves; Laerensen, 8; Total—24.

Belleville Y — Hurley; Doughty; Bryce, 13; Armstrong, 4, Maiden,; Rowell, 2; Weir, 6; Total—26.

Referee—Lawes.

Brampton Beat Kingston's Team

Have Two-Goal Lead to Take Away With Them

Brampton, Feb. 21—Brampton took the first game of the semi-finals with Kingston 3 to 1. The game was fast and well checked, but the soft ice interfered with the shooting. Reynolds and Smith were the stars of the Kingston outfit while Hillis, Zimmer and Machell, were the local bright lights. Worthy, Doddemeade and Burrell also put up some nice hockey but were not in on the scoring.

In the first period the play was speedy and the combination good with the honors about even. There was a lot of solo stuff, and the locals had a slight edge with team plays. Both sides put over some close attacks but Brampton did a lot more sniping than the visitors. The second stanza opened up slower and the visitors had the best of the play at first. After the homesters really got their feet under them, the Kingston goal tender had a lot to do, and did it well. In the last period after a minute of even play, Hillis opened the scoring, but Kingston evened the count on a goal by Smith, which was largely due to the absence of the Brampton defence from their proper station.

Brampton then took up the offensive and camped in front of the Kingston net and showered Rogers with shots, most of which failed to leave the ice; Machell, however, bulged the twine. Zimmer increased the lead, carying the puck through the opposing defense and poking it around Rogers, who rushed out to save.

Smith, on an attack, got around the rest of the Brampton defence, and might have scored, but was charged by Burrell. Smith was knocked out and Burrell was given a penalty. The others getting penalties were Smith 2, Doddemeade, Watts. Both goalies did good work, Rogers having a slight edge on Core, who got far less shots. The line-ups:

Kingston— Goal, Rogers; defence, Reynolds and Rooney; centre, Watts; wings, Smith and Hargraft; subs., Lawlor and Johnston.

Brampton— Goal, Core; defence, Zimmer and Burrell; centre, Hillis; wings, Doddemeade and Machell; subs., Algie and Worthy.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto.

NEW HAMBURG IS BEATEN BY GRIMSBY

Grimsby, Feb. 21.—The New Hamburg intermediates sustained their first defeat of the season here last evening when they were conquered by the local Peach Kings in the first game of the home-and-home series in the fourth round of the intermediate O.H.A. by 2 goals to 0. The game, while not as fast as some of the previous ones this season, was a good one, considering the heavy and sticky ice, which slowed up the pace somewhat. Both teams checked closely all evening and there was little to choose between the two teams.

Carson opened the scoring four minutes after the first period commenced when he beat Oliver after rushing the length of the ice. The visitors were weakened soon after this when Lederman was forced to retire from the game with a severe gash on the ankle. Eight minutes after the second period got under way Horne slipped a pass over to Reid, and the latter scored the second and final goal of the game. While the third period was scoreless, it produced the best hockey of the night and both teams travelled at a fast clip.

The teams:

Grimsby—Fisher, goal; McVicar and Carson, defence; Reid, centre; Horn and Clark, wings; Hayhoe and Burnside, subs.

New Hamburg—Oliver, goal; Lederman and Trushinski, defence; Roth, centre; Bowman and Kalbfleisch, wings; W. Roth and Hamel, subs.

Referee—Harold Mitchell, Toronto.

IS YOUR SHADOW IN THE WAY?

A HOME half lighted is like a home half warm—poor economy at the high cost of comfort. Particularly when light costs so little.

Shadows, for example, are needless annoyances. White or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps, in portable floor or table lamps, overcome this condition, and greatly increase the cheerfulness of your rooms.

To obtain the best results, choose lamps with wide shades that throw the light upward as well as downward. In ceiling fixtures of pendent or shower type, put 50-watt white or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps, or 75-watt lamps if the fixture is a translucent bowl.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartons. There you can obtain real information about good lighting.

Attorney General Tells of O.T.A. Plan

Prison Without Option of Fine; Close Up Offending Places

Toronto, Feb. 21.—Analysis of the speech delivered in the Legislature last Tuesday by Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General, discloses a long list of pronouncements, any one of which would have earned front-page prominence in the press. Mr. Nickle, although chief interest centered about his treatment of the proposed O.T.A. amendments, which are not yet before the House, dealt with a number of important matters, including hydro and unemployment aid. He spoke for three hours and a half, to a full Chamber and crowded galleries, and the daily press at best could only reproduce the high spots, and not all of those.

Well-known as a temperance man, personally, the Minister's presentation of the Government's proposals will, no doubt, go far in carrying conviction as to the Government's honesty of purpose in the minds of those who have refrained from hasty criticism, pending a knowledge of the full details of its proposals. Some of his points are given in condensed form below:

The people of Ontario, if one may judge from the increasing volume of liquor sales at dispensaries, are in danger of becoming a hard liquor drinking people, through the avenues of doctors' prescriptions, the bootlegger, strong native wine sold legally, and illicit distilling.

The proposed beer of 4.4% absolute alcoholic content is not intoxicating, according to the highest scientific authorities. These authorities Mr. Nickle quoted from for nearly an hour. The effect of so much of the beer as a person can consume in an hour is about the same amount of "unsteadiness" as induced by the caffeine contained in two cups of coffee.

It has become absolutely imperative to afford some redress or relaxation from existing conditions, or the Temperance Act is doomed.

It is virtually impossible to enforce the Act at present in certain places, because of the atmosphere of adverse public opinion, and it is necessary to restore respect for law in Ontario.

The Government's proposals are in the interests of practical instead of a theoretical temperance. The principle of the Act has not been interfered with.

If all the scientists prove to be wrong, and the new beverage produces intoxication, vendors will be prosecuted, because the Act is not being altered to permit sale of intoxicating liquor in the province.

Must Be Practical

"If I had the power," said Mr. Nickle "some God-given gift, so that by some piece of legislation I could sweep away all the evils of intemperance, I would do so. But the functions of a public man must be those of a practical idealist. We do not live in such a world of romance. If conditions remain as they do today, if some case is not given to the O.T.A. the act will be driven to extinction because I believe men are forced into being whiskey drinkers because they can't get a lighter drink. We have tried to find what could be done to provide a palatable beverage, without producing intoxication and the experiments of science proved it could be done. I have been most impressed by a petition of workmen to this Government calling for such a beverage and I know that France by the use of light wines and beer has produced a temperate nation.

"The liquor problem must be fearlessly faced. It is not suggested that this Bill will be the last word in temperance legislation. As a temperance man I look forward to the day when temperance will be more respected than today and when a theory will not be mistaken for a fact. We will not alter the law respecting intoxicating liquor, but will change only the legal definition of what that is. We have been guided by the light of science and if science fails there will still be prosecutions if the new beer intoxicates. That is why we have not said that beer up to a certain strength may be sold. We are standing by the principle of the O.T.A.

"The problem is complex, but I have faith in the people of Ontario." (Prolonged applause).

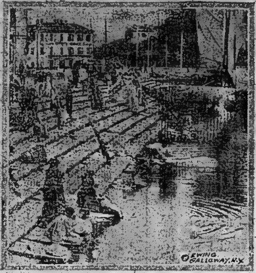
In his closing remarks, Hon. Mr. Nickle gave what will probably be found to be a fairly good outline of some features of the bill. The daily press has largely overlooked the significance of this passage. The Attorney-General said:

"The weakling, either the chronic drunkard or the dipsomaniac, must be treated as a sick man, cared for and cured and taught that he must work to maintain his family. Those who will not respect the spirit of the legislation, but traffic in strong waters to the disadvantage of their fellow citizens must be taught respect for the law by imprisonment without the option of a fine and if conducting a place of public resort the offending place must be placarded and closed. Brewers must take precautions that their goods are well marked and if infraction takes place the right of selling should cease. Youth, in the period of development must be protected from the possibility of impairment until physical maturity has been attained and judgment established.

"Education as to the dangers and effect of undue indulgence must be resumed and efforts must be put forward to make all understand the possibilities of indulgence that may become habitual. More must be heard of the persuasion of religion and less of the coercion of the law. Moral suasion must again be emphasized and the individual made to feel that he has a duty to himself to overcome temptation and to his fellows to protect them from possible evil.

"Those responsible for securing respect for the law, as well as those interested in our traditions and institutions must bring their influence to bear again to establish the respect for the pronouncement of legislation as expressed through our statutes, must frown down evasions, perjury and fabrication of evidence that at times frees the guilty to the scandal of the body politic."

"Elbow Grease" Squandered By Thrifty Breton Washerwomen



© EWING GALLOWAY, N.Y.

ON the lower steps of civilization, are these simple Breton peasant women, who still wash their clothes in the flowing stream, just as their ancestors did when the old chateau was built. The goods are first soaked, rubbed with soap, and are then pounded with the fist or a paddle. After this, they are squeezed in and out of the water several times and then rinsed by floating the goods on the water. By this method, a woman can wash perhaps fifty pieces a day, an infinitesimal amount compared to the number of pieces turned out by the modern American laundry.

Nor do these thrifty peasant women stop to think of the cost of this laundering as shown in their bent backs, their gnarled and roughened hands, their early wrinkles. In America, where the women keep younger by managing their duties more efficiently, the modern housewife considers carefully the soap she uses in laundering, in regard to its effect on her soft, smooth hands, as well as its cleansing power. Only the pure, white Ivory soap which is best for the skin, is used for the fabrics she cares for.

Housewives who are readers of this newspaper may obtain free a helpful 80 page book, "Approved Methods of Home Laundering," by Mary Beals Vail, B. S. Write for it to [illegible] Service, 80 East [illegible] York City.

on a Saturday or a holiday, so as not to interfere with a teaching day.

Mr. McLaurin said that it would be impossible to hold it on a Saturday as possibly 50 percent. of the boy students worked on that day. After some discussion the matter was referred to the school management committee to report upon. Board adjourned.

this year's session of the Legislature.

Drivers' License

Announcement has been made by the Minister of Highways, the speaker said, that a Bill will be introduced at this year's session of the Legislature providing for the licensing of all drivers of motor vehicles. Motorists with driving experience are not to be required to take any examination other than to satisfy the Department that they have had a good record in the past. Later on, all applicants for licenses may be given a driver's test as well as an oral or written examination on motor vehicle regulations. The licensing of drivers was instituted last year in New York State on much the same plan. The fee for a driver's license, of course, will be a nominal one, and while too much is not to be expected in the way of the reduction of accidents through the licensing plan it should prove helpful in removing from the Highways the flagrantly reckless and habitually careless drivers, through the cancellation of their license to drive.

An active campaign is being carried on by the Railways in the United States and Canada to secure legislation requiring motor cars to be brought to a standstill before crossing any radial or railway tracks. If a law of this kind were to be passed, its effect would be to entirely deprive a motorist of any legal claim for damages in the event of an accident at a railway crossing, unless it could be established beyond doubt that the motor car had first been brought to a stop before being driven on the crossing. Four States of the United States—Arkansas, North Carolina, Virginia and New Jersey, have put into effect laws requiring motor cars to be brought to a stop before going over a railway crossing. So far as the League has been able to obtain unbiased reports the law does not seem to have made any material difference in the grade crossing problem in the United States. The one outstanding feature has been the tremendous increase in fines levied upon Motorists in Virginia when charged with non-compliance with this particular law.

Many Death Traps

The importance of the grade crossing situation is not to be minimized he said. There are thousands of death traps throughout the country as railway highway crossings where the danger could be largely removed merely by the cutting away of trees bushes and embankment. This work is now being carried on in a limited way by the railways under the direction of the Board of Railway Commissioners. The Ontario Motor League has urged that a complete survey be made of all level Railway Highway Crossings, with a view to determining what improvements could be made, and that this survey be followed up by a wholesale clearance of obstructions.

The Ontario Motor League has asked the Board of Railway Commissioners to order the placing of Railway Crossing danger signs at a distance of 300 feet from the crossing. The Board have advised that they have not at present the authority to make such an order, but have shown sympathy with the proposal by suggesting that the League request the Minister of Railways to bring in an amendment to the Railway Act, which would provide authority for the placing of danger signs at points 300 feet from the Railway Crossings. This request has been made by the League.

It is not an uncommon experience for persons suffering injury or loss through the negligence of operators of motor vehicles to be unable to recover damages because of the financial inability of the operators or owners of the vehicles to satisfy court judgments. Losses of this kind have given rise to a considerable demand in the United States, and more recently in Canada that the owner of every motor vehicle should be required by law to carry insurance against public liability and property damage.

In the ensemble costume what is food for the goose is also food for the gosling when it comes to a coat and its allied frock

If a coat with a frock and hat planned to be worn with it, is smart for you, the same thing smaller, but not the less smart, is excellent for your ten-year-old daughter. Paris uses dark-blue cashmere for the coat and lower part of the frock, and yellow, scarlet, jade or brick silk crêpe for the coat lining and the body of the dress. The stitching on the coat matches the lining and the hat may be dark blue like the coat or of felt in the brighter color of the lining. Almond green or terra cotta with beige, brown with tan, dark blue with gray blue are also smart for the junior ensemble.

New Gypsy King Warns Followers

They Must No Longer Have Their Palms Crossed

New York, Feb. 21.—King Frank, newly-crowned monarch of the gypsies in the U. S. has announced as the key note of his policy the decree that his subjects must stop fortune telling. He also advocates that his people settle, vote, and send their children to school.

Thus the king, whose title and jurisdiction are based on customs and laws extending back to the Middle Ages, advocates the abolishment of customs that the gypsies have followed for centuries. The king himself is quite a modern person who wears long trousers and no crown, and is known in private life as Frank Mitchell. His symbols of sovereignty are a ball and sceptre and a gold-plated round hat. He lives in a teeming Manhattan street.

The keynote of the ruler's policy—the dictum against fortune telling—is classed under the head of foreign policy, because it is here that King Frank's subjects have their great difficulties with the constituents of Uncle Sam.

"Fortune-telling for fees must stop," said King Frank, his eyes flashing resolutely. "It must stop entirely. It has practically stopped already.

"Another thing I want to do is to Americanize my people. They wander too much. They should settle, vote, and send their children to school. They are fine mechanics. When they wander they are accused of everything. It is all false. But they will have a bad name as long as they wander."

SULPHUR SAFE TO HEAL SKIN

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Help For Tired Nervous People

Found in the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Are you pale and weak, tired most of the time, out of breath on slight exertion?

Are you nervous, is your sleep, disturbed so that rest does not refresh you?

Is your appetite poor, your digestion weak and do you have pains after eating?

If you have any of these symptoms you need the help of such a reliable tonic as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Read what Mr. W. W. Francis, of Calgary, Alta., says of this tonic. "After returning from overseas," writes Mr. Francis, "my whole system was in a badly run down condition. I became nervous, irritable, pale and lost weight. Of course I was given treatment and recommended many tonics, some of which I took, but with no apparent result. At last I could not even sleep. My sister, who is in England, wrote and urged me to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I can scarcely say how glad I am that I took her advice. My friends were surprised at my complete recovery, but I assured them it was due entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I now always keep a box on hand in case of emergency."

If you are ailing give these pills a fair trial and they will not disappoint you. Sold by all dealers in medicine or sent by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NAMES

YOU meet Mr. Howard and Mr. Walters in a gathering. Their names are to you but two of many you hear.

A few days later you meet Mr. Howard again. And again. He becomes a friend, perhaps an intimate in your social as well as business life.

Mr. Howard's name grows to mean a lot to you. Mr. Walters is rarely seen again and soon forgotten.

In this newspaper are other names—names of advertised products. Day after day you see them. They are like old friends—to be trusted. Their names mean economy, full value and integrity.

The unadvertised products—perhaps you see one in a store—or in a friend's home. Soon the name is forgotten—a stranger about whom you know little.

Fill your medicine closet, your pantry, your wardrobe with products whose names are guarantees of their integrity—advertised products. Like intimate friends—you know what they are and will do.

And who gave thee that jolly re nose?
Cinnamon and Ginger Nutmegs and cloves—
And that gave me my jolly red nose.

What Little Girls Are Made Of

"What are little girls made of?
What are little girls made of?
Sugar, and spice, and all that's nice—
That's what little girls are made of.

"What are little boys made of?
What are little boys made of?
Snips and snails and puppy-dogs' tails—
That's what little boys are made of.

The Problem Solved

Two Scots were staying in a London hotel for the first time in their lives. When they had been shown to their bed room one of the visitors discovered that there was no soap in his dish, so he rang the bell and a chambermaid quickly appeared, "Ye micht bring up a wee bittie o' saip," requested the Scot. The girl looked at the guest in open-mouthed bewilderment, unable to understand a word he said. "Hang it, lassie," thundered the irritated gentleman from the North, "can ye no' understand plain Scotch?" The maid gave a sigh of relief and departed, to return in a few moments with a bottle and two glasses.

California As I See It.

(By Wallace Havelock Robb)

As I sit here writing, in Long Beach, California, in January, it happens to be a very dull day. A thing not rare but yet, not very common. If I were home in the east, I might be working to the tune of crackling wood on the open fire but, out here, there are no trees to speak of, so I cannot burn wood. However, the secret of the popularity of incense burning is out, for I start my incense pot and sniff perfumed imitations of the friendly log I wish I could sit beside.

This reminds me: One may see the magnificent trees we know in California, by making a business of seeing them One may go and see nice forests of big pines of the ordinary sort, by going up into the mountains but up there, not so very far from here, are snow and ice and such like, things the folks do not talk about much around here.

Outside of a few pepper and other odd and local trees, there are no trees. In fact there is nothing that we know of as wild plant life at home. The place is a desert that has been and is being forced to produce and water is the key.

Everyone living out here is in the business of growing stuff out of the desert, with the help of water, whether he likes to admit it or not. Only water that is obtained with much money and time and labor, makes it possible to carry on at all.

It is reality, a garden of gardens. And it is very beautiful, no matter which way you look at it, when you are looking where man and his sprinkling can are at work one does not always rivet his eyes on little man made spots and the unhappy result of looking away into the open is to see vast stretches of nothingness or that which is akin to it.

Now comes a man at the door, a college graduate from the east. He is the milk man. He is going home when he gets money enough. Milk peddling is all he can get. It is a wonderful thing to come out here in the middle of February, spend whatever is necessary to make one feel a happy fellow, look at the place through rosy glasses and go and put on swank about it. It is better to be old and not very well off and come out here and take a long time dying and enjoy the process. It is a good place for those who just have a little and can get by on it and for cripples and delicate folks. All that is different than a man trying to improve his station in life by moving out here in search of happiness. There are families I know of in Long Beach, who had steak for Christmas as a great treat. There are no jobs. The folks who have a little to get by on, come out here to live a quiet life and enjoy the mild climate. I think they are very wise and I think they are very business like, for they take all the easy jobs, at half the regular wages and manage to live well but the poor bird who has no nest egg is in no such position. He cannot enjoy sunshine on an empty stomach. Of course the sunshine is lovely. It is cold here at night, one must have a coat in the offing all the while, but it is certainly nice during the day.

There is a fly in the winter ointment also in the protection the citrous fruit growers must give their orchard. When a drop in temperature is coming, which is not infrequent in winter, out come the soot pots. Every tree has a soot pot or smudge maker They burn crude oil and make clouds of soot to blanket the earth and hold the heat. There have been no smudges for several days but I can see the black clouds in the valleys, even from Long Beach, 35 miles away. This is not so nice, as they say and it is not mentioned in dispatches but it is on one's nose and in one's nose too, on curtains, on collars and coughed up frequently, good and black. This is not done except in winter, therefore not long in the air, but it causes wrecks and makes a mess of things in general

Oranges and grapefruit are not cheap in winter and are scarce. Sixty cents a dozen for oranges even now, is about right for the best ones. All the surf bathing that takes place in winner even down to the extreme south, does not amount to much.

The roads though, would make any eastern man sit up. I have made several trips to LaJolla, a matter of one hundred and five miles, in just three hours and five minutes. About three small towns to go through. One must have exceptionally fine roads for such running, as an ordinary happening. These are such roads. They are made by ideas-born in open spaces and the best road I was ever on in New York State, is second to these.

Oil wells make wealth and they make bad smells. Face one way and see vegetation and hills. Face the other way and set a forest of derricks They are not beautiful. The air in So. California is charged all the while with gasses and in certain quarters such as the storage tank sections, the thing is very unpleasant.

These storage places are not a few small tanks, they are hundreds of acres of giant reservoirs of oil and gasoline.

Fire therefore is taboo. About once a day at least, there is a fire scare, and believe me they pay attention to fire calls. For that reason, one runs the risk of jail if open fires are started in the street. Smelling oil and gas all days is only nice when the smell of cash in hand from it is stronger.

Real estate here is on a different basis than anywhere I know of except in big cities. There is so little land between the sea and the hills, that time is going to make it worth much. There will be millions out here in a few years. Millions coming because they want climate at any price, coming because they don't know enough to stay at home or coming because they are unhappy elsewhere but come they will where they are to be put is a question. In the meantime real estate booms in this spot and slows up in that, but the total is boom and it is all on the outcoming people and every man who stays here, knows he must boost for his own sake, so he shuts his eyes boosts and lives or looks into the face of the sun until he cannot see at all. Those who come with money and hang onto it are wise; those who have no money and come anyway, are a silly set of fools, unless some reason of health is the point

Many a young lad leaves his home thinking the big world is a grand place but many and many a lad has learned that there is happiness and beauty at home that the world knows not of and the making of a living is honest toil but toil nevertheless. in either place.

"Every valley shall be exalted." And each one has its boosters, its different climate, its this or that and all have glorious sunshine and if any one is tempted to say I am unfair, all I can answer is this: Why should I write and say what is already written and broadcast? We may read of the advantages of So. Cal. that, I do not deny and I have great pleasure in directing your thoughts to that sort of literature. It is nearly all true But here are just a few little things to think over. One does not teeter-totter well if all the weight is one way.

To hose who like sea foods the east is the place to stay. This item on the Pacific is limited by comparisons.

Last but not least there is booze. The papers all say it is dry and the surface really looks it, except for a few drunks. I asked a cop where they got it and he just laughed and said I should know better than ask a strange policeman, wait a while and I would learn through channels that could trust me. I did not seek and do not use such channels but have found them working overtime, so that I think they were punning with their dryness.

WOMEN AND THEIR DOGS.

"It is very easy to see why women love their dogs so devotedly," says Miss Mary Ansell in "Dogs and Men."

"From nobody else do we get such flattering attentions. A man takes you as a matter of course. You are there just as his dinner is. Unless you do something extremely odd, you cease to surprise him. But every time your dog looks at you, it is as though it were for the first time. 'What an amazing person you are,' he exclaims. . . . There was a time when old maids and their dogs provided the comic papers with most of their humor. The war has changed all that. The woman bachelor can never be accused of anything so frivolous as a fancy for pets. She is much too busy with other things.

"But if the unmarried have forsworn them, the married woman has feverishly adopted them. She has found out, not only the pleasure, but the advantage gained by having a dog about the house. I go so far as to assert that no married woman should be without one. And every husband—that is, if he values his future comfort and repose—should see to it that a dog forms part of the equipment of the house to which he purposes to bring his bride.

"For a dog makes a most admirable accompaniment to a husband. He supplies those darling little awys, so dear to a woman's heart, and so necessary to her well-being, that come tripping along so gracefully before marriage, but by the end of the first year have tripped away—less gracefuly—into oblivion."

CHAPTER IV.

The marquis remained for some minutes in the attitude in which Elaine had seen him, then, without a glance even up the hill, walked slowly toward the house.

The grounds were of extreme beauty and as carefully kept up as if their lordly owner spent most of his time at the Castle instead of a few days now and again. The grass of the lawns was like velvet; there was not a weed on the smooth gravel paths. Here and there, as he neared the house, a statue of snowy marble gleamed whitely in the twilight, made dusky by the trees. At the further end of the grounds there opened out a wide expanse of park, dotted here and there by noble trees, under which the deer flitted like shadows.

Presently he passed round one of the bends in the winding path, and came in sight of the house, looming ghostlike against the background of elms and firs. As he did so, the slight figure of a woman came down the path toward him. He did not see her, for he was walking along slowly and thoughtfully, his eyes bent on the ground, but she saw him, and quick as thought slipped aside into the shadows of the bushes.

She had a dark silk shawl thrown over her head, which, as the night was warm, must have been more for concealment than warmth, and from under the dark folds her face shone almost white. Her hair was red, and her eyes, as they watched the approaching marquis with feline keenness, took to themselves a greenish hue.

It was the young lady whom Bridget had declared she could not abear. Miss Inchley, the housekeeper's niece.

The marquis passed her unsuspectingly, and avoiding the front of the house—along which stretched a wide white terrace, broken in the centre by the steps leading to the front hall—made his way to a small tower at the side. He stopped at a door wreathed in ivy, and, taking a key from his pocket, unlocked it. If he had reached the door a minute or two earlier he would have met Miss Inchley emerging from it, notwithstanding that this entrance was supposed to be reserved exclusively for the marquis, who imagined that he alone held the key.

The base of the tower was not of great extent, and was unlighted; but the marquis was too familiar with the place to need a light, and ascending a short flight of steps, passed into a semi-circular hall. It was not quite dark here, for a glimmer of light issued from an opening at the end at which was the great central hall; and the marquis was proceeding thither, when suddenly a soft breath of music came floating downwards and filled the silence with a weird yet soothing harmony.

He stopped and listened with downcast head for a minute, then turned to a rather narrow stairway—it was the private approach to the picture gallery at the end of which were placed his own apartments—and went up it quietly.

As he did so the music sounded nearer. It proceeded from an organ under a large oriel window, the thick pile of the carpet which covered the floor of the gallery deadened the marquis' footsteps and he went up to the organ, and stood leaning against it and looking down at the player.

He was a young man, with a thin, emaciated face, which, like his body, seemed worn by pain and suffering; but, pale and wan as it was, the face was beautiful in its expression of peaceful calm, as if Patience had set her seal upon his brow, and smoothed with pitying hand, the tender, quivering lips. The hair, black as night, fell back from the white forehead in thick long curls that swept the thin cheeks, and increased the pallor of the face.

He made no sign of consciousness as the marquis approached, and the soft grey eyes which had been fixed upon the window did not turn or waver. He had not heard the marquis, and he had not seen him, for he was blind.

JUST IN PASSING

Cheer up, then, soul of mine! Be not downcast,
The troubles, worries—all will soon be past.
Forget the things behind,
Press on. The world is blind,
Failure is oft-times kind,
Who loses life will find
Gain at last.

TRIBUTE TO A MOTHER

Of a mother, a simple but charming woman who died and left several small children, a friend wrote this touching tribute:

"I never knew a braver woman. To face life's little things dauntlessly, to finish the day's job in spite of weariness, to answer illness with a jest and to fight back pain for the sake of husband and children is the highest form of courage. In certain moods common everyday work seems rather useless, but after all it is the pushing and pulling of simple men and women that make civilization."

MRS. ASQUITH ON SUCCESS

"Success affects men and women very differently" says Mrs. Asquith.

"I have known a few who were improved by it; some made by it, but most get their heads turned, and are ruined by it. I would much like to have experienced it—even for a short time—to know how it would have affected me; but I can affirm with truth that I have never been jealous of it. On the contrary, I think life would be a drab place if we all walked the same pace, and I follow with joy every good thing that turns up for my friends.

"Most of us want to arrive somewhere before we die if we have any vitality; and difficulty that presents itself is the goal and the route. To be cock of a small walk is not an object to aim at, and has transformed many otherwise lovable men and women into standard bores. Subscriptions raised for full-length portraits of fifth-rate people should be stopped by law; and those who are satisfied by being bosses at gatherings given to inferior men, or stringing platitudes upon patriotism in after dinner speeches may earn our surprise but do not add to our amusement. Vanity and conceit are very different qualities.

"An American journalist asked me if I thought his people thought more of themselves than the British did. I said it was a nice point, and added, 'You do not think more of yourselves than we do, but you think more about yourselves. We live in an older and more interesting country than you do, but you won't hear an Englishman ask any foreigner what he thinks of England; nor, I am afraid—if an opinion either praising or adverse were volunteered—would he care a rap for the reply.

"As a nation we are not touchy or vain, but we are conceited. Vanity undermines self-confidence, conceit stimulates it, and if success is the object aimed at, I do not know a defect more likely to ensure failure than vanity. If you refute this by citing the famous men who have been vain, you will find that their vanity did not cover the ground; it was redeemed by qualities of heart, head, or judgment, rare even in the humble."

ABOUT PLAYING-CARDS

Playing-cards appeared in Europe about the middle of the 14th century, having, it is believed, been introduced by the Arabs, Moors or Saracens. The date of their invention is unknown. The earliest mention of them is in 1393, where an entry was made in the treasury books of France regarding the purchase of cards for the amusement of the King, Charles VI., who had lost his reason. During the 15th century the use of cards spread all over Europe.

Cards have been an indispensable stock-in-trade of the dramatist from the days of Shakespeare to the present time. "Have I not the best cards for the game?" Shakespeare asks in "King John"; he also mentions one in the "Taming of the Shrew" as "by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker."

Moliere, the greatest of French comic dramatists, who, from being a poor strolling player became a leading dramatic author of his time, paints a portrait in detail of the terrible fellow who will play over his game of piquet verbally, and places him in his gallery of immortal bores.

Mrs. Sarah Battle's "Opinions on Whist" are expressed in Lamb's essay. "A clear fire, a clean hearth, and the rigour of the game" were the essentials. Cribbage she voted "vulgar," shunning advantage gained "by the disgraceful tenure of declaring 'two for his heels.'"

Readers of Dickens will remember the rubbers of Mr. Pickwick at Bath and Mr. Chitling in the thieves' kitchen watched by Oliver Twist. Thackeray was never weary of dealing with card-sharpers of a certain class. Both in "Esmond" and in "The Virginians" Thackeray gives brilliant sketches of the crowded card-tables of our ancestors—showing the long hours they spent at them.

Lord Russell of Killowen is said to be one of the finest card experts the legal world has ever known. It is recorded that he was a terror at the card table and furious with a partner who looked much at the cards in his hand during a rubber of whist. "Look at the table," he would growl, "the game is there."

Another expert was Lord Chief Justice Jervis, who once heard a card-sharping case in which the Crown advocate said that the cards themselves were not in question as they had been examined and were found innocuous. Whereupon the judge took the pack, examined the backs of the cards closely, and then proceeded to name the cards without looking at their faces.

"Oh, Lord," murmured one of the onlookers, "how would you like to play blind hookey with the old man?"

At the annual banquet of the Company of Makers of Playing Cards, each of the guests, in accordance with time-honoured tradition, is presented with a pack of cards of original design. The die is destroyed after the edition is printed, and consequently the packs are keenly sought after by collectors. Complete sets command a high price, and only on rare occasions find their way into the market. The company by the way, has a wonderfully comprehensive collection of cards of all periods on exhibition at their headquarters.

One of the most celebrated whist players in this country recently remarked that he is often asked what the figures on playing cards indicate, or how figures came to be first used. He gave it as his opinion that they originally indicated the different classes of the people in the kingdom of France, which was the first to introduce cards.

Hearts, he said, were supposed to represent "choir-men" or ecclesiastics and the early cards of that suit have a cape which in form resembled a heart. The spade was originally a pikehead, typifying the nobility or soldiery. The artisans were represented by a stone title, now known as a diamond. Farmers were represented by the trefoil or clover leaf, now called a club.

The four kings were originally, David, Alexander, Caesar, and Charlemagne, representing the four great monarchies. The queens were Argine, Judith, Esther, and Pallas, representing birth, fortitude, pity, and wisdom. The knaves were either knights or servants to knights.

POEMS Old And NEW

LIFE

Men are blown
Like particles of sand
From the surf of an unknown sea
Endlessly
Along the beach of the world.

They come
With the beat of unfamiliar blood
Heavy and quick in their veins.
They come with the sea's mad monody
Muffled and strange in their ears.

They pass,
With slow lips mumbling forth in broken mimicry,
Into the blur of time.

But History has a name for each;
She squats on a towering crag
And scribbles in her thickening book
The diminutive records
Of monstrous agonies.
—Goy Carlton Drewry.

THE TROUBLES I HAVE NEVER MET

Someway and somehow I managed them all—
The worries I met day by day—
And somehow and some way they each smaller grew
And vanished completely away.
But oh, the troubles that harried me so,
The worries I could not forget,
That thronged round my pillow to greet me at dawn
Were the troubles I never had met.

Oh, the bridges I crossed that were not on my road,
The bogies the dark held for me,
The storm to-morrow might bring, and the path
With the pitfalls I could not see.
And some way and somehow I managed them all—
Each day's little flurry and fret—
But somehow and someway they worry me still—
The troubles I never have met.

DAD'S LANTERN

I ride a horse to school six miles away.
One night—last week it was—I had to stay
An extra hour to practice in the 'gym';
I saddled Billy, gave rein to him
And started home. The country roads were dim
And fog had settled down, all thick and gray.
Somehow I felt so tired and chilled clear through
I knew that I'd be missing supper too
Out on the farm. It wasn't very gay
To ride a horse to school six miles away
And then go home alone, I'm here to say
That chilly wind and fog just made me blue.
The miles slipped [illegible] Billy's lazy jog,
And then—I saw Dad's lantern through the fog,
And Dad himself came down to lift the gate.
"We heard you in the lane. It's pretty late,
But Mother seemed to think we'd better wait."
He said to me. And all I said was "Gee!
You hadn't oughta waited just for me"
But say! I'll not forget if I should be
A hundred years how glad I was to see
Dad's lantern, blinking through the fog at me,
And how it seemed too bully to be true
That all the folks were waiting supper too!

This Little Brandon Lassie Is Never "Dosed" for Colds

The Browns Now Use the "External" Treatment for Croup and Cold Troubles.

Mrs. John Brown, of 426 24th St., Brandon, Man., is the mother of this fine little girl and one of the many Canadian mothers who now use the vaporizing salve, Vicks VapoRub, in treating the colds of all the family. After using Vicks for some time Mrs. Brown writes:

"I have eight small children—aged from one to twelve years—and can certainly say that Vicks is the only cold remedy I have in the house all winter. If the cold is in the child's head I just put a little up each nostril and it gives relief in a short time. If it is in the chest I rub Vicks well in at night and by morning the cold has almost disappeared. I also use Vicks for chilblains and for burns—in fact, I use it too for severe headaches and find relief in a very short time. I always recommend Vicks to my friends especially those who have children."

Vicks is the external direct treatment for cold troubles—absorbed like a liniment and inhaled as a vapor. It is the ideal treatment for children's colds. Just as good, too, for adults.

"Child's Eyelids Inflamed Stuck Together and Bled"

Mr. E. P. Kimball, Entwhistle, Alta., writes:

"Our little girl from birth was troubled with inflamed eyelids and in spite of several remedies, grew worse until at the age of sixteen months her eyes could not be opened after sleep without bleeding, a waxy discharge sticking the lids together and adhering with great tenacity. The child's grandmothers were consulted by mail, and both responded with a little sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. These were used as directed, and lasted until we could obtain a further supply from Edmonton. Improvement was very marked from the first application. The waxy discharge was easily removed and did not reappear. Inflammation subsided and has not returned."

The thin, long fingers touched the keys softly, caressingly, for a few minutes longer, and the music continued to float like a cloud of sound through the magnificent gallery; but presently the marquis sighed, and in an instant the supple fingers stiffened into motionless, and, turning his head, the player said:

"Nairne!"

It was only a single word, but the tone in which it was uttered spoke volumes. There was the humility of gratitude, warmth of love, the tenderness of sympathy.

"Yes, it's I, Luigi," said the marquis. "Your ears are quick."

"And yet I did not hear you come in," said the player in a slow, low voice, like that of one more accustomed to silence than speech. "It was only when I heard you speak——"

"I didn't speak," said the marquis with a half smile.

"You sighed," said the other quickly though softly, "and that is enough for me. Shall I leave off playing?"

"No," said the marquis; "go on. What is it?"

"A nothing," he said gently, and began to play again.

The marquis remained motionless for a minute or two, then he began to walk to and fro, and this time Luigi heard his steps and stopped playing.

"What is the matter, Nairne?" he asked.

"Nothing more than usual," he said. "One of my black fits; that is all."

"That is all!" echoed Luigi, with a soft lengthening of the words rather than a sigh. "What is it? Can you tell me? Ah, I am always forgetting our bargain—my promise."

"Bargain! Promise?" repeated the marquis.

The other nodded, and pressed down a soft chord.

"Yes. You may have forgotten—it would be like you, Nairne—but I have not. I remember, always; and often the remembrance keeps me silent when I know by the tone of your voice that you are troubled. Why"—he went on slowly, lingeringly, as if he were communing with himself rather than addressing another—"as I was playing just now before you came in I was thinking of that day you found me. I was seeing plainer than I have ever seen anything, or shall ever see anything"—there was no complaint in his voice, but a quiet, serene patience and resignation—"the dark and grimy room, and myself lying there, the most wretched thing in all that wretchedness. They said I was ill of the fever, did they not, Nairne? None of us like to use the true word—starvation! It is such an ugly word, is it not? But it was that of which I was dying. And then you came. I heard your step on the stair, and I thought it was that of the landlord—the landlord who had given me notice that morning to pay my rent or——"

He stopped a moment, in which the marquis said quietly:

"That will do Luigi."

But the other went on, still as if to himself:

"I think Death must have been sorely disappointed. It was such a near thing, was it not? But, you are so strong, Nairne! Even Death must own itself vanquished by that iron will of yours, and you snatched me out of his clutches. I thought at the time that it was scarcely worth the trouble. I should still think so, but that I hug the fancy to me that my poor music sometimes pleases—soothes you; and it is all I have, Nairne, with which to express my gratitude and love for the man who saved my life, and—ah, yes, made it worth living. So you were not satisfied with snatching me from death. Most men would have been; but not you, not you, Nairne. You knew that even death would have been kinder than the existence I had been leading, and you made the life that had been a hell a paradise."

"Tut!" said the marquis. "I got an organist—a musician—on cheap and easy terms, you mean."

Luigi smiled.

"Yes, that is the way you put it when the world asks you wonderingly why you hamper yourself with the poor blind Italian, who should have been satisfied with being saved from starvation, and not repaid his benefactor so poorly by hanging on to him for the rest of his life! That is the way you put it, is it not? And it is like you. And the world is deceived. Ah, Nairne, the world is blinder even than Luigi Zanti. Poor world!"

He touched the keys and flooded the gallery with a sound of gentle derision and pity.

"But the bargain—the promise," he went on. "You forget. It was that I should never trouble you. Whatever I heard, whatever I say—with these fingers of mine, which seem to have eyes sometimes!—I was to ask no questions. And so, though I'd give——" He laughed softly, with self-scorn. "Why, what have I to give? My life? That is yours already! But I'd give it over and over again to lift the burden, whatever it may be, from those strong shoulders—from that kind heart of yours, Nairne!"

"Never the Twain Shall Meet" is the name of the special Cosmopolitan production, a Metro-Goldwyn picture, in which Bert Lytell has the leading role opposite Anita Stewart. But it's a different matter off the screen! Here Bert is snapped with his fiancee, Claire Windsor, as she appears in Hobart Henley's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "The Denial." That is Agnes Christine Johnston's screen version of Lewis Beach's play, "The Square Peg." "Never the Twain Shall Meet" was adapted by Eugene Mullin from Peter B. Kyne's novel. Maurice Tourneur directed it.

Dwarfs' Wedding Tied Up Traffic

Hundreds Tried to Enter Church to Watch the Ceremony

Weymouth Eng., Feb. 21.—There was such a mob of uninvited guests at the recent wedding here of Miss Eliza Victoria Walbridge and Alfred Goodwin, dwarfs, and such a buzz of whispers among the throng that the noise became extremely embarrassing to the clergyman performing the ceremony. He had to call for silence five times and threatened to order everyone from the church excepting those of the bridal party.

Miss Walbridge is but three feet two inches in height while the bridegroom stood but three feet seven inches in his wedding slippers. The heads of the couple did not come up to the altar rails in Holy Trinity Church and nearly every one of the spectators stood on the seats with the hopes of getting a glimpse of the little man and his bride.

Hundreds fought their way toward the altar, while the crowd outside held up traffic for an hour or so and extra police had to be called to remedy the situation. The bride wore white satin and the bridegroom was dressed in a frock coat and carried a top hat. They were followed by a page and two bridesmaids, none of whom were dwarfs.

ARE WOMEN LIBELED?

(Montgomery, Al. Advertiser)

One hears of much cigarette-smoking among women, but rarely sees any smoke. Are we witnessing another episode of scandalous exaggeration? One hears of much profanity among modern women, but rarely hears the profanity. Can it be true that we have again been guilty of libeling modern women, and that our sin in misrepresenting them is greater than any sin which they have committed?

Battlements of Business - TORONTO

HERE is the focal point, the very heart of the industrial, commercial and financial activities of the wealthy Province of Ontario.

Here, in concrete and steel, is expressed the spirit of progress which typifies this great business centre.

More than half the manufactured products of the Dominion, and 26 per cent of Canada's field crops come from the Province of which Toronto is the political and commercial capital.

The stately Queen City, under the friendly spur of competition from a score of flourishing Ontario cities, affords a fine example of efficiency in manufacturing and trading.

Toronto is a distributing point of more than provincial importance. Her commerce extends to those vast territories, East and West, reached by the Canadian Pacific. The products of her factories go beyond Canada's shores to the markets of the world. So widespread are her activities that Transportation that "spans the world" has become a vital factor in Toronto's future. There is a bond of common interest linking the activities of the Queen City with the greatest of the world's carriers—The Canadian Pacific.

As Important as Panama Canal

United States Senator fights For St. Lawrence Scheme

WANTED OUT WEST

Would Cut Cost of Transportation Materially He Says

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 21—Senator Ladd of North Dakota in a speech in the Senate declared that one of the greatest needs of the farmers of the Northwest was cheap and dependable transportation in this conection urged the importance of the early completion of the St. Lawrence waterway. He held it should be pushed forward by the combined efforts of the United States and Canada as rapidly as possible. He said it had been estimated the improvement of the St. Lawrence would mean a saving of approximately $10 per ton, not only on products intended for foreign markets, but on those manufactured goods now used by the people of the Northwest. He said that such a saving meant a lower cost of living for that part of the country, greater development of resources and the building up of a new commerce which now does not exist at all. He held the project was of equal importance to that of the Panama Canal, if not greater.

Senator Ladd in his speech reflected the views of a large share of the agricultural sentiment of the states of the Northwest and he northern half of the Mississippi Valley, as well as of the Lakes region.

Senator Ladd held that the completion of this project would do more than any other one thing to solve the difficulties of the Northwestern wheat raiser and enable him to reach the world market.

The Nort Dakota senator in the course of his argument said:

"What does it mean to the Northwest to bring the Atlantic Ocean 1,200 miles inland by this proposed deep-water route. The benefits are many and varied.

Saving In Freight

"First, there is the saving in freight on wheat shipments for export, which, as northwestern people well know, is a benefit that goes directly to the shipper, for it is a well-known fact that the price of wheat in the Northwest largely follows the price of wheat in Liverpol, and from which is deducted the cost of transportation. Careful studies of shipping costs by rail and water over existing routes show that the cost of carrying a bushel of wheat from average northwestern shipping points to Liverpool varies from 35.9 cents, by fleet on the St. Lawrence, to 30.5 cents via Duluth, and the lake route to Buffalo, thence by rail to New York. It has been estimated that with the proposed seaway in operation there would be a reduction of 7 to 10.6 cents per bushel, which means an anual increase in returns to the wheat farmers of my state averaging about $7,000,000 per year, even if there were no increase in our average annual production in the State under such favorable circumstances.

"Mr. President, the benefits to the State, however, as a wheat producer would far exceed the mere increase in price to the grower. It has been jokingly said that when you start a carload of grain from Chicago to New York it is only halfway when it has reached Trenton N.J.; but the northwestern farmer knows that it is a fact and no joke that when this car has reached Trenton it is truly but halfway so far as the time is concerned and less than halfway when measured by the expense. What is the result. Everyone knows the answer. When we have a bumper wheat crop in the Northwest we can never get sufficient cars to move it, and the local price drops to a ruinous point. Millions of bushels of wheat can not find the cars But suppose that we have to ship our wheat by rail only as far as Duluth or Superior and there transfer it once for all to the hold of the ship, where it serves as the bottom cargo to be suplemented later on by other classes of freight to be picked up at Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, and other ports. Then our freight cars need make but a 300-mile trip to Duluth, and instead of the railroads to provide the thousands of additional cars which involves an expenditure far beyond their means, they can give us satisfactory service with the equipment they now have.

Saves Time

"It is found that on the average it takes a freight car 23 days to go from North Dakota to New York and return. The same car loaded with wheat would easily make the trip to Duluth and return in seven days. In other words, by shipping our grain to Duluth rather than to New York for export, one car becomes the equal of four cars for the longer trip. This is an important feature in the transportation of bulk commodities like wheat in a period of large shipments, as must be the case in handling our grain crop.

"It has been claimed that large liners could not use the Great Lakes channel for lack of suficient depth, and that the tramp steamers and smaller marine craft which could navigate in a 21-foot channel would be insuficient to handle our grain crop, but it is a well-known fact that wheat is one of the cheapest cargoes to transfer and that the Great Lakes freighters of large capacity can carry this grain at an astonishingly low rate per ton-mile. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that the bulk of the crop would be moved by the larger Lake freighters and transferred at Montreal to the great ocean liners, which need the wheat for a bottom cargo and which could aford to make very low rates."

Many women prefer the softer way of a frock eased into straight lines to the excessively narrow cut of the close-fitting hip and sheath silhouette.

"If you have good bones you never really grow old" said Lady Kitty in "The Circle." Many women, however, even while they are young, have good bones plus, which they do not care to advertise in frocks fitted like snake skins. One can keep to straight lines in dresses with a slight ease at the hips and hem and which also give you a little more freedom of action than the sheath. These frocks are very smart in beige flat crêpe embroidered in brown and silver, in brown Cantan crêpe with string color, in crêpe faille, soft satin, satin crêpe, etc.

It was recently reported that King George would unveil the memorial being erected at Harlbeke, Belgium, in honor of the Canadian soldiers who gave their lives in the war, but it is now authoritatively stated in London that there was no foundation for such a report. His Majesty has made no arrangements to unveil the memorial, it is stated.

The Association is asking the Governments of the Dominions for help in any way of patronage and practical support. This exhibition offers an excellent opportunity for Canadian food men to get in touch with the Scottish market.

MISERABLE AND ALWAYS IN PAIN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Help for Mothers

Port Greville, Nova Scotia.—"I took your medicine for a terrible pain in my side and for weakness and headaches. I seemed to bloat all over, too, and my feet and hands were the worst. I am the mother of four children and I am nursing my baby—the first one of four I could nurse. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before the baby's birth, so you can see how much it helped me. I cannot praise it too highly for what it has done for me. I took all kinds of medicine, but the Vegetable Compound is the only one that has helped me for any length of time. I recommend it to any one with troubles like mine and you may use my letter for a testimonial."—Mrs. ROBERT McCULLEY, Port Greville, Nova Scotia.

Before and after child-birth the mother will find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a blessing.

Many, many letters are received giving the same sort of experience as is given in this letter. Not only is the mother benefited, but these good results pass on to the child.

No harmful drugs are used in the preparation of this medicine—just roots and herbs—and it can be taken in safety by the nursing mother.

98 out of every 100 women reported benefit from its use in a recent canvass among women users of this medicine. C

Indians Provide Exciting Chase

Pursued Across Ice by Overseers; Caught With Fish

Lindsay, Feb. 21.—Novelists looking for a good story might find food for thought around Indian Village and Pigeon Lake. Wednesday a thrilling race took place across the frozen waters of Pigeon Lake, when three Indians with their sleds and almost 100 pounds of maskinonge (which they had caught illegally) were chased across the lake a distance of three quarters of a mile and were finally caught by Game Overseers Stalker and Windsor, who were trailing in a cutter drawn by two blood mares.

It apears that the accused had been under suspicion for some time, and that a day or so previously, no less than ten Indians were noticed at one time fishing through holes in the ice. The three men had 14 maskinonge on teir sleds, which they had secured in two hours' time, during which time they had also chiselled their way through the ice. This being the case, readers can form their own conclusions of ho wmany fish were snared by the ten men.

Game Overseers are determined to protect the fish and it is understood that other cases of illegal fishing are pending.

It was a thrilling chase. While Officer Stalker and Windsor, the latter being from Haliburton, were seated in their cutter on the banks of the lake, and hidden from sight by trees and bushes, they saw the Indians start out across the ice. Assuming that they intended to do some more fishing the Overseers waited until the Indians had got about half way across the lake. However, the Indians kept on going and then it was that the driver tightened his reins and the chase started. The ice was glare and bare of snow. It was a perfect race course and the horses went across the frozen ice like a streak. The speed of the Indians and their endurance, was a surprise to the Overseers. They were not only fleet of foot but possessed unusual strength and they covered the three quarters of a mile across the opposite shore in record time, hauling their sleds after them. Reaching the shore they dashed up the easy sloping bank into the open bush, the driver of the cutter following as far as he could with the team. Then the Overseers who had doffed their overcoats set out and pursued the chase in the deep snow. They were fresh while the Indians were tiring, and they were soon on top of the sleds and thus brought the Indians to a halt. The latter showed no resistance and their fish and tools were confiscated. It is possible other proceedings may follow.

Overseer Stalker promises ample protection of the waters in the spring and states that he will have the assistance of a number of Provincial officers.

It is reported in Belfast Ireland that a syndicate, which includes among its members John McCormack, the tenor, has purchased the Freeman's Journal. The price is given as £37,000. The Freeman's Journal, established in 1703 and long famous for its defence of the Irish Nationalist cause, discontinued publication in December.

Again—Do Not Expect Long Trading Allowances on Any Used Car When You Come to Buy a Chrysler

This statement of eight months ago is repeated in justice to Chrysler distributors and dealers, who cannot in fairness be expected to penalize themselves by making long allowances, merely because the Chrysler may have depreciated the value of other cars.

A car may be a very good car indeed and still it will lack the riding, driving, braking, accelerating, power and speed qualities which thrill the owner of a Chrysler Six.

As we said in June of last year, those qualities are so valuable and mean so much in efficiency and economy that you could well afford to discard the used car without compensation for the sake of the amazing activity of performance and the saving the Chrysler will bring you.

Even if another car originally cost you twice as much, the burden you escape when you acquire a Chrysler—the substitution of more agile and satisfying performance and the stoppage of waste—will more than compensate you.

Months ago we said that because of these unusual Chrysler qualities, the Chrysler was invading all markets and especially those of much higher price.

We also said that the enthusiasm of the public over the Chrysler was certain to affect all motor cars and ultimately all motor car design.

The change in (internal) design has not yet come. Until it does, there is no possibility for anyone who wants Chrysler results to make a comparison between the Chrysler and other cars, whether they be used or new.

It is all a question of whether you want the qualities which the Chrysler alone provides.

If you do, then it is perfectly clear that you cannot compare the value of another used car or any other new car with the value of the Chrysler.

Neither higher prices nor lower prices nor long allowances have anything to do with the fact that there is still only one Chrysler and that it delivers results which no other car delivers.

This is no reflection on any good car. It is simply a statement of facts which every Chrysler owner knows.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan. Dealers everywhere.

Irish Free State Is Up Against It

Faced with Adverse Balance of About $90,000,000

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 21.—The main fact being faced by the Irish Free State Government is an adverse balance of about $90,000,000 on last year's trade, declares a review of conditions in the new British dominion sent to the Wall Street Journal by Herbert N. Casson, its London correspondent.

"Ireland is paying her way in dealing with Ulster and England," Mr. Casson says, "but she has bought $90,000,000 of goods last year from Canada, the United States, and the Argentine, and she does not see, at the moment how this adverse balance is to be met."

Mr. Casson points out that Irish trade is dwindling, latest figures from the Dublin Clearing House showing a drop of $870,000,000 in the volume of trade since 1920. He believes this decline is due to the withdrawal of British control over Irish and to the failure of the Irish Free State to maintain a stable and popular government. However, he declares President Cosgrove is making heroic efforts and already has accomplished much.

Taxes Are High

"He is blaming his budget in spite of a falling revenue," the writer says. "He has dared to levy the highest taxes in Europe, outside of Russia. He has put a 20 per cent income tax on the backs of his citizens. He has reduced the army from 55,000 to 15,000. This is a saving of $30,000,000 a year. He has been able to borrow money at 5 1-2 per cent whereas Greece has had to pay 8 per cent."

"Dealing with the darker side of the picture, Mr. Casson says:

"The Free State, barely out of its cradle, is already in debt to the amount of $80,000,000.

"The national loan is now standing at 92, or three points below the issueprice.

"Under the treaty, Ireland owes about $25,000,000 a year to England, as her share of the war debt, but not a cent of this has been paid.

"Because of the trade deficit there is at present a shortage of currency and a tightening of credit.

"Nearly 20 per cent of the workers in Dublin are unemployed—a higher percentage than in London or Glasgow."

In discussing the political situations and its effect upon the new Dominion's prosperity, the writer says:

"The basic trouble in Ireland is a politicalism based on violence. A small minority of agitators, headed by Mr. De Valera, are making a stable government quite impossible.

Strangled by Politics

"Ireland is being strangled by politics. One feud follows another. There is a new split almost every week.

"The ablest man in the present Irish government is Kevin O'Higgins, the vice president. He is a lawyer, a patriot, and a shrewd politician as well. He has now become the leader of the extreme Right as opposed to De Valera who is the leader of the extreme Left.

"O'Higgins has a definite constructive policy. He believes in the Free State and does not want a Valerian Republic. He wants to drop the Irish language and the feud against Ulster and England. He wants to bring in English and American capital and develop Irish resources.

"It is generally believed, both in England and Ireland, that 1925 will be Ireland's decisive year."

Local Option Was Defeated by Dutch

Was Second Attempt there; the vote was Very Close

(Associated Press Despatch)

The Hague, Feb. 21.—A bill proposing to combat the drink evil in Holland by introducing local option was defeated in the upper house of the States General recently by 28 to 20 votes, after passing the lower house by 44 to 30votes.

This is the second unsuccessful attempt of a strong anti-liquor group in parliament to restrict the drink traffic the first, made in 1921, suffering a like fate by being adopted in the lower house by 39 to 29 votes, and then being thrown out in the following year by the upper house by 18 to 17 votes.

The latest vote was interesting in that it was not a party vote, as is so usual in Dutch legislation. Local option has been hotly debated recently both in and out of parliament. No fewer than 3,000 public bodies including Christian workmen's unions, church councils, Y. M. C. As and others, have petitioned the government in favor of it, and a public memorial in its support secured 600,000 signatures.

Refer to States

Various speakers in the chamber gave details of personal observation of the effects of prohibition, both in the United States and in Finland. They said that in their opinion prohibition had by no means proved the success that had been claimed for it, neither had crime deceased to the extent that had been represented as the result of it. Prohibition, they argued, only favored hypocrisy in addition to wholesale and flagrant evasions of the law.

The failure of the present bill seems to be mainly to financial considerations.

It has been contended that even without restrictive measures the consumption of drink has enormously decreased in Holland of late years. In 1892 the consumption was 7.75 quarts per capita of population but now it is only 2.10 quarts. Holland, nevertheless, still spends nearly $600,000,000 a year on drink, according to the latest.

BRINGING ZEBRAS TO THE BRITISH ISLES

London, Feb. 21.—Zebras from the wilds of Rhodesia are soon to be added to the animal collections of several of the vast British and Scottish estates, where they will be allowed nearly as much fredom as in their native haunts. Twenty-two zebras arrived in London recently for G. B. Chapman, an animal importer, who will have charge of the experiment of raising the little striped beasts in this climate.

Several pair will be assigned to the grounds surrounding Chilham Castle, in Kent, owned by Edmund Davis, while others will go to H. Whitley's Primley Park, Paignton, Devon, and eight or ten others to Beattock Park, Dumfriesshire, owned by Sir William Cross.

TO USE WIRELESS IN STEEL FURNACE

Sheffield, Eng., Feb. 21.—Wireless is to be introduced into the steel industry of Sheffield for the purpose of melting metals, announcement to this effect being made by Dr. C. H. Desch, dean of the faculty of Metallurgy at the University of Sheffield. Wireless valves can be used to melt masses of steel into white-hot liquid, Dr. Desch said, and within a few months there would be furnaces here worked by these vales.

"Furnaces have actually been built in which the motive power for melting the metal is supplied by large thermionic valves," Dr. Desch announced, "and these are of special use in the manufacture of certain nickel alloys."

Further it was explained that a 200-volt direct current is passed into the valves, which converts it into alternating current of extremely high frequency—much higher, in fact, than can be obtained from a mechanical generator of alternating current. This current is passed through the metal which may be said to melt itself.

"The melting metal" Dr. Desch added, "is often far hotter than the crucible in which it is being heated. A piece of Swedish iron was melted in this way before the crucible in which it was contained was thoroughly warm."

OLD COUNTRY FOLK FANCY BROWN EGGS

London, Feb. 21.—Spotted eggs have appeared in the London market recently in such numbers as to arouse not only the curiosity of naturalists, but of food authorities as well.

Investigation revealed that the spotted eggs had been dipped in a solution of coffee to give them a brown tint and that in many instances if left in the liquid for an insufficient time the eggs became spotty after being withdrawn. It often happens that eggs left in the coffee solution long enough for the browning process to be completed, take on a coffee flavor.

While in some parts of the United States white eggs bring the best prices, it is the brown eggs which for years have been sold in London at a premium. It is only of late that poultry dealers have taken to coloring the shells with the coffee solution.

Enraged because his dinner was not ready on time R. L. de Scalp, of Glasgow, Scotland, threw a stuffed cat in the furnace, broke up two chairs and a mahogany whatnot, blacked his landlady's eye, and carried his bed to the river nearby and threw it in. He will get his meals regularly for the next thirty days as a guest at one of the city prisons.

INDIA'S TRADE HAS SURPRISED BRITISH PUBLIC

Had Favorable Trade Balance For Three Years

MANY NEW FORTUNES

Wages Up Eighty Per Cent. Never Such Large Crops

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York February 23.—The complete report of trade and finance in India recently issued by the British government, showed so much prosperity in that British Dominion that the British public itself was surprised, says the London correspondent of the Wall Street Journal, in a summary of the report published here.

According to the correspondent the report showed that India had taken her place as an industrial nation; that India is relatively more prosperous than Great Britain; that India has more money at the present time than she knows how to spend and that in the main the country is more prosperous and contented than than at any other time in her history.

High spots in the government report as noted by the correspondent were as follows:

For the past three years India has had a favorable balance of trade. She has piled up $1,000,000,000 of spending power since 1921.

Last year her exports were $1,200,000,000 and her imports $800,000,000.

Wonderful Crops

India has had four good monsoons. She has had four years of favorable weather and good crops. Never before has she had such large crops and high prices.

The boom in tea has made many new fortunes in India. There are tea shares now selling in Calcutta at eight times their par value.

Wages are up 80 per cent. while the cost of living has risen only 67 per cent.

An average workingman in Bombay is now receiving $4.35 a week. He pays $2.40 a week for food and 42 cents for clothing and 28 cents for rent.

India is now producing nearly 10,000,000 bales of jute a year. Her biggest crop is cotton. Her crop in 1924 was over 5,000,000 bales. The crop is worth an average of $450,000,000 a year.

India now has 30,000,000 acres of irrigated land watered by 67,000 miles of canals. She has three immense irrigation projects now being carried forward.

India made 350,000 tons of steel last year in the Tata Works, owned and managed by native Indians. During the year the country produced $125,000,000 of minerals and 300,000,000 gallons of oil.

There are now 352,000 workers in the cotton mills of India. There are 143,000 more operating in the jute mills; 153,000 on the railroads, 36,000 in the printing offices and 20,000 in the iron and steel plants.

Remarkable Growth

India has 216,000 miles of fairly good roads and 40,000 miles of railroad. Her railroad revenue was $350,000,000 last year.

There are now 600 banks and branch banks in India—a remarkable growth in the last few years.

In the center of her banking system there is the Imperial Bank of India, and gathered around it are 18 "exchange banks". The total banking capital is now $600,000,000.

In fact, a new industrial era began in India in 1921 when a Central Department of Industries was created. Prior to 1921 the progress of industrialism in India was held back by the British government. Today, this restraint has been entirely removed and India is allowed to even levy tariffs against British goods.

India is still Great Britain's best customer. In 1921 she bought more goods from Great Britain than Canada, Australia and South Africa combined.

Birthday Party At Rotary To-day

The ladies livened up the Rotary luncheon to-day. In spite of pouring rain they turned out in good numbers making the "Birthday Party" of International Rotary a happy affair.

The speaker, Rev. Harold Young, of Peterborough, dealt with Rotary's duty to work towards International Peace and Good Will. Rotary is in a peculiarly good position to help in this work as the membership extends to most civilized countries.

Fred Kinsella, manager of Dickinson and Wallbank's Belleville office, was received to-day as a new member and formally welcomed into the club.

PARENTS OF BOYS SUING TRUCK OWNER

Hamilton, Feb. 23.—F. E. and M. E. Colborne, parents of the two boys, Charles E., and Frank H. Colborne, who were killed a few weeks ago when the truck on which they were riding was struck by a Canadian National Railway train, have commenced an action against Vernon Harrop, the owner of the truck. They are claiming $15,000 damage for the loss of their sons. H. O. E. Braden has issued the writ.

Dr. Earle Page, treasurer of the commonwealth of Australia, together with Mrs. Page and their daughter, Miss Mary, are visiting Canada in the interests of bettering trade relations between the two countries. He says that, as a prime requisite to the development of both countries, Canada should buy more of her goods in Australia. The photograph shows above, Dr. Page and family on their arrival in Toronto yesterday.

Wallace Robb Wonders If Thompson Fire Destroyed Birds' Home

Wallace Havelock Robb, student of nature, and contributor of interesting articles to The Intelligencer, ever has the welfare of our feathered songsters to the fore. To-day The Intelligencer received a postal card from Mr. Robb at Long Beach, Cal., expressing his fears for the safety of the martin bird house which he placed on the William Thompson Company, Limited building, which was recently badly gutted by fire. A newspaper clipping which he sent along told of the fire.

"If this is the building on which we put the martin house and in which the martins made home," he explains, "it will be a chance for someone to erect another such martin home near the river so that the birds may accept the new home when they find that the old has gone."

FEAR FOUL PLAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Feb. 23—The disappearance of Richard MacBriere Smith, aged 30, a native of Charlottetown, P.E.I., is engaging the attention of authorities here. Smith, who is assistant superintendent of Crawley, McCracken C., chain of camps at Kirkland Lake, disappeared on Feb. 5. He had a hundred dollars in his possession and foul play is feared.

TURKEY ACCEPTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Angora, Turkey, Feb. 23.—The Turkish Government has decided to accept the invitation of the League of Nations to participate in the proposed Geneva conference for the limitation of armaments. The holding of the conference depends on the acceptance of the arbitration protocol by a sufficient number of nations.

MANY OUT ON BAY SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Skating, "shinny" and sailing held full sway on Quinte Bay Sunday afternoon as far east and west as the eye could see. It was a golden one day opportunity, which has now passed-temporarily at least with to-day's downpour, and full advantage had to be taken of the opportunity.

Four or five ice boats shot across the bay and tacked back again and again on the glassy ice. Skaters had to be agile to keep the elusive rubber under control owing to the polished finish on nature's open space arena, but they were having the time of their lives.

MANY ARE PRESENT FOR FIRST MEETING

Members of the Belleville General Hospital Board commenced a big meeting at the Court House at three o'clock and what promises to be a full afternoon of general business transacted.

The meeting called for 2 p.m. did not start until 3 p.m. Those present being Warden Walter Wiggins of Bancroft, Warden of Hastings County, Reeve C. B. McGuire of Stirling, Col. Roscoe Vandewater of Sidney township, Philip Harrison, representing Belleville City Council, A. B. Collins, J. D. MacMillan, Judge J. F. Wills, J. A. Kerr and secretary-treasurer William H. Nugent. The first three named are the County's representatives.

Did Not Believe Story of Farmer

Remanded for Week in Jail While Facts Are Probed

"That's about the poorest story we have ever heard", explained Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan to a young Thurlow township farmer in police court this morning just before Magistrate Masson committed the man to the county jail for one week.

He was found lying in an icy pool of water on Dundas street before midnight Saturday. He was lying face downwards and his discoverer believed him dead. Police found that he was "dead" drunk.

Today the court did not believe his story as to "where when and from whom he told and it was disjointed nature intoxication. It was the popular belief in court circles that he knew more than be told and it was the disjointed nature of his story which brought forth the crown's remarks and the week's remand.

Accused told of walking to Belleville along the Kingston highway Saturday evening about seven o'clock. Opposite the General Hospital an auto stopped and the driver asked him to have a ride. Once in the car, he was asked whether or not he would like a drink. Accused at first refused but later when the modern Samaritan explained that it was a wet night and that a drink would not do him any harm on such a night, he "fell", though not accustomed to drinking liquor of any kind. He had a drink at the corner of the Dundas street and Foster avenue, when the car was stopped for convenience sake, but the driver did not take any of the stuff, which was in what appeared to be a round quart bottle. He left the car at the corner of Bridge and Front street, and after that his story was very evasive, the court believed. After leaving the car, not knowing where his new found friend was going next, he walked directly to a Front street hotel, and directly into the back yard where be again met his friend and had another drink. At first he said be went down the hotel gang way, but later said he went out through the hotel. He denied that he had made the "moonshine" himself and said that his brother did not make it to his knowledge nor any of his neighbors.

Accused, who is a single man, said that his brother would likely attend to his stock while he awaits the adjourned hearing on March second, in the jail here.

GALE IS PREDICTED IN THIS PROVINCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 23—The weather bureau today issued a storm warning saying:

"Disturbance of marked intensity, central over western Lake Erie will move northeastward, attended by strong south and southwest winds, probably reaching gale force this afternoon or tonight shifting to northwest late tonight or Tuesday morning."

Two Hold-up Men Secured Thousands Of Dollars on Toronto Street To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 23—Two holdup men secured a satchel containing several thousand dollars shortly before one o'clock this afternoon, when they set upon Joe Morris, collector for the Dominion Stores Limited, as he emerged from a downtown branch of the Company, firing a revolver and forcing him to relinquish his hold on the bag. The men escaped in a motor car.

Theatre Packed at Concert For V.O.N.

Almost $100 Realized for Worthy Work of Organization

Almost $100 was realized last night at the sacred concert given in aid of the work of the Victorian Order Nurse. The Belle theatre was filled and the large crowd appreciated the fine program put on by local artists.

After the regular church services the theatre doors were opened for the charitable purpose of provinding funds for the Nurse's work.

The opening number was given by Mr. Robson on the organ. Mr. Robson is the regular organist at the theatre and never fails to please.

The well-known radio four supplied two numbers on the program. The soloists of the evening were Mrs. McKinnon, Mrs. Stobie, Mr. Bankier and Mr. Chater.

Miss Mercedes McLellan gave a degave a short talk outlining the work of the Victorian order of Nurse.

Another organ recital by Mr. Robson brought the splendid program to a close.

TURN OBSERVATORY INTO HEN HOUSE

Hamilton, Feb. 23.—In the observatory at Long's Corners where a few short weeks ago distinguished scientists and learned astronomers attuned delicate instruments costing thousands of dollars, here will now cackle and roosters crow. From being an observatory in which noted observers waited to watch and photograph the greatest spectacle of the universe this building, that hundreds visited just to gaze up to its rough bare walls, and marvel at the wonders of science they housed, famous, a short month ago, it has degenerated into a mere hen-house, perhaps a pig-pen, too.

"Oh, what a fall was there!"

Instead of giving the world valuable scientific data this once-famous building will now yield nothing but eggs, chicken dinners and possibly pork chops. Once the cynosure of thousands of eyes it will now be only looked at by the hens as a place to roost. For Lorne Sterling of Hannon, bought it recently and moved the building on sleighs to his farm, where it will finish a once-brilliant career as a common hen-house.

Thomas Sawyers, a chief petty officer in the Canadian Navy wanted at Halifax for desertion, was turned over to Royal Mounted Police at Windsor pending his return to naval barracks at Halifax. Sawyers, it is said, left Halifax several weeks ago, and failed to report back for duty.

KING'S HEALTH CAUSES A STIR IN OLD LAND

Yacht Being Placed in Readiness for Mediterranean Trip

PRINCE HENRY ACTS

Duke of York is in Africa; Wales Is Going Too

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London. Feb. 23.—Although it is known through the medical bulletins that King George's condition is not serious as a result of an attack of bronchitis, the fact that his doctors have ordered him to the Mediterranean for the remainder of the winter has caused quite a stir in England.

It is understood he will make the trip south aboard the royal steam yacht, Victoria and Albert. The yacht is already being placed in readiness at Portsmouth.

Prince Henry May Act

London, Feb. 23.—King George must on recovery from his present illness, betake himself out of the rigorous English climate as a precaution against the possibility of a second attack of influenza, which is very prevalent in England at the present time.

So the King's physicians, Lord Dawson, Sir Milsom Rees and Sir Frederick Stanley Hewett, have ruled. The three physicians paid their customary morning and evening visits to the Palace today, and after a rather long consultation issued a bulletin at 8 o'clock this evening, revealing for the first time how very severe the bronchial attack had been, and why recovery was so slow.

The physicians have advised the King to spend the remainder of the winter in a yachting cruise in the Mediterranean, and it is not questioned that their advice will be followed.

The official bulletin reads:

"The King passed a fair day. There is still a rise of temperature in the evening, but the slow progress continues.

At its onset, the influenza, which attacked His Majesty, was somewhat severe, the bronchitis extending to the base of the lungs, a form of malady which is apt to be tedious and resistant.

In order to secure complete restoration of health and fitness, we advise when the stage of convalescence has been reached, that His Majesty shall proceed to the south of Europe and cruise in his yacht for a few weeks."

(Signed) HEWETT.
REES.
DAWSON.

Presumably in view of this decision the Royal duties will devolve on Prince Henry, as the Duke of York is in Africa and there is no suggestion of any change in the plans of the Prince of Wales.

CRIMINAL CASES UP AT WELLAND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 23—The trial of John Trott, on a charge of murdering Constable Trueman at Thorold opens at Welland today, following the selection of grand and petit jurors. Frank Barned of London, charged with the slaying of Smylie Muirhead here in September last will also be tried at the same court sitting. Trott was tried at the Assizes last Fall but the jury disagreed.

BRITAIN IS READY FOR CONFERENCE

London. Feb. 23—The next move concerning the proposed Limitations of Armament Conference is expected to be taken by Washington, but word was passed around in unofficial circles Saturday that Great Britain stands ready to accept an invitation to participate in such a conference just as soon as it is received.

The opinion prevails here that the conference will be called in the Spring or Fall.

Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain, who is planning to attend the Geneva Conference in March, probably will stop off in Paris for a talk with Premier Herriot regarding the pending League of Nations' security protocol, etc., at which time the Washington Conference details also are expected to be considered.

Mr. Chamberlain probably will be accompanied to Washington by Admiral Earl Beatty, chief of the naval staff, or First Sea Lord Bridgeman, and Colonial Secretary Amery, as it is believed the Dominions will naturally participate as previously.

Rotary Service is Held at John St.

Rev. D. C. Ramsay Explains Rotary Service Idea; Special Music

John street Presbyterian church was crowded last evening when Rev. D. C. Ramsay, the pastor gave a most interesting sermon at a special Rotary service which was attended by members of Belleville Rotary club.

"Playing the Game" was the sermon subject, so ably handled by the minister who still finds time for the pursuit of clean athletics and who at all times manifests a keen interest in athletics of all kinds. A Rotarian himself, and knowing well the high ideals of the Rotary clubs international, Rev. Ramsay was well qualified to deliver a sermon of this type. During the service, the Rotary spirit of service was explained.

Bright musical service also featured when a male choir of twenty-five voices, and soloist of note, added greatly to the success of the service. The soloists were Mr. James Bankier, who sang, "Fear Ye Not, O Israel"; Rotarian Sandford Burrows who sang "The Lord is My Light"; Mr. Fred Kinsella who sang "Soldiers of the Cross"; and Rotarian Albert L. Stillman who sang, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

Some 2,330 Are Caught By Police

In Big Raid at Marseilles, France Saturday Night

Marseilles, France, Feb. 22.—In a raid made by the police in various quarters of Marseilles Saturday night, 5,236 individuals, of whom 2,330 were foreigners, were caught in the drag net. The police made their raids in an endeavor to rid the city of undesirables who are held responsible for the loss of three lives during the disturbances on February 10 in the clash between the Communists and the Catholic Party headed by General de Castelnau. It is the desire of the authorities to prevent a recurrence of the disorders when former President Millerand comes here on March 1 to address the "Patriot's League."

The police combed the entire city from sunset to sunrise, visiting all the cheap hotels and lodging houses in the slums and questioning all persons who were abroad in the streets after midnight, demanding that they produce identification papers.

Of those persons apprehended 662 were arrested and taken to police stations. Of these 163 will be prosecuted for failure to comply with the rules and regulation governing foreigners. Thirty-five persons were put in jail for carrying concealed weapons, and three who are under expulsion sentences will be conducted to the frontier. The others arrested were set free after they had been registered as suspicious persons.

BIG WORKER LOST IN J. S. ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 23.—In the death yesterday of J. S. Robertson, the Temperance Forces of Ontario loses one of their most active workers. Mr. Robertson, who was 71 years of age, was at one time president of the Canadian Temperance League for a period of fifteen years. For several years he was secretary of the National Sanitarium Association.

Row at Home by Cabinet Ministers Prevents Discussion of Other Troubles

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Feb. 23.—Despatches received here indicate that the Rumanian cabinet meeting, at which the question of a dispute with Germany over the redemption of forced war currency was to be discussed, broke up in a row between the Foreign Minister Duca, and Finance Minister Bratiano before reports on the German affair could be heard. M. Bratiano, according to despatches, charged that the Foreign Office was mismanaged, and needed re-organization. The accusation was hotly denied by M Duca, who is declared to have brought a counter charge that the Finance Minister's department was mismanaged, and then to have left the meeting.

INSURANCE MEN TOO

Object to Proposed System of Boiler Inspection

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 23.—Protesting against the imposition of a two cent tax on gasoline without a reduction in Motor License Fees, a deputation representing the Ontario Motor League and headed by Morden Neilson, President, interviewed Premier Ferguson and Hon. G. S. Henry, minister of Public Works, today. The deputation stated they approved the gasoline tax in principle. They urged a reduction in fees equal to the increased revenue from gasoline.

A deputation from the Insurance Companies saw Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health and Labor, this morning to protest against the proposed legislation, which would combine inspector of steam boilers under one branch of the government instead of coming under two separate acts as at present. The Boiler Act, at present provides for the inspection of boilers before installation and the factory act for inspection on the premises after installation. The insurance companies inspect all boilers which are insured, or eighty per cent of these in province. The effect of the new legislation would be to hamper them, V. E. Vangray, head of deputation told minister and would impose a heavier taxation on boiler users. The minister made no promises.

A USELESS TRIP

Ald. G. W. Dawes of Belleville is joining a number of others from Ontario to-day in a trip to Ottawa, where the deputation will wait on the Federal Government, to make an appeal in the interests of the unemployed.

The policy of the Liberal Government in this matter has been laid down definitely. Premier King and his cabinet ministers declare that the Dominion has no share in the responsibility of helping the man who is down and out, in spite of the fact that he is the victim of the government's low tariff leanings.

Premier King bluntly states that municipalities and provincial governments are solely responsible. He washes his hands of the unemployed. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, said only the other day, even more bluntly, that deputations will not change the mind of the Government.

Trips to Ottawa by delegations on almost any matter that concerns the welfare of Canada will be useless as long as the present government is in power.

Premier King and his followers are too busy keeping in office to apply earnest thought to the great needs of the Dominion.

A GOOD SUGGESTION

The suggestion is made in the Montreal Star that a central clearing house for publicity be established, in which all publicity departments in the Dominion would be represented, to co-ordinate the work and provide a convenient institution for the use of those desiring authentic information concerning the resources of this country, its climate and all other details.

It is a good idea, thinks the Hamilton Spectator, and one which would undoubtedly prove as advantageous to Canada as to those interested in the Dominion. South Africa has just organized a Publicity association, having a similar object in view. It is likely that the example thus set will be followed by other Empire states, and for that reason it is very necessary that Canada should step into line.

At the present time there is much overlapping between the various departments engaged in the collection and dissemination of facts of this kind. It would be an economy as well as a boon to have a staff of experts at work receiving and tabulating information and making it available from a central force.

A GOOD WORK

The Intelligencer received word to-day from the Department of Lands and Forests at Toronto, that the Government has six and one half million trees for free distribution to the people of Ontario this year. This material is intended primarily for forest planting, but a limited supply of trees is on hand also for wind-break work.

The purpose of this distribution is to assist farmers and landowners in the province to improve their woodlots and to reforest waste portions of their holdings. On most farms there are a few acres which might profitably be devoted to the planting of trees, such as steep hillsides sandy or gravelly areas, swamp land, and fields cut off by streams or railroads. Such areas may be set out with trees at little trouble and expense, which will add value to the property, and be a useful addition for small amounts of timber and fuel. Also, in some sections of the province where the land is all of good agricultural worth, and little forest remains, it would be profitable to plant a few acres with trees.

The Forestry Branch advises that those undertaking waste land planting make a start of one acre the first year. Two acres will be the largest area for which the Branch will undertake to furnish planting material free in any one year. Larger areas may be planted by arranging to continue the work in successive seasons.

Trees should be spaced from five to six feet each way, preferably six feet. Only in rare cases is it necessary to plant trees five feet apart or less. At five feet spacing an acre will require 1,742 trees. At six feet spacing an acre will require 1,210 trees. 3,500 trees is the largest amount which will be given free to one landowner in any one year.

Money Ruined Him

EVERYBODY is seeking for money, but it is the seeking which counts, as money is not always a blessing when it comes.

The man who won $20,000 for suggesting the name "Liberty" to a popular magazine is now charged by his wife with the abandonment of her and his four children.

The first thing he did with his prize money, his wife said, was to buy a six-cylinder touring car and a quart of liquor. She also said that he kept paying $5, $10 and $15 tips to taxicab chauffeurs and bootleggers.

"Before he won that prize we were in pretty poor circumstances," said his wife. "We were in debt, but at least we were happy."

The question in life is not only who is going to receive the prizes, but what people are going to do with them.

Winning a beauty prize may mean moral and spiritual ruin to the successful contestant. Beauty is not of advantage unless used beautifully.

Many a man has found it harder work to take care of his money when he got it than to get it in the first place. If he makes a large amount of money he finds all society arrayed against him. Beggars assail him, tradesmen overcharge him, and the government taxes him. He finds that the possession of money renders him a marked man.

A man with a large fortune is in one respect like Cain, for every man's hand is against him.

So there are two sides to success.

It is a question whether success is more valuable as a goal to be attained than it is as a goal which has been attained. Those on the way up to it get plenty of advice and sympathy from others. Those who have arrived do not receive much sympathy.

It takes considerable training to be able to take care of money. And often people who are suddenly raised to affluence do not know what to do with their possessions.

Certainly if receiving a large sum of money induces a man to take up extravagant and bad habits and to desert his wife and children it is a bad thing for him.

The same thing is true with the possession of any talent. A man may be a great violinist, a great pianist, or a great speaker, and his success may ruin him as a man. It is very difficult for anyone who is extraordinarily endowed in any way, either in money or talent, to keep his faculties in balance.

The best condition for a man is one of struggle and uncertainty. While he is struggling he is automatically kept normal and in check. That the majority of the human race are not on Easy Street is a good thing for the race.

If every man were a millionaire the world would speedily go to the devil. It is the fact that most people need to worry and struggle along with obstacles that keeps the world sound and sane.

CURTAILMENT IN PUBLIC EXPENDITURE

Gratan O'Leary, of the Press Gallery, Ottawa, addressing the London Kiwanis Club, declared that more than 500,000 people out of a population of nine millions are to-day living on tax money. He proposed very drastic curtailment of public expenditure by reducing the Senate to 72 members, and cutting the indemnities of the Senators by $1,000 a year; the reduction of judges' salaries one-fifth; reduce the number of Cabinet Ministers to twelve; dispense with the portfolios of Secretary of States and the Solicitor-General, which he called merely sinecures; and the combining of the Departments of Public Works, Canals, Railways and Fisheries under one administrative head. Mr. O'Leary would group up the three Maritime Provinces under one Legislature, the Western Provinces in a like manner, and join the Yukon with British Columbia in one Legislature. Canada, he said, is paying its politicians $2,900,000 a year, as compared with $1,230,000 paid by the people of Great Britain for similar services.

Press Opinions

LESSON HARD TO LEARN

St. Catharines Standard:

Now the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers talk of disbanding their co-operative company. It will be found that individualism in marketing a perishable crop will be far less advantageous to the grower than by organization. Perhaps the lesson has to be learned all over again by the growers.

CIVIC RIVALRY

Detroit Free Press:

San Francisco is to have the world's largest swimming tank, 1,000 feet long which leaves Los Angeles nothing to do but build one 1,500 feet in length and filled with water wetter than the San Francisco variety, provided the city can spare that much water.

DON'T KNOW THE CLOCK TICKS

Colusa Sun:

Every day in this country 40,000 idle persons walk into offices and say to busy citizens: "Don't let me disturb you; I only dropped in for a minute." There is no record to show that any of them ever stayed only a minute.

CARELESS MOTHERS

St. Catharines Standard:

A woman supervisor of physical education who has been handling girls ing pictures, jazz, joy-rides and other emotional forms of present day life are "robbing girls of their childhood and producing prematurely adult women who are over stimulated and under nourished."

Moreover, she insists it is mostly the fault of the mothers.

She sent out recently more than 400 letters to parents of high school girls, asking them to co-operate in seeing that their children had proper sleep, exercise and food. At the bottom of every letter she wrote, "We are very much interested in your daughter and welcome a conference at any time."

How many mothers accepted that invitation and came in for a conference? "Not one!" says the supervisor. "There was not a single telephone call or a single letter of acknowledgment."

"GLORIFICATION OF WAR"

(Hamilton Herald)

A deputation from the United Farmers of Ontario waited upon Premier Ferguson recently for the purpose of entering a protest against "glorification of war" in the school readers and histories. In the opinion of these pacificts not only should all literary selections, in prose or poetry, which are warlike in tone or have war or fighting as their subject, be eliminated from the school readers, but the school histories should be revised in such a way as to discredit war and war heroes.

Like the lady in the play, this deputation "protested too much." It would be a mistake to train our children to believe that all war no matter in what cause is wicked and that those who engage in it must necessarily be wicked also, for this would not be true.

If the members of the deputation were to be asked whether the American people err in honoring Lincoln and observing his birthday as a public holiday, they would probably reply no, that Lincoln was a man of peace and hated war. And yet Lincoln is one of the great American war-heroes. Not only did the guide his country through one of the greatest wars in history, but he firmly refused to avert war by agreeing upon a compromise for the sake of peace, and deliberately chose to plunge his country into war rather than make a surrender of principle. Lincoln did love peace, but he loved national unity more; he preferred war to national disruption. He the house.

would not sacrifice union for the sake of peace.

If he was right, and still deserves to be honored, then these pacifist Ontario farmers cannot be wholly right in insisting upon having school children taught that under no circumstances can war be justified.

To-day's Smile

A party of four business men in London often lunched together, and one of them the only native born Englishman among them always took great delight in chaffing the others on their foreign birth.

"It's all very well," he said one day, "for you fellows to talk about what we need in this country, but when you come to think of it, you're really only intruders not one of you was born here."

"Maybe," said an Irishman in the party, "but there's one thing you seem to forget. I came into this country wid me fare paid an' me clothes on me back. Can you say the same?"

STRAYING ROYAL DEER LEAD HORSE GUARDS MERRY CHASE

Windsor, Eng., Feb. 23—A detachment of His Majesty's Horse Guards was called out recently to round up and drive back to the royal preserves in Windsor Park, a herd of deer which had strayed into a nearby estate, doing much damage. The guards reached Ascot in the morning and proceeded to sweep the woods, but after several hours' work only succeeded in driving one deer back to the park. They adjourned operations in the afternoon.

About 150 years ago King George III discovered that h's deer had left the royal forests at Windsor and invaded the Sunninghill Lodge estate at Ascot. He ordered the Life Guards to drive them back and they were probably more successful than the present day guards, who found that the deer were able to get through places in the undergrowth where a horse could not.

Dutchy's Diary

Gum and Politics

At twenty minutes to three yesterday afternoon, just twenty minutes before Sunday School was scheduled to begin, a freckled face boy entered a restaurant in Belleville. He was fingering a five-cent piece.

"D'yuh sell gum for a cent?" he asked the attendant from the East.

"Just five cent," was the reply.

The youngster gazed thoughtfully through the door window. He appeared to be weighing a mighty problem. "Alright," he said finally turning back to the counter. "Gimme the package."

Now circumstantial evidence does not always convince, as some of us learned not so long ago.

But here are a few facts to place side by side. The boy was all spruced up as he might be for Sunday School. It was just the time when he would be on his way to Sunday School. And when boys have a five cent piece on the way to a Sunday School class, its dollars to doughnuts the money is meant for the collection plate.

As we saw it, the boy started out well. He was planning a copper for gum and four cents for the Lord. But when that arrangement was made impossible by the restaurant owner, the collection plate lost out.

Hasty condemnation of this boy, if our surmises are correct, may be countered by the example set by many adults. It is quite possible that the lad's parents might scold him, if they knew what happened. But it is just as possible that those same parents might often have bought luxuries of another kind, with money of a larger denomination, that could have been applied to the work of their church.

A few individuals in Belleville are urging people not to take their politics too seriously between elections. In fact one man has put the suggestion into print.

It is a viewpoint hard to understand in these crucial days for Canada.

If elections were personal affairs, affecting only individuals and the immediate vicinities concerned, there might be some reason for such counsel. At this time, however, when Canada is staggering under burdens which require the most earnest effort to shoulder, we cannot afford to forget the affairs of the country until the approach of an election.

If men honestly believe that the policy of the King Government is to blame for high taxes, industrial depression and depopulation, they would be failing in their duty, were they to stay criticism until such time as Premier King says he is ready to go to the country.

One of the obstacles in the path of Canada's progres als the indifference of many citizens to the issues at stake.

PARENTS URGED TO GUARD PLASTIC MINDS OF YOUTH

London, Feb. 23—In every child there is the spark of genius which is too often quenched, Sir John A. Cockburn told the annual conference of educational associations at University College here recently. "But if this spark is allowed to become a flame, Sir John continued, "it is wonderful what a child can do in later life.'

"The child's mind," said Sir John, "is clear of the mists of sectarianism, party and prejudice. Above all things the parent must avoid making finger marks upon the delicate tissue of the young mind. The whole mechanism of the child's brain might easily be spoiled before ever it comes into the hands of the teachers.'

Queen Mary Keeps Up Ancient Custom Of Spring Cleaning at Buckingham

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 23.—Not many women in England today do "Spring Cleaning" that annual ritual of scrubbing and cleaning that twenty years ago used to drive every man to his Club for a couple of weeks. But "Spring Cleaning" is still part of the domestic routine at Buckingham Palace, and as soon as Queen Mary got back to town from their country place this week, she started making plans.

Every year she goes through the entire stock of the Palace linen and plate and visits every room in the Palace to see what wants renovating. Then a long schedule is drawn up of what has to be done, and the "Spring Cleaning" starts. It is only fair to add, however, that the bulk of it is done when the Royal Family goes to Windsor Castle for Easter.

Probably the people who are most glad to see the Queen back in town for the season are the theatrical managers. She never misses a play worth seeing and her visit to their theatre means a great deal. When she was Duchess of York she was known by her family as "The Critic". And King George's choice of plays is still in the Queen's hands.

London Season is Beginning Brilliantly

The London season may be said to have started with the wonderful banquet with which the retiring American Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg entertained King George and Queen Mary at Crewe House on Friday night. The great dining room was a picture of flowers and shaded lights, and Queen Mary wore a gown of cloth of gold, sewn with diamonds and sapphires and she wore the lesser Stars of Africa in her corsage.

People are flocking back to town. On the day that the king and queen returned, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, who had been in Palm Beach, Florida, returned to their town house, and the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, the Earl and Countess of Bradford and Viscount Grey of Fallodon are among those who have also opened their town houses.

The opening of Parliament has provided three dazzling political receptions and there was a flame of jewels at Lady Londonderry's and Lady Evelyn Guinese's political receptions at 10 Grosvenor street, on Tuesday night. Political receptions by the way, are not the dull, official affairs they were in the Victorian era. There was dancing to the Savoy Havana Band after midnight and there were golden rivers of champagne.

The Kelloggs, by the way, are having the busiest weeks of a busy year. There have been receptions by the French Ambassador in their honour, by Lady Astor and the American Women's Club, and the Premier's wife, Mrs. Baldwin, is taking Mrs. Kellogg to the great reception at Claridge's when Dame Ellen Terry is being honoured.

Limps Are Fashionable

At the moment accidents are fashionable in London—that is, if they entail a limp.

"Hurt my ankle ski-ing" they explain to you, and you sympathize accordingly. When the boat train arrived from the Continent the other night eight people were wearing carpet slippers. Not all the limps are genuine, however, and if you ask their owners to a dinner party or a dance it is remarkable how quickly they disappear.

Another conceit at the moment is to have "G.B." on the back of your auto. That shows that you and your auto have been abroad—at least about one in three is the genuine label fixed by the French Customs.

Cloche Goes: Back to Hats of 15 Years Ago

The death-knell of the cloche and the small fitting hat is now being sounded on all sides. Broad-brimmed hats are appearing in all the smart restaurants and coiffeurs are exercised to find a shingle to suit them. They are now "feeding" the shingles,—making the hair thicker on the crown which makes the big hat secure. As for the trimmings, the milliners have not yet revealed their full intentions, but two big hats seen this week bore what looked remarkably like a bunch of vivid "radishes," set at a jaunty angle; but for the most part there are definite signs that the big ostrich feather is to be the most popular of all trimmings. It is also going to be worn underneath the brims of these big hats.

AUSTRIAN ARRESTED ON WASTE CHARGE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, Feb. 23.—Hellmuth Neumann, director of the Woellersdorf factory, Austria's principal munitions making plant during the war, has been arrested on charges involving the wastage of material alleged to amount to 400 million crowns. Neumann, after a preliminary examination, was released on bail of five billion crowns. The semi-official Reichspost says it is likely that other arrests will be made shortly.

DEATH RATE FOR MIDDLE AGED UP

Toronto, Feb 23—While the death rate in Toronto has steadily decreased since 1909 the death rate of people of more than 40 years of age is on the increase, says the monthly health bulletin issued by the Health Department.

The Medical Health Officer states that chronic heart disease, chronic Bright's disease and premature hardening of the arteries are mainly responsible for the mortality of the middle-aged. Such troubles as rheumatism, chorea, bronchitis, pyorrhea and suppurating gums have a direct effect upon the heart in later years some of the toxic poisoning being left after the diseases have apparently disappeared.

Diet, exercise and unwillingness to worry are other features contributing to a person's health in middle life, the bulletin states.

MICHAEL O'LEARY, V.C. ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Buffalo, N.Y., Feb. 23.—Sergeant Michael O'Leary, holder of the Victoria Cross and other awards for gallantry durin gthe World War, was held for the Federal Grand Jury by United States Commissioner Keating Saturday on a charge of conspiracy to smuggle aliens into the United States.

O'Leary, whose home is in Fort Erie, Ont., was formerly employed at Bridgeburg, Ont., as a railroad policeman. In January, two aliens were found by immigration inspectors in a freight car which came across the International bridge. The aliens are aleged to have identified O'Leary as the man who placed them in the car.

USED BRUTE TACTICS IN TORONTO FIGHT

Toronto, Feb. 23—"We find that Ernest Charles Owen came to his death at 395 Westmorland avenue at 9 p.m. on February 15th, as a result of injuries received in a fight between himself and Frank Stagg, 397 Westmoreland avenue.

"We are of the opinion that Stagg used brutal and unnecessary tactics, which were the cause of injuries from which death resulted," was the verdict of the Coroner's jury at the inquest.

MOTHER OF FIVE

Milton, Feb. 23.—A ewe, belonging to John Leeson, Trafalgar township has given birth to five lambs, which is said to be a record. The hope of the owner of this prolific ewe is that the lambs will survive the cold and live to be exhibited at the fall fairs.

ROUND UP MEN AT SOUTH BEND

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 23—Following the robbery of the Millburg Mich. Bank of $2,900 in currency and $52,000 in negotiable securities yesterday sheriff's posse and citizens chased the five members of the bandit gang more than forty miles, engaged in revolver and shotgun duels with the bandits, wounding four of them and finally capturing them at New Carlisle, Ind.

During the progress of the battle two deputy sheriffs were wounded.

The five suspects were brought to South Bend and lodged in jail.

Among them was John Marshall, of Hamilton Ont., who was seriously wounded from gunshot wounds in the body.

Miss Ketha Lloyd has returned from Toronto where she has been taking some further lessons in designing.

I Was Fired by Head Of Eaton's Store

Now Managing-Director of Sherwin-Williams Paint Company

Listowel, Feb. 23.—Once more is reported the splendid success of another man who spent his boyhood days in this district. W. S. Fallis is well known by many in Listowel and Wallace township and his many friends will be pleased to read the following article which appeared in The Financial Post of Feb. 6th which deals fully with his business career and the success he has achieved.

"That one may be "fired" from one job and become an outstanding success in another is but an elaboration of the theme about round pegs in square holes. W. S. Fallis called with some measure of truth the paint king of Canada, was told by no less a person than the greatest merchant prince Canada ever turned out that he was no good, because he was not accurate. To-day Mr. Fallis is vice president and managing director of the Sherwin-Williams Company of Canada, and if you want to know how accurate he is, ask any member of his staff. You will be told that the chief is the hardest stickler for accuracy in the whole organization.

William Sheppard Fallis started out in life as a farm boy. His parents farmed a property in Perth county in Ontario. Young Fallis harrowed the fields at 10, ploughed at 12, handled a spanking team of heavy draft horses at 15. He still can drive a team of horses, if he wants to. But the stay on the farm movement had not had its genesis in those days, and, when he came of age Fallis went to the big city to make his fortune. The nearest big city was Toronto, and so it was to Toronto that Fallis went.

Started in at Eaton's

Whenever a farm lad comes to Toronto to work—or for that matter, when ever a Toronto lad leaves school to get his first job—he inevitably goes to Eaton's. Eaton's has been a training school for many men. It was no different in 1889 from what it is to-day. Fallis went to Eaton's and asked for work and was given a job rolling carpets and displaying rugs at $3 a week. He soon learned to fear the iron discipline and the arbitary fancies of Timothy Eaton, who was then building up the enterprise that was to become Canada's largest retail merchandising organization.

He had been given a promotion to the advertising department. One day a folder was printed. The bundles of folders were on Fallis' desk and he was arranging to send them out to the customers when Timothy Eaton wandered in. He picked up a folder and glanced over it. Evil fortune had befallen it. The printer had set up the word "facilities" to read "faculties."

"See this" thundred Eaton at Fallis. "It's not accurate. Take them all down to the furnace and burn them up."

"And you, Fallis," he called after the young man, "you can go back to the carpets. You'll never be any good until you learn accuracy."

Next Job Selling Bicycles

It would have been in vain for Fallis to have told Mr. Eaton that the mistake was not his; that someone else had done the folder. So he decided that if he could not be an advertising man he wouldn't be a carpet salesman. He left and became a traveling salesman for a bicycle manufacturing concern.

It was in 1899 that he joined the Sherwin-Williams organization. The company was not a very big enterprise then. Walter H. Cottingham's little paint organization had been taken over a few years before and Cottingham had become general manager of the Sherwin-Williams' organization for the whole continent. But the total sales of the whole company in Canada and the United States totalled only about $1,000,000 a year. Sales of the Sherwin-Williams Company of Canada alone now run over $13,000,000 annually, and have touched $15,000,000. So widespread have the ramifications of the organization became that its products are on sale in every country on the face of the globe, and they may be truly said, without exaggeration, to cover the earth. And Mr. Fallis had quite a bit to do with putting them in many countries.

Mr. Fallis's first experience in selling paints and varnishes with the Sherwin-Williams Company was in Western Ontario after which he was sent to cover the Maritime Province. which had up to then been meagerly served. With a position for work—orderly and efficient work— which has always remained with him it did not take him long to have sales humming in his territory. In the second year of his work in the East, he won every competition among the company's salesmen in that year, and sold more paint and varnish than any other man in the company's employ anywhere in the United States or Canada.

Returning from Europe, Mr. Fallis was sent to Winnipeg, as sales manager for Western Canada, a title that didn't mean much, as he had only one salesman to manage. But he made the job a big one

Becomes General Manager

Seven years ago the position of general manager of the Sherwin-Williams Company of Canada, Limited, became vacant. Mr. Fallis was called to Montreal to take over the work. It was typical of his methods that it only took a few days for the change to be noted in questions of policy and management. Within a few weeks he had reduced the office staff from 120 to 94. Mr. Fallis had always been an amazingly hard worker and—this is equally important—an effective worker. He believed in absoloute accuracy and strict regard to systematic control

Mr. Fallis is a busy member of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and his activities there are his chief contribution to public work. Perhaps as he gets further away from his desk Canada will see more of him in public life. But he has only had seven years as general manager of Sherwin-Williams and he probably wants a few more years of hard work there to reach a few more objectives.

REV. DR. C. T. SCOTT

Pastor of Howard Park Methodist Church, Toronto, has accepted an invitation to become pastor of Charlton Street Church, Hamilton, in July, subject to the approval of the stationing committee.

Alem Robinson, veteran M.C.R. employee, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clarke Harper at Welland. The funeral will be held from Welland Thursday afternoon at 2.30 to the Welland cemetery. Robinson is well known in St. Thomas, where he worked for many years.

At the home of W. G. Whiteside, Metcalf street, St. Thomas, a robin's nest with a single egg was found by workmen. The egg shows evidence of being freshly laid, and the nest shows every indication of being recently constructed. Mr. Whiteside states that the mother bird has been hovering around the spot for some time.

At the annual meeting of the Galt Poultry and Pet Stock Association the following officers were elected for 1925: President Jas. Rose; vice-president, Jack Bateson; treasurer, R. L. Wilson; recording and show secretary, L. Hinrich; auditors, F. ewton and W. Sloo.

Word was received at Brantford of the death in Monte Carlo of Mrs Jane A. Wood, widow of Hon. E. B. Wood, provincial treasurer in the Sandfield-Macdonald Government of Ontario from 1870 to 1874, and chief justice of Manitoba from 1874 to 1882. She was born in Brantford.

Bank Book Showed $216,017; Lived in Cheap Hotel

New York, Feb. 23.—Monsignor Peter J. Slane of Owosso, Mich., a seventy-five year Catholic priest, was found dead, apparently from heart stroke, in his room in the Hotel Sagamore, Coney Island, where was passing a vacation. Although bank-books in the room showed deposits of $216,017.18, the priest was living in a room which cost him only $7 a week.

Mgr. Slane came to the hotel Sunday. His brother, Charles Slane, a customs inspector, visited him every night. Charles Slane asked Mrs. Jas. Chase, the housekeeper, to take good care of the priest and told her his brother was a "little close with his money."

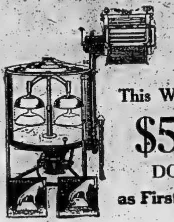
When Mrs. Chase knocked at Mgr. Slane's door, there was no reply. She called Patrolman Carlson, who walked to the window on a coping and found the priest dead on the floor, partly clad. Charles Slane had told Mrs. Chase his brother had heart disease.

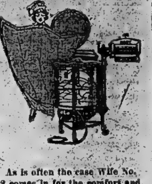
Charles Slane was astonished when he learned of his brother's wealth. He said he knew the priest had some money, but had never thought it was so much. The priest owned about $32,000 worth of real estate, according to papers in his room. Charles Slane said he lent his brother $180 Tuesday night. There was $134 in the room when the body was found. Mgr. Slane had paid $5 of his week's rent and told Mrs. Chase he would pay the rest later.

Mgr. Slane was in the habit of passing his vacations in Brooklyn. For five years previous to this winter he had been at the Hotel Shelburne, Brighton Beach. He preferred to be alone and had declined invitations from relatives and friends.

The bank deposits were made between January 10 and February 5. There were two in the Manufacturers' Trust Company, $79,555 and $84,578, one in the State Savings Bank, Owosso $50,000 and one in the Citizens Savings Bank, Owosso, $1,883.

J. H. Black an Arran Township farmer near Aleinford, sustained serious injuries to his face as the result of a kick from a horse. Several teth were knocked out and his face was severely cut by the blow.





ARE YOU WORKING FOR YOUR HUSBANDS 2nd WIFE?

It's brutal but the truth — many wives have worn themselves out helping their husbands win success. During the days when every penny counts the wife struggles in the home giving her all —her attractiveness, her vigor, her youth and her vitality.

She has the mistaken belief that by playing charwoman and doing the terrible drudgery of washing by ancient methods she is showing loyalty and helpfulness.

But when her husband has gained success, in many cases she discovers she is the loser. He is pink with the flush of victory. She is pale and worn out from loss of vitality. Her charm is gone as a result of wasted energy.

Some other woman who has conserved her energies takes her place. WIFE NO. 2 GETS WHAT WIFE NO. 1 WORKED FOR.

That's the Great Tragedy of the Home!

The cost of preventing this tragedy is small. Modern electrical appliances — such as the electric washer shown here— is the solution.

DON'T DELAY — Ask for a home demonstration of this washer today. You can't afford to be without it!

Wife No. 1 scrubs away 52 times a year, she thinks it is ecomoncial and saving, but it is endangering her health and often leads to an early death.

This Week Only $5.00 DOWN as First Payment

As is often the case Wife No. 2 comes in for the comfort and enjoyment of life made possible by electric appliances, which wife No. 1 worked for, but didn't get.

EASY WASHER is being demonstrated in our shop all week — Made in two sizes—and sold on extremely convenient terms to suit every family.

An Electric Washer operates off an ordinary light socket.

CIACO ISSUES CHALLENGE; PETES WIN; C. CORNELL CAPTURES BOWLING PRIZE

C. Cornell Wins High Single Prize

Offered by C. C. Dickens at Recreation; He Rolled 321

There was plenty going on at the Recreation Alleys on Saturday in Bowling. Probably the weather had something to do with it. Competition was keen for a prize that Mr. C. C. Dickens donated to the bowler making the highest single score on Saturday. Mr. Dicken's prize was a cap value $2.00 or anything of equal value in his shop and the highest score to start off with was made by Mr. Sheppee who rolled 262. Later in the afternoon, Lapenette raised it to 268 and in the evening B. Leno from Corbyville came through with 318. Just when it looked as if the 318 would stand C. Cornell finished one of his games with 7 consecutive strikes and raised the score to 321, Cornell winning the prize. Next Saturday Mr. Dickens will give a box of chocolates to the girl rolling the highest score.

After dropping 4 straight games, the Ciaco junior team broke into the win column at the expense of the Wolves of the North, who hadn't lost a game and were leading in the junior league. The Wolves loss will rather complicate the league. It puts three teams tied for first place and several more teams close behind. Cummings for the Ciaco rolled a very steady game, spilling the wood for 247, 245, 203 for a total of 695, for the oles, Wilbur was high.

The Requisitioners gave the Coppers a trimming in their league fixture, winning by over 200 pins. The Coppers fell badly in the second and third game, as they won the first game by 1 pin. High bowlers were Tedman 551 and Cook 547

The Fruit Merchants won another game after dropping three straight losses, winning from the Ciaco by over 200 pins. Orlando had a night on rolling 704 for his three strings, for the Ciaco Gifford was high bowler with 568.

The M. P. Office lost to the B. B Dept. in a C. N. R. League game, the B. & B. won the three games running and never being in danger of losing Sloan for the winners was high bowler while Jordan for the losers was high. Players and scores.

Two exhibition games were played at the Recreation alleys on Saturday, the most important one was in the afternoon when the Girls from the C. I. A. Office played a men's team from the same place, the men were to give the girls a 50 pin handicap in each game, the losers to pay for the chicken dinner. But alas the two old reliables on the girls team couldn't seem to hit their stride and the girls lost out by over 200 pins plus their handicap. Miss Cavanagh 454, Miss Lawrence 383, Miss Hunt 365, Miss Bayers 373, Miss Boyle 383. Gents, S. Lennox 463, J. O'Gorman 481. D. Hannah 463, F. Bowyer 379, B. Blain 373.

In the evening exhibition between a team representing the C.N.R. and a team from the C. I. A. the latter team won out by over 200 pins. Strang and Hope both rolled over the 600 mark.

Corbyville Cage [illegible] Team Challenges

Want Game With Other Industrial Teams in the City

Since the organization of the Ciaco Club at the Consolidated Distilleries Limited, Corbyville, there has been great activity in sporting circles in that industry, not to menion the several successful social events.

Now the Ciaco boasts a basketball team and today that team hurls forth a challenge to any basketball team in the city, which is made up of members of the staff of any industrial firm in Belleville.

This is a boys' team, and if rumor is correct, they have "live" basketers" who will make the best of them step into town to win. The manager of any team who wishes to challenge should get in touch with the Ciaco headquarters.

OTTAWA SENATORS 3 BOSTON BRUINS 0

Ottawa, Feb. 23—The most listless game of the National Hockey League played in Ottawa this season was witnessed at the Auditorium Saturday night when the Ottawa Senators defeated Boston by 3 to 0. Both teams failed to get going except in spots, and the hockey in general was very ordinary.

Ottawa's three-goal margin represents the edge they had on the Bruins in goal getting, but not in the general play. Only spectacular work by Charlie Stewart in the Boston net kept the score as low as it was. Stewart turned in a fine game and repeatedly made saves that robbed the locals of what appeared to be sure goals. He was given very ordinary support by the forward line, although the defence in front of him held fairly well.

CANADIENS PULL HAMS DOWN A BIT

Hamilton, Feb. 21.—Canadiens cut Hamilton's load to three points in the N.H.L. race here on Saturday night by scoring the odd goal in three. It was a game full of smart hockey and very little rough play, and won by the team that took advantage of the opportunities afforded. Hamilton played minus the services of Captain 'Shorty' Green, who is confined to his bed as the result of an injury received in Boston last Tuesday night, and he was greatly missed, but had Hamilton taken advantage of the opportunities that cropped up in the opening session and early in the last twenty minutes of play they might have got better results.

Aurel Joliat, the Frenchman's scoring ace, was the butt of all abuse in the early going but the temperamental one refused to be flustered, and went about his work like a well-oiled machine. It was his smart performance that enabled Canadiens to emerge victors for he scored their first counter, paved the way for the second, and turned in a defensive game seldom equalled on local ice.

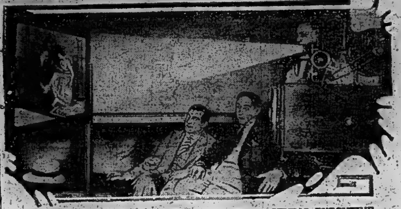
Viewing "Rushes" of Day's Work on "So This Is Marriage"



HOBART HENLEY, DIRECTOR; HARRY RAPF, STUDIO EXECUTIVE

This may look like a quiet evening at home, but in reality it is part of the day's work for Hobart Henley, director, and Harry Rapf, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio executive—after the day's chief work of filming is over. Here they are in a studio projection room inspecting "rushes" of the scenes shot earlier in the day on Henley's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "So This Is Marriage." Conrad Nagel and Norma Shearer are the players you see on the miniature screen. Carey Wilson's story was prepared for the screen by John Lynch and Alice D. G. Miller.

Edd Roush Fooled Even John McGraw

Once Not Wanted, Now one of the Best in Baseball

New York, Feb. 23.—When they had turned over all the players goods and chatels of the ill-fated Federal League to the majors a decade or so ago, it was discovered that one player was left over and unaccounted for. He was Edd. Roush of the Newark Club. Nobody wanted him, but Harry F. Sinclair, leading financial spirit among the Federals, finally sold him to Manager John McGraw of the Giants for the waiver price, $6,000.

McGraw traded Roush to Cincinnati and has been regretting it ever since, even going so far as to make several flattering bids for the outfielder who has established himself as one of the best five batters and three greatest fielders for the past nine years. His nine-year batting average is .344. He led the National League batsmen in 1917 and 1919. He holds a place on most of the all-star aggregations selected these days.

When Roush went to the Federal League in 1914 from Evansville, Ill., his right arm went back on him. He at once undertook the apparently impossible task of learning to throw lefthanded, but by persistent effort he has developed that arm until it ranks among the best in the game. This is one of the most unusual achievements in the national game's history.

For years Roush was one of the most stubborn holdouts in the major leagues, but his differences with the Reds' management have been smoothed over and he is now regularly in the fold by spring.

Roush was born in Oakland City, Ind., 32 years ago this spring.

SUING PETERBORO BASEBALL CLUB

Peterboro, Feb. 23—Instructions to City Solicitor Joseph Wearing to sue the Peterboro Baseball Association for $700 outstanding from last year's lease on James Stevenson (formerly Riverside) Park where all the Central Ontario games were played have been confirmed. The amount of the lease was $1,000, and the City Council offered to accept $500, in discharge of the balance if paid before December 31—the offer was not accepted and the Council is now seeking the full amount.

At the meeting of the Parks Committee an offer from the Peterboro Baseball and Athletic Association, a new organization headed by G. S. Matthews, to pay the City Council ten per cent of the gate receipts was rejected and tenders will be asked as usual.

ST. PATS RETAIN HOLD ON SECOND

Montreal Feb. 23.—Toronto St. Patrick's hurdled an important jump in their race for a National Hockey League play-off berth when they defeated the Montreal team, 2 to 1, here Saturday night and kept pace with Canadiens in second place in the standing. Paul Ciceri landed here with his players and found Jack Adams too sick to take the ice. Adams developed la grippe and had to retire to bed with a high fever. It was a severe blow to the Irish team, and when in the first period Montreal had an edge in the play, matters began to look anything but promising for the visitors.

St. Pat's had been working consistently in the first period but had not been particularly dangerous. They took heart in the second session and play became fast, with St. Pat's sharing equally in the attack. Finally Mike Neville, former Three Rivers amateur, and more recently of London, started a rush straight down centre ice. He drew the Montreal defence, and sent a perfect pass over to Babe Dye. The league's sharp-shooter shot in from the wing to close quarters with Benedict and had a clear drive for the first goal of the contest.

Montreal—Goal, Benedict; defence, G Munro and Cain; centre, Noble; wings, Broadbent and Dinsmore; subs, Lawrey, Rothschild, Skinner and Berlinquette.

St. Patrick's— Goal, Roach; defence, Corbeau and McCaffery; centre, Neville; wings, Day and Dye; subs, Smylie Holyway, Reid, and Cotch.

Large Program Of Yaching Ready

Including Lake Yacht Racing Association Regetta In Belleville

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 23.—As the winter draws to an end and the interest in winter sorts wanes, yachtsmen are taking a fresh lease on life. The coverings will soon be taken off enthusiastic skippers will climb aboard the winter cradles, dive below and see how the good ship has "hibernated". The season of 1925 is scheduled to be a banner one and only needs a little assistance on the part of the weather man to make it the best ever. The George Cup races will be held in Toronto under the auspices of the Toronto Canoe Club, during the week of July 27. The challenge is in from the Crescent Yacht Club of Chaumont so there is sure to be a race. The late entries will be Royal Canadian Yacht Club; Rochester Yacht Club; Genesee Yacht Club and Kingston Yacht Club; so that with the Riowna, there will be a six-cornered race—a race that many will come miles to see.

The long distance for the Freeman cup will start from Toronto on Saturday, August 1, finishing at Presqu'ile, 84 nautical miles. At the conclusion of the long distance race, which is open to all classes of yachts of L.Y.R.A. register, the boats will proceed through the Bay of Quinte to Belleville, where the Lake Yacht Racing Association will hold its three day's regatta August 5, 6, and 7, the course to be laid in Big Bay.

It is expected that the Eastern Yacht Club of Massachusetts will send a crew to Toronto during August to again try conclusions with the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, the series of races likely being run off with Yachts of the "P" class. The event of the season, however is the series of races for the time-honord Fisher Cup, which will be held at Toronto September 7, 8 and 9. This fixture comes immediately before the second one. The United States challenger as well as the other visiting yachts will thus be enabled to participate in either one or both big meets.

The race for the Fisher cup will be a boat-to-boat race between the yachts of the famous "P" class. The Rochester Yacht Club has challenged the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, the holders of the cup, and the challenge has been accepted. Agreement has been reached between the two Clubs that the race shall be sailed by yachts already built and equipped with gaff rig. The Rochester has two Yachts to choose from, the Olympian and the Oleode, formerly Waaaka. The Royal Canadian Yacht Club will its selection from Stranger Patricia, Bernice, Italia and Nutmeg.

Many famous yachts have contested for the Fisher Cup, established in 1874 but the last race was in 1911, which was won by Patricia from the Canada cup winner Seneca. Patricia has been kept in excellent condition, and shows little ravages of time, save in her deck which this year is being replaced. She has a new outfit of English Ratsey Canvas, and as in recent years the model of this class of yacht has not been greatly improved. It is not beyond the realm of possibility that this good ship will again carry Canada's colors in an International race of great importance.

Was Royal Battle O Y.M.C.A. Alleys

When Excelsiors Defeated Granites by 96 Pins on Saturday

On Saturday night at the Y Alleys, the Granites and Excelsiors met in a league fixture which proved a battle royal all the way and when the smoke had cleared away the Excelsiors proved to be the winners by 96 pins. In the first game the Granites had the lead by 61 pins but the Excelsiors not to be out done, came strong in the second game and were up 21 pins on the two games. In the third game it was a battle royal all the way, the Granites having the advantage until the eighth frame, when Mrs. Thomas came along and put in three strikes in a row and winning the game by about the same amount as she got on her three strikes. Mrs. Rutherford of the Granites was the leading lady of the evening for the single and three string with 233 and 582 respectively.

'Twas an Onion That Started Rush

Francisco Lopez Found Gold Clinging o the Roots

Associated Press Despatch

Los Angeles, Feb. 21—Recent reports that the original first nugget of California gold was in the possession of a private collector in New York have aroused chroniclers of southern California's history to remind the public that it was an onion, not Sutter's mill, that started the first California gold rush.

Moreover, these chroniclers relate, that onion grew in the San Fernando valley northwest of here, hundreds of miles south of Sutter's mill, and the gold rush it started began in 1841, seven years before James Marshall's discovery of gold in El Dorado county.

It was on March 9 1841, that Francisco Lopez was riding through San Feliciano canyon with a companion and stopped to eat lunch under a tree Lopez liked onions and when he saw a wild one growing within arm's reach he leaned over to dig it up with his knife and add it to his meal. Clinging to the roots of that onion were several small pieces of gold.

Soon the rush was on. As far north as Santa Barbara and as far south as San Diego, the news of the gold strike spread. In a few weeks hundreds of men were sifting the sands of the canyon for gold, and some were finding it in profitable quantities.

Hostilities between the United States and Mexico interrupted the placer mining, and when, in 1855 mining activities were resumed in the San Fernando field, the later but greater rush started by the discovery of nuggets at Sutter's mill in the north was in full swing.

Estimates of the amount of gold taken out of the San Fernando placers vary widely but such data as is available indicates that more than $5,000,000 in placer gold has been shipped outof Los Angeles county since Lopez's onion revealed the existence of the metal here.

Peterboro Seniors Take Group Easily

Won Saturday's Game 8 to 2 and Round 13 to 4

Toronto, Feb. 22.—Playing their best hockey of the season, the Peterboro seniors skated rapidly to an 8 to 2 victory over the Parkdale Canoe Club team here on Saturday night, and won the round and the group championship by 13 to 4. The Easterners left not a shadow of a doubt as to which is the better sextet. They were too fast and resourceful for the Paddlers, who even with Don Jeffrey and "Glad" Thompson in the line-up, looked far weaker than they were in the opening game. The "Petes" are ready for the O.H.A. finals, and their decisive win against the locals will likely make them favorites.

Play was fairly strenuous, and there were plenty of penalties, but these did not affect the visitors, who had the better of the going even when short handed. In the second period Frank Collins was ruled off for two minutes, and just to show that this did not weaken them the "Petes" ran in two goals in quick succession. And at that Collins was one of their stars.

The visiting forwards, Ranger, Bailey, Rose, Burgess and Collins, played at the top of their form. They combined well together, and every man wearing the Liftlock City colors was tricky on the attack. Ranger surprised everybody by scoring four goals. In recent games the French flash has been used as a substitute, but Coach Smythe changed all that, and started him at left wing. To show his appreciation, Ranger scored the first goal of the game about a minute after, and after that he proceeded to be the most effective of the Peterboro attackers.

No Flash in Pan

For sheer brilliancy in his efforts, Irvin Bailey stood out. He twisted and squirmed his way among the Parkdale checkers and seemed to bear a charmed life. The puck appeared to be glued to his stick, and he did not have the slightest trouble in getting past the defense, but when he tried to get the rubber into the net it was different. On his play he deserved six goals, but he did not get any. Thompson outguessed him repeatedly.

Collins engineered some dangerous sallies into Parkdale territory, and twice he drilled the puck past Thompson. It was the best game that the smart Peterboro centre man has played here this season. He was the pivot man in most of the combination rushes, and he was always ready to shoot when they went in as relief men. Burr and Burgess also did effective work. They did not weaken the team any when they went in as relief men. Burgess was a favorite with the fans. He is only a little fellow, but persistency is his middle name. The McLeod-Parker defense came to early season form and played a mighty useful game. Each rushed as well as usual, and McLeod got one goal on a great shot from outside the defense. Parker proved to be an able puck-carrier and his checking was also good.

Dwyer Plays Well

Goalkeeper Joe Dwyer forgot about his injured hand, and gave one of his finest displays in front of the cage. Parkdale, although outclassed by their fast opponents, had many good chances to score, but Dwyer was too good for the local marksmen.

As for the Paddlers, they did their best. They had no outstanding performers. All were too busy trying to keep track of the visitors to do any starring. Jeffrey turned in his usually good game at right wing, and Scotty Cawkell also appeared to advantage. Harold Applegath got in a few good rushes and Mose Lount was the best Parkdale player in carrying the puck, but he fell down in his checking.

The weakest part about the Parkdale team was on the defense where Harris, Applegath and Lount failed to outguess the attackers. As a result the visitors got away with passes that should have been intercepted, and the "Petes" tricked them nicely and when the Parkdale did go after the pass went right in at top speed. The Parkdale defense men were helpless every time Bailey dashed down the ice. They were also very weak when they hooked up in a guessing duel with Collins.

Referee—M. J. Rodden.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN: SERIAL: THEATRES

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

The marquis looked down at the pale, upturned face with a frown.

"Luigi," he said, as if by some impulse, "did you ever see——" He stopped and bit his lip at his slip of the tongue; but the other smiled.

"Go on; see what?"

"I meant that picture of Murillo's in the Vatican; I mean the girl with the lilies."

"I know," said the blind man softly. "They call it 'The Lily and the Lilies.'"

"Yes, that is it; and yet it's a bad name for it. There is so much of the rose and the passion flower in her. I saw her this evening, Luigi; here in the park. Her eyes looked at me as they look out of the picture; shy, yet brave, sweet eyes, with the innocent wonder of a girl, the half-conscious witchery of woman, in them."

"A young English girl!" said the blind man musingly. "So beautiful!"

The marquis laughed grimly.

"Beautiful? I hate the word. It means just nothing; a doll's face and a simper. I tell you this girl——" He stopped with compressed lips, as if he repented what he had said.

"And you saw her for the first time, and here?" said Luigi, with intense yet unobtrusive interest and eagerness. "And it is her beauty, her witchery, that makes you sad; is that so?" He smiled. "Perhaps it is the sadness that comes before joy; the sigh that precedes the smile."

"Pretty, but vague," said the marquis, grimly. "You mean——what do you mean?"

The blind man touched the keys caressingly, and a love lyric began to throb round and about them.

"They say, Nairne," he said, "that for every soul born into the world some other is sent to mate with it. Perhaps—don't be angry—you have met your other soul here and to-night?"

The marquis frowned, and thrusting his hands into his pockets said sternly:

"Thanks, but I will get you to excuse me. Soul mating! Love! Keep it for setting to music, Luigi. There isn't such a thing in the outside world. And if there were, it is not for me. There goes the second bell. Wait here till I have dressed; I shall not be ten minutes," and he strode off.

CHAPTER V.

Miss Fanny Inchley waited until the marquis' tall form had disappeared round the bend, then she slid out of her hiding place and went down to the bridge, crossed it quickly, and then sauntered along the river bank toward the town, her sharp eyes keeping a constant watch in front and on either side of her.

It was evident that she was waiting for some one; and although he was quite unconscious of it, that some one was—Captain Sherwin.

She had only spoken to him once in her life, but on that occasion he had danced with her and that single dance had fired an ambition in the heart of Fanny Inchley which burned persistently and obstinately.

There were two balls held annually at Barefield; one in January and other in June, and everybody who was anybody, and a great many persons who were nobodies, attended them. Fanny, although she was only the niece of the Castle housekeeper, had gone to the one in January—the last one—and notwithstanding her red hair and eyes of uncertain hue, had attracted some attention.

It was John Wilkes, the ugliest man of his time, who declared that, give him three-quarters of an hour's start, he would undertake to beat the handsomest man in gaining a lady's favor, and Fanny Inchley might, reversing the sexes, have made the same assertion.

No one could have called her even pretty, but she possessed that nameless something which, call it fascination or the art of prepossessing or what you will, is very affective with men. Her thin figure was supple and always well dressed; whatever she wore seemed to harmonise with or set off the red hair and pale, small-featured face; and though Bridget and others of her sex had declared Miss Inchley's eyes to be green, no one, not even a woman, could deny that she had a trick of using them to the best advantage which girls with really good eyes often lacked. She was witty, she was clever, and she was very ambitious. She was only the housekeeper's niece, but she told herself that she meant to be—whatever she could be. Her father had been a dancing master in London, and at his death Mrs. Inchley, who had no children of her own, had adopted the little orphan, and had sent her to a good school—for Mrs. Inchley had a remarkably good situation, and had saved money. Fanny had displayed a good deal of intelligence at the boarding-school, and had soon outdistanced her fellow pupils, bringing with her to the Castle a little pile of prizes in handsome bindings, and quite filling the heart of her aunt with pride. She was so proud of her clever niece, indeed, that instead of sending her out as a governess, or apprenticing her to a milliner, she kept her at home in idleness; and in idleness Fanny wandered about the Castle dressing and carrying herself "quite like a lady," and "ladying" it over the servants, male and female.

Among those who had been attracted by Miss Fanny's diminutive figure and expressive eyes had been Captain Charles; and he had gone up to her and asked her for a dance. Fanny who had inherited her father's, the dancing master's skill, waltzed to perfection as the captain told her. He had also said various other pleasant things after the manner of the young military man, and had then gone his way and forgotten her. But Fanny had not forgotten him. She treasured the memory of that dance, and the pleasant commonplaces he had uttered in his soft, low voice, as things precious and ever to be remembered, and at night as she brushed out the light red locks—they were abundant and not without a certain kind of beauty—she pondered over all he had said and all she had heard of him.

One night she had amused herself by scribbling on a sheet of paper his name—"Captain Sherwin"; then she wrote her own under it, and then right down to the end of the page, "Mrs. Charles Sherwin," "Mrs. Sherwin," "Captain and Mrs. Sherwin." She tore the paper up very carefully and burned the fragments with a match, but "Mrs. Sherwin" remained dancing before her eyes, and never left her mind for a moment.

The captain lodged at a farmhouse—Owen's Farm it was called—on the other side of the valley, and it was his custom to ride or walk over to the club every afternoon, and return to dinner about eight o'clock. He generally came by the river bank, and by a strange coincidence Fanny very often happened to be walking there. Some times the Captain saw her and glanced at her—he did not remember her; women look so different in their ordinary everyday clothes from what they do in the gorgeous, glorious rament of the ballroom—and if he had remembered her, the captain would not probably have noticed her by any greeting, for at that time he had no thought or care for any other woman than Elaine Delaine.

But Fanny Inchley was not discouraged. If he would not speak to her of his own accord—well, some day she would him.

This evening she had decided that the time had come when she must make him; and although she sauntered along apparently so innocently aimless and meditative, picking a flower now and then, and stopping to watch the trout that jumped and flopped in the stream, her acute brain was busy with schemes and plans.

Presently she heard the soft pad, pad, of a horse's hoofs on the turf, and drawing her shawl closer round her heard, she stood and watched.

The sound came nearer, and very soon the captain appeared. He was riding slowly, and sat in the saddle in a brooding, dispirited and altogether limp fashion.

He looked—as he was—tired, disappointed, and out of sorts. He had climbed the hill after the scene with Elaine and the marquis, had got his horse at the cottage, and had then, avoiding the club, ridden along the lanes, chewing the cud of his discomfiture and mortification, and generally enjoying a very bad time of it. Then he had at last bethought him the time, and turned on the familiar ride home.

As he neared the bridge the spot reminded him of all he had undergone there a short time ago, and his weak, handsome face reddened, and his lips quivered in the way peculiar to them. He also swore a little. Your weak-minded man always swears when he has been vanquished, and invariably lays the blame, not on himself, but on other people. He felt intensely wretched and fearfully small. He was aching all over, for the marquis' grip was of a kind which leaves something to be remembered, and altogether he was in that plight when a man feels that he has been very badly treated and that all the world is against him.

As he passed the bridge he saw a slight girlish figure coming slowly toward him. He scarcely noticed her as she came along slowly, her head bent with sweet maidenly abstraction over some flowers she held in her hand; in such absorption that she evidently did not hear the approaching horse, for the captain had to swerve to the right to avoid riding over her, and she gave quite a start as she shrank with a little cry out of his path.

Cowls Followed Movie Company

As They Filmed "Frivolous Sal" in Mountains of Washington

Is the public interest in motion pictures waning? Ask Victor Schertzinger who directed J. K. McDonald's production, "Frivolous Sal" for First National. Or ask Eugene O'Brien, Mae Busch, Mitchell Lewis or Tom Santschi.

They went to Mount Rainier in Northwestern Washington for scenic backgrounds for the picture. Tourists came from hundreds of miles to watch them work.

Curious spectators followed the company for miles over steep trails followed them up behind the timber line into the perpetual snow that covers Mount Rainier.

One woman, obviously not dressed for hiking and unaccustomed to the out-of-doors, carried a babe in arms over two heavily woored mountain ridges and down slippery paths to see O'Brien mak elove to Miss Busch. No matter how inaccessible the locations Schertzinger selected, his assistants had to hold the crowds back with ropes to keep them out of the camera lines.

Practically every member of the cast was urged by interested bystanders to let them know when the picture would be shown in their city. Despite the crowds that watched the picture in the making, those seeing "Frivolous Sal" at the Griffin Theatre now will see a background of rare beauty, such as only Mother Nature can build.

The picture is a thrilling love drama of the pioneer west.

KEEPS A SERVANT EIGHTY-SIX YEARS

Comines, France, Feb. 23.—Eighty-six years' uninterrupted service in one family is the almost incredible record established by Mlle. Victoire Desrumaux. She entered the Lecomte household here in the capacity of maid at the age of 14 and has never left.

Monsignor Lecomte, Bishop of Amiens, who belongs to the family which employs her, presided at the double celebration of her 100th birthday and her record service, which was attended by all the prominent citizens of Comines and the region.

At the last regular meeting of the official board of the Seaforth Methodist church the pastor, Rev. R. Fulton Irwin, accepted a unanimous invitation to remain a fourth year.

Why not use Toilet Soap for washing dishes?

For nearly an hour and a half each day your hands are exposed to the harshness of strong, common soap!

And afterwards you look at them sorrowfully. Whiteness gone—all red and dried out.

Don't use common soap any longer! A spoonful of Lux skipped into a foamy suds will enable you to wash dishes quickly and easily. Lux softens water. It is as easy on your hands as the finest toilet soap.

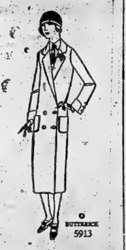
TOOK 12 MINUTES TO VOTE MORE PAY

Washington, Feb. 23— The Senate, without a murmur of protest, voted to increase the pay of its members. It passed the legislative appropriation bil in twelve minutes at a night session, but before passing it, added an amendment which increases the pay of members of the Senate and House from $7,500 to $10,000 a year and increase the pay of the vice-president, the speaker of the House and Cabinet members from $12,000 to $15,000. No one demanded a roll call for the purpose of having it appear in the Record whos tod for pay increase and who did not.

The legislative bill now goes back to the House, which has already passed it. It is expected the House will accept the amendment. President Coolidge cannot single out items in an appropriation bill to veto them. It is assumed he will sign the legislative bill, salary increase and all, although the added pay for Congress and Cabinet will cost the Treasury about $1,360,000 a year.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon



A French ensemble costume puts a coat of dark-brown kasha lined with almond-green crêpe de Chine over a green crêpe de Chine frock.

The greatest of all French tailors for the smartest of all tailor-mades, uses a long, double-breasted coat showing a few inches of the skirt, while in the Paris dressmakers' version of the same costume the coat is full length and the frock beneath is made of the coat material or the lining silk. In America, where the style is accredited to the Prince of Wales, the coat is most frequently used as a separate coat of the sports variety made of camel's-hair twills or homespun. As part of a tailored suit it is very smart in cheviot.

SOUTH SEAS RICH IN MINERALS

Papeete, Tahiti, Feb. 23—Exploration of the mineral resources in the island of Rurutu is bringing to light new varieties of deposits. Already a large body of almost pure manganese of the highest quality has been found, as well as an extensive deposit of paint rock and some traces of copper. But the most interesting discovery, a deposit of platinum ore, has been examined by European assayers, who have delivered very favorable reports. Rurutu is an island of the Austral Group, situated about 200 miles south of Tahiti.

Director Picks up Eskimo Language

And Uses Words to Direct "The Alaskan", Belle Feature

Herbert Brenon noted in Hollywood for his linguistic accomplishments introduced a new dialect during the filming of Thomas Meighans latest Paramount picture, "The Alaskan" a film version of James Oliver Curwood's story of the same name which Willis Goldbeck adapted to the screen. He directed an entire scene in Eskimo! This is the first time in the history of the cinema that a scene has been directed in the language of the world's most northerly people.

It came about quite by accident and proves that the popular director is an opportunist. Enroute to location, several scenes were made on the boat as she steamed along the northern coasts. Among the passengers were several Indians and Eskimos who were pressed into service as atmosphere. From one of the Eskimos, who spoke English, Brennon learned a number of words of command which he used in directing his companions. The Eskimos who had never seen a motion picture, entered into the thing with enthusiasm, although they had only a limited comprehension of what was being done.

Included with Estelle Taylor, John Sainpolis, Charles Ogle and Frank Campeau at the head of the cast supporting Thomas Meighan is Anna May Wong. Brenon surprised her, and incidentally the rest of the company by giving her directions for a scene in Chinese.

It would appear from the foregoing that if ever the League of Nations decides to produce a motion picture of the world Herbert Brenon is the man for the directorial job!

"The Alaskan" opens at the Belle Theatre tonight.

Picton News

Picton, Feb. 23—Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Clark were surprised by a number of their neighbors and friends on Monday evening, the occasion being the birthday of the hostess, Mrs. W. Crawford provided a beautiful birthday cake and a most delightful time was spent.

Many friends will regret to learn of the illness at her home on Maple avenue of Miss Elizabeth Dunkley, principal of Picton public school.

The W.C.T.U. will hold a sale of home cooking and afternoon tea at the library on Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Ela Welsh is visiting friends at Stirling.

Rev. Dr. Dyde will occupy the pulpit of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church on Sunday next.

William Clark has returned from Lowell Mass., where he went to attend the funeral of his brother, Lewis Clark, who passed away in hospital in that city after undergoing an operation for apendicitis. Mr. Clark leaves besides his brother, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Clark, Ontario Stret, Picton and a wife and family of three children in Lowell, Mass.

Mrs. Theda Roblyn Matheson, an old Picton girl will be the elocutionist at an entertainment in St. Andrew's Presbyerian church on the 23rd

Wife Took Life

Peterboro, Feb. 23.—That the death Friday of Mrs. John H. Cameron, 72 of 494 Aylmer Street, was so clearly a case of suicide that no inquest is necessary, was the statement made by Coroner Dr. T. W. H. Young Friday night.

Mrs. Cameron took her own life by slashing her throat with a large knife.

Mr. Cameron, husband of the deceased, was sifting ashes in the backyard and on his entering the house heard his wife moaning. He found her in the bathroom, bleeding to death, and had her rushed to the hospital, where she died shortly afterwards.

No reason, beyond an unwarranted depression, is assigned for the deed.

Mrs. Cameron (nee Emma Roberts) was born in Pickering, and was married a few months ago. She was formerly a nurse.

THE CHARM GIRL

And now we have coming the High School play, the big amateur theatrical effort of the season. This year the aim is to surpass all previous records, and those who saw the play which was put on at Griffin's last year will recall that it was a most creditable production of "Come Out of the Kitchen". "The Charm School" is the attractive comedy to be presented on Friday, March 6th. There is not a dragging moment in the play, but it is full of humdrous situations and comedy.

The story centres around a young man who inherits a girls' boarding school, through his aunt's will. He has very decided ideas about the training of young ladies, and he with his chum, attempts to bring up the young ladies in the way they should go, but complications set in and the plot thickens.

The best talent at the school has been procured for the presentation of this play, and as Miss Young, who is directing the play has always produced remarkably successful plays, there is no doubt that this will be as good if not better than former attempts.

Arrangements are being made for an advance sale of tickets, so that the rush and overcrowding of last year may be avoided.

"The Charm School" was put on by the Collegiate students at Delta, and the play was spoken of in very flattering terms by the Hamilton Herald.

Cooking Is An Open Book To This Woman Publisher

SINCE Adele Szold Seltzer is a partner with her husband in the firm of Thomas Seltzer, New York publishers, her capable feminine shoulders bear many of the responsibilities of management. But whether it's book lore or cook lore, Mrs. Seltzer is equally conversant with the newest tendencies. She is one publisher for whom cooking holds no mysteries.

Mrs. Seltzer has won recognition for her translations, important among which are "Batoula" and "The Adventures of Maya, the Bee." Another "translation" for which she has also won recognition—in her home—is her translation of various ingredients into a most delicious—

Tomato Pot Roast

Rub over with flour surface of a 4-pound piece of beef cut from lower round, and season it with salt and pepper. Finely chop 2 onions and fry them until brown in 3 tablespoons melted Crisco. Remove onions, put in meat, and cook it until well browned on all sides. Add can of tomatoes and 2 quarts water, cover, and let simmer for about 3 hours, or until meat is tender. Remove meat; thicken and strain liquor. Cut meat in slices and serve in sauce, or use cold for lunch.

TREASURE MEMORY NOTED SPORTSMAN

London, Feb. 23.—A group of English sportsmen are taking steps to open a national sports museum in London.

Exhibits would include busts and pictures of noted sportsmen, and bats, rackets, and clubs used by famous sportsmen, amateur and professional. A large library would also be a part of the museum.

The sum of $25,000 has been subscribed for purchasing exhibits and arranging them, when proper accommodation has been found.

BELGIAN TOWN IS BACK TO OLD FORM

Liege, Belgium, Feb. 23.—The little town of Vise, near the border line between Belgium and Germany, the first scene of German operations in August, 1914, has just completed its restoration program.

Vise was very badly scarred by fire, but all its historic edifices have been rebuilt in the old style. Principal among these are a 16th century church and town hall and a famous ancient convent school.

Take Salts If Stomach Isn't Acting Right

Separate School Board Held First Meeting of Year

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather ferments, the same as foods left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest; we belch up gas; we eructate sour food or have heart burn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink it while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to help neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used for many stomach disorders with excellent results.

Be Beautiful! Darken Hair

TRY GRANDMOTHER'S OLD FAVORITE RECIPE OF SAGE TEA AND SULPHUR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

NAMES

YOU meet Mr. Howard and Mr. Walters in a gathering. Their names are to you but two of many you hear.

A few days later you meet Mr. Howard again. And again. He becomes a friend, perhaps an intimate in your social as well as business life.

Mr. Howard's name grows to mean a lot to you. Mr. Walters is rarely seen again and soon forgotten.

In this newspaper are other names—names of advertised products. Day after day you see them. They are like old friends—to be trusted. Their names mean economy, full value and integrity.

The unadvertised products—perhaps you see one in a store—or in a friend's home. Soon the name is forgotten—a stranger about whom you know little.

Fill your medicine closet, your pantry, your wardrobe with products whose names are guarantees of their integrity—advertised products. Like intimate friends—you know what they are and will do.

Anti-Capitalist is Frank About Work

Tells What Internationale is Doing in Canada; Organizing West

Toronto, Feb. 23—Tim Buck, one of the leading Communists of Toronto, who has been associated with Malcolm Bruce and John McDonald, of Toronto, in the publication of "The Worker" as the organ of the Worker's Party, is at present out in the Province of Alberta "organizing."

John McDonald who is well known in the labor movement and who has visited Russia, speaking of the despatch from Moscow as printed in the "Pravda" regarding Communistic propaganda in Canada said: "There is some truth mixed up with a lot of bunk. It is true that we are organizing us workers for the destruction of capitalism, but it is not true that we organized the miners' strike. Nor is it true that we have been fighting organized labor. We always fought the one big union idea because it was destructive to the international."

Mr. McDonald says they have also opposed military training in the schools and the Boy Scout movement, as nothing more or less than preparing human fodder for the cannons in the next war.

No Schools of Communism

Referring to the Workers' organ, Mr. McDonald said the paper was a four page sheet and that in the effort to raise $5,000 to make it a six-page paper they had been successful in getting only $1,800 which provided them with sufficient funds to put out a six-page paper once a month. There were one or two other pamphlets published.

"There are no schools of communism that I know of," said Mr. McDonald, "it is true that we are trying to educate the young who will be men in the future in what we believe the principles most acceptable to the workers." So far as he was able to speak Mr. McDonald says conditions are better in Russia than they are here, and that as far as the Soviets were concerned Mr. McDonald says they are simply bodies like the unemployed association which meets in Toronto, or the Trades and Labor Council and are local in character.

Police "Mum"

Major Newsome of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, declined to say what the police activities were in connection with the Communistic movement. He left the impression that he had certain information that could not be communicated except through the head office at Ottawa.

From a provincial police point of view, the existence of Communism or Communistic schools is a Dominion matter and is of no special care of the provincial police. General Williams, Commissioner of Police for Ontario, said he had not been advised of any movement detrimental to the community and that if there was, it was more a matter for the local police and the Dominion than for the province.

Deputy Chief of Police Beatty, of the Toronto force stated that the city police had for some time been keeping tab on the movements of the Communists, but was not aware that anything unlawful was happening. The Dominion police are doing their own work in their own way, he says, without reference to anybody.

Condemned Man Married in Cell

Murderer Takes Wife That She May Have Canadian Rights

Winnipeg Feb. 22.—The white-washed death cell of the provincial jail was the scene of a tragic marriage. Harry Tatarniuk condemned murderer, who will hang this coming Wednesday for strangling his aunt, was one of the principals, and the other, a woman, to whom in far off Galica, more than ten years ago, he had plighted his troth. The second marriage was arranged by friends of the family so that the wife of the murderer could claim her rights under the Canadian law, and be made eligible for payment under the mothers' allowance act of the province. All records of the former marriage were lost.

A Ruthenian priest performed the ceremony. While he was pronouncing the solemn words of the ritual, carpenters outside were busy hammering and sawing, in piecing together the scaffold on which Tatariuk will hang Wednesday for his sordid crime. The guards who for months have been watching Tatarniuk as he paced to and fro within the death cell, were asked by the priest to act as witnesses. When all was over the woman fainted. All through the ceremony her tears flowed freely, while the murderer tense with emotion, had several times to be held to his feet or he would have collapsed. The priest himself was deeply affected, and read with difficulty the words of the ritual.

Before the new-made wife was led from the death cell, Tatarniuk embraced her. Sobs shook his body, and salty tears coursed down his face. A goodbye kiss and then another, and the pair were separated by jail officials, never to meet again this side of eternity.

Counsel for Tatarniuk, Friday, wired Ottawa, pleading that sentence of death be commuted to life imprisonment. No reply has been forthcoming.

In the mean time, in a corner of the jail yard, the gibbet of death has been erected. Hangman Ellis has been asked to officiate; and will arrive in Winnipeg early Tuesday. The corner's jury has been selected, and jail officials have made all arrangements for the carrying out the grim sentence of the law.

St. John Girl is Heroine of Fire

Despite Flames and Smoke, 12-Year-Old Girl Rescues 7

Canadian Press Despatch)

St. John, N.B., Feb. 21.—Twelve-year-old Margaret Davis was the heroine of what might have been a fire tragedy here last night when by her own efforts she rescued seven children from almost certain death in a blaze that swept a three-storey house on Main street. There were ten children in the house when the blaze started four belonging to Mrs. James Mott and others brothers and sisters of Margaret Davis. The only exit was at the front of the building and immediately on the outbreak, Margaret seized two of the Mott children, their mother taking two more and carried them from danger. Despite flames and smoke, Margaret returned to the burning home and bore other little ones to safety. The youngest was 18 months old.

Siamese Flappers Enjoy Boyish Bob and Daily Dip

"OH, boy, that was some dip!" Translate this into the language of Siam, and you will know what the bathing beauty shown in the picture is saying. It may not sound the same in Siamese as it does in "American," but it expresses the same emotion.

The Siamese flapper is as keen for the daily dip as she is for the latest style in boyish bobs. Although her bathing equipment does not include a shower attachment or the familiar cake of Ivory, she is blissfully unconscious of the omission.

By the attention she gives to the adjusting of her "panung," or national dress, and by the happy smile she is wearing, we suspect that this bathing beauty has a heavy "date" with some Siamese Valentino.

States Planning Huge Sham Battle

Half of Personnel of U.S. Navy Will Take Part

San Pedro, Cal., Feb. 23.—Half the personnel of the United tates navy will engage in what is declared to be one of the greatest sham battles in American naval history, off the coast of Lower California, Mexico, some time between Feb. 25 and March 12, when the Pacific battle fleet, based here, is to go forth to meet the scouting fleet from the east coast, theoretically trying to force an entrance to Los Angeles harbor.

The combined strength of the fleets engaged in the manoeuvers will be 13 battleships, 120 scout cruisers, destroyers and other war craft and 12 squadrons of aircraft. These will be manned by some 40,000 men.

The eastern fleet of Vice-Admiral Josiah S. McKeen is scheduled to leave its winter quarters at Guantanamo Bay Feb. 13, but, theoretically, it will be late in the month when Admiral S. S. Robinson, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, learns that the "enemy" is approaching and leaves here to meet them. The probable meeting place will be Magdalena Bay, Lower California, as the eastern fleet will seek to establish a base there. Admiral Coonts, commander-in-chief of the naval forces, will witness the "battle" from his flagship, the Seattle.

After the battle problem has been solved the two fleets will unite and proceed to Los Angeles harbor for overhauling, preparatory to sailing to Hawaii about the first of April.

OLD TIMERS DO NOT BELIEVE RIVER MOIRA WILL ACT UP DANGEROUSLY THIS SEASON

But Property Owners Are Taking all Precautions To-day

ICE MOVING FAST

Rush Reported at Lazier's Mill Was Held Up

Basing their calculations upon past performance of the Moira River, which drains the north land through Belleville to Quinte Bay, citizens who have witnessed several serious floods here, felt confident at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon that if there would be a flood, it would not assume alarming proportions.

"The water is not rising rapidly," they argue, "and if anything, has lowered since the ice jam pushed towards the Bay for a short distance at 12.30 o'clock, noon."

There is a genuine jam in the river yet, however, and at 1.45 o'clock the ice broke below Lazier's Paper Mills and commenced to roll towards the bay at a rate equal to the speed of an automobile which is proceeding at a moderate speed. Anxious expectancy resolved into suspense however, for scores who scurried to vantage points to see the big rush when it arrived. It must have lodged. It has not yet arrived.

Merchants in the flood area have made wise preparation for to-day's occurrence—if it occurs.

Goods stored in the basements of their stores have been long since moved to higher and drier places, so that water in the cellars will be more inconvenient than serious.

"We shall gather at the river", seems to be the unanimous decision of citizens to-day, for there is an agitation in the Moira, the usually quiet stream which has been sealed since late autumn. Touched by the warm sun rays, and awakened to new life by recent, incessant rains, the sleepy Moira yawned Monday afternoon and started the first rumors of the annual spring flood scare here, which by the by is three weeks earlier than usual this year.

During the night the ice pushed forward, and when Belleville had awakened this morning the river was no longer the smooth skating surface of Sunday, but a jagged succession of projecting ice slabs many eighteen inches thick and probably weighing tons. The ice first heaved above the Upper bridge Monday afternoon after surface water had rolled over it on its course to the bay to a depth estimated at one foot. Many believed the ice to be out and flood dangers past, when they saw the rush of water during the afternoon, but the more experienced citizens—well acquainted with the spree antics of the Moira knew that the worst was yet to come.

It came during the night, when the ice in the river heaved generally, and pushed forward, clearing the stream above the Upper bridge for half the width of the river. The ice piled up about the foot bridge and beyond, a distance half way to the Lower bridge where there is another jam, the ice being unable as yet to pass the bridge piers. From the Upper bridge southwards to a point just south of the Cooper mills the river is clear also, and the swollen waters swirl to the bay through the newly opened outlet.

Remove Guy Wires

The flood danger is imminent to-day. Before 8.30 o'clock this morning workmen of the Public Works Department had removed the guy wires which hold the foot bridge in position. Already the huge ice cakes had brushed against, and in some instances rested upon the stout wires, which though twice as stout might not stand the pressure of a mis-behaving ice jam. Their removal also prevents the ice from pulling the bridge out of position when it disturbs the wires.

Of course this does not vouch for the safety of the handy and overworked foot bridge which has been carried away on former occasions by the spring rush, and those who are studiously absent-minded should beware on crossing the river lest the bridge may have "moved".

The Upper bridge, Foot bridge, Lower bridge, river bank and abuttment walls are impromptu look-out posts today for scores of citizens who stand in constant expectancy, comfortable in a sun which savours of spring-awaiting the action of the elements. It is probably well that rains have ceased, but the warm sun's effect upon the ice may also be conducive to flood conditions.

Roads in Good Shape

While on the subject of spring novelties, it might be stated that the roads are in very good condition considering this month in the year. It is possible to travel by automobile from Belleville to Picton Trenton Frankford Stirling, and as far as Plainfield towards Tweed.

Marmora cannot be reach by car as yet. The highway, though not the best in places, is also passable. The roads are not being seriously cut up as yet, though the snow is rapidly disappearing. In places however, there are a few bad ruts. The frost has not come out to any extent as yet, though the heavy rains have softened the gravel roads some.

Citizens Are Urged To Use Own Park

Board Points Out No Charge Is Made For It

At a busy meeting of Belleville Parks Board, held Monday a motion was passed authorizing the secretary to draught a circular letter inviting all churches and fraternal societies in the city and district to make use of Victoria park here for picnic purposes no charge to be made whatever.

Besides much routine business, the meeting granted the use of the grounds to the Wharf Street Debating Club for their big picnic on Wednesday, July 8th next. This date has been changed by the club members, who, of course found it necessary to secure the permission of the board to use the grounds on that date.

The Orange Societies of this district have also requested the use of the Fair Grounds for either July 11th or 13th, both dates being reserved for the present for those societies.

Many Young Folk At Short Courses

Harold Cummings Elected President of Junior Farmers' Association

Over two hundred young men and ladies in Hastings County have attended short courses under the direction of the Ontario Department of Agriculture this winter. Courses were held at Wallbridge in Sidney Township in agriculture, sewing and millinery, home nursing and first aid and domestic science. Over one hundred and twenty young people were enrolled and attended regularly for five weeks. During the course for young men a Junior Farmers Improvement Association was organized with the following officers:

President—Harold Cummings.
1st Vice-Pres.—Clayton Eggleton.
2nd Vice-Pres.—George Ketcheson.
Sec.-Treas.—Harold Longwell.
Directors—Frank Jeffrey, Frank Moon, William Rogers, Leo Mulvihill.

At the conclusion of the course a banquet was held.

At Springbrook in Rawdon township eighty young people are now taking advantage of the course there.

Gas Tax Will Not Affect Tractors

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 24. — Discussing the working out of the new tax of three cents per gallon on gasoline, Premier Ferguson pointed out that while the tax would be collected from the first distributor handling the gasoline, eventually the consumer who used it for purposes other than motor vehicles, would be able to obtain a rebate by filling out an affidavit which would be provided for. This would relieve from the tax gasoline used for farm implements, manufacturing, cleaning, etc.

The Eighth Child Was Much Wanted Girl Villagers Baked Biggest Cake Ever Seen

(Associated Press Despatch)

Guderup, Germany, Feb. 24—Marta Viereck's arrival in the world was celebrated by this entire village, which hauled a gigantic cake that covered an entire wagon through the town and presented it to Hans Viereck and his wife Gretchen in honor of the little daughter's birth.

The Vierecks have seven sons and had always wanted a daughter. So when the villagers heard that the stork was about to visit the Vierecks again the parents were promised that they should have the biggest cake Guderup has ever seen if a sister was born to the seven Viereck boys.

When the announcement was made that the child was a girl, work began on the gigantic cake. No oven was big enough to hold it so it was baked in eight parts, one for each of the little Vierecks and these were placed together and hauled triumphantly through the streets to the home of the happy parents.

SAYS BIG BOAT MIGHT NOT GO UP WATERWAY

Elmer Davis, Kiwanis Speaker, Show Both Sides Of Project.

WOULD WAIT AWHILE

Backs Ottawa River Development in the Meantime

That there was much to be said for and against the development of the St. Lawrence waterways, and that Canadians should examine both sides of the argument before plunging into great scheme was the message brought to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at noon to-day by Kiwanian Elmer Davis of the Kingston Club.

The speaker told of the cheaper transportation that would result from the successful completion of the proposal and dwelt for a moment on the wonderful prospect of pushing ocean traffic right into the heart of a continent. But he also brought to his audience the great obstacles in the way of the undertaking, stressing particularly the grave danger that after the deepening had taken place marine interests might not be willing to run the risk of sending the great ocean liners through the dangerous passageway.

Mr. Davis applauded the move of the Ferguson government in sponsoring the development of the Ottawa river by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and counselled Canadians and Ontario people especially to back this plan now, leaving the vaster project for sometime later.

Another Show Coming

After receiving the congratulations of the club on his appointment as Chairman of Publicity for the district, Secretary George Griffin said the attendance competition started on March first and then announced that the show committee had plans in hand for a St. Patrick's day skit at the Griffin theatre, March 17.

Kiwanian Elmer Davis of Kingston, received a great welcome from the club. He is an old and valued friend of Belleville Kiwanians.

Introducing his subject for the day, Kiwanian Davis said the growth of the Belleville Club had been watched with pride by the Kingston club, which had fathered the local organization.

There was a big opportunity for Kiwanis Clubs to widen out their field of activity, he said, to lay aside political differences and push projects for the general good fo the country.

An organized body of representative men with a single purpose would certainly command the respect and attention of the powers that be.

A Shortage of Power

Ontario at large, and particularly Eastern Ontario, was facing a serious shortage of electric power. In his city, Kingston, they were at the limit, no large installations such as electric ranges or grates being possible now.

The great development of all ages had been visionary, at one time or other he said. And vision was needed in Canada these days.

In regard to the St. Lawrence Deep Waterways scheme, there was a sharp difference of opinion. He was not going to advocate or oppose scheme. He would give the two sides of the question and let Kiwanians decide for themselves.

Transportation was a large problem in Canada now and Canada was paying high for her vast distances.

Saving in Cost

The rail haul to the head of the Great Lakes for wheat was 15 cents a bushel. The boat haul to Port Colborne was 4 cents; from Port Colborne to Montreal it was 6 cents per bushel. The problem confronting us was the reduction on that cost.

The first step, he said, was the widening of the Welland Canal so as not to break bulk at Port Colborne or to have the grain travel through the United States.

The next step was to deepen the St. Lawrence so that ocean vessels could go 2,200 miles into the heart of the continent.

Under this plan it was proposed to deepen the St. Lawrence to 32 feet and to reduce the number of locks and make them much larger.

If through transportation from Liverpool to Fort William was commercially possible, from one third to one half the cost of carrying wheat he said. Or in other words, the saving to every farmer in the west would be $60 for every 2,000 bushels.

At the Long Sault, an international power development was proposed, of which Canada's share would be 732,000 h.p., at a cost of $75,000,000 or probably as high as $150,000,000.

Some Difficulty

Dealing with difficulties at hand, Kiwanian Davis said one of those was the lack of unanimity. The interests of the Federal Government and the provincial governments clashed. The Hydro Electric Power Commission wanted one thing and the Waterways Commission wanted another. Again the Canadian interests were opposed to some of those in United States. New York State was fighting the project tooth and nail as men there realized the tremendous blow that would be struck at New York transportation and the Erie Canal especially.

On top of that there was the question as to whether the marine interests would send their ocean boats to the head of the lakes. Would the great mariners who like sea room be willing to push their huge ships through the cramped and tortuous passages of the St. Lawrence? Could they afford to do it?

Could cargoes be obtained for inward bound vessels? Would insurance rates be raised on boats going inland?

The St. Lawrence area was very susceptible to fog, particularly in the mornings. Major accidents were common on the St. Lawrence.

Advises Caution

Kiwanian Davis was not knocking the scheme, he said, but he felt it behooves Canadians to look at both sides of the question before plunging headlong into the scheme, remembering, too, Canada's huge national debt which was growing larger.

He believed Canadians would live to see the day when the St. Lawrence would be a reality but he did not believe the time to be ripe now.

Referring to Premier Ferguson's announcement that the Ontario government would back the Hydro development of the Ottawa River, he said that that was a better plan for the time, being; better than plunging into the larger scheme.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was moved and seconded by Harry Bryant and George Cole.

"I knew you would," said Magistrate Jelfs. "Your kind is always cowardly where physical punishment is concerned. I never saw a wife beater yet who would willingly take the lash."

James Richardson Made Many Happy

Kingston Man Sends Check For One-Time Worthles Sock

Kingston, Feb. 24.—Saturday, February 14th, was put entirely in the shade as Vallentine Day by the handsome tokens which the mailman distributed to many local citizens on Saturday, February 21st, when the former shareholders of the Frontenac Floor & Wall Tile Co. received from Mr. James A. Richardson the remaining three-quarters of their original investment in that company. Just a little over a year ago Mr. Richardson, inspired by the greatest generosity, paid back one-quarter of the investment to the original shareholders who had turned their stock over to him when the company was hard pressed after the outbreak of the war. At that time he promised that when the company's finances would permit the balance of the investment would be paid back as well. Saturday's mail brought these checks to Kingston amounting in total to many thousands of dollars.

The most noteworthy feature of this generous action is that it is done without the slightest obligation. When the company was in severe straits as a result of war conditions the shareholders were ready to give up. Mr. James Richardson offered to take over the company, and all the shareholders turned over their holdings of stock, worthless at that time, to him.

Through the magic of his own financial genius that golden touch which has produced so many successful industries in Canada, Mr. Richardson carried the Frontenac Tile Company through its period of depression and soon had it on a profit-making basis. By the investment of more money he expanded the plant and increased its output. Now with the company earning its way, and all of its profits belonging to the one man who carried it through and is still at the head of it, Mr. Richardson turns to the original investors who started the company and refunds every cent of the money they had put into it, and which they considered as lost when the company came to the verge of failure and they turned their shares over as worth less.

That the Frontenac Floor & Wall Tile Company is today one of Kingston's flourishing industries, employing Kingston labor and turning out a product of such quality as to make i tknown allover the country, is a tribute to the business leadership of Mr. James Richardson, whose generous action of the past few days is only one of an almost endless chain for which the people of Kingston owe thanks to him and his family.

LENT STARTS TO-MORROW

The Lenten season opens Wednesday to-morrow, and will continue until Easter Sunday, April 12th. During the period special services will be held in St. Michaels church, as well as St Thomas Anglican and Christ church.

WETS ARE NOT SATISFIED BY STRONGER BEER

Convention Goes on Record For Local Option To-day

HELLMUTH SPEAKS

Declares 4.4 Per Cent. Not Adequate To Meet Need

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 24.—I. L. Hellmuth, K.C., President of the Ontario Moderation League, declared at a convention of that organization here today, that he "could not see eye to eye" with Premier Ferguson and the Government of Ontario, in the matter of 4.4 per cent beer.

"The Moderation League must insist on Government sale and control of all beverages and if we cannot have that we should have the privilege of local option," said Mr. Hellmuth.

Continuing, the President of the League said that while differing with the Premier on the question of stronger beer meeting the urgent necessities of the present situation, he would admit that "it was on step in the direction of true temperance.

It was not adequate, he said, to the need as indicated by recent plebiscite.

"I have no desire," said Mr. Hellmuth, "to join in the chorus of abuse which the recent prohibition convention turned against the Premier. That is not any part of our stock in trade. He had a difficult situation to meet but I do not impute his integrity in the way he met it."

Says Act Unworkable

Mr. Hellmuth referred to the impossibility of enforcing the O.T.A. when such a large proportion of the population did not think it was a crime to take a drink of beer or whiskey, and there were so many who were neither saints nor devils and were not opposed to the use of "One of God's gifts, who recognized that the act was unworkable.

Resolutions affirming the stand of the League for Government control and favoring local option were sent to the resolutions committee. Mayor Foster of Toronto arrived just as the convention adjourned for lunch.

Says Mrs Caniff In Los Angeles

Intelligencer Receives Letter From Friend in Wavy Bank, Manitoba

The Intelligencer today received a letter which gives a definite clue as to the present residence of Mrs. Helen Caniff whom The Assets Realization Company of Los Angeles wish to locate. The letter firstly assures that Mrs. Caniff is alive and that she lives in Los Angeles, though the informant is unable to supply the street address. Mrs. Caniff has evidently married again according to the letter.

When John C. Vanek, manager of the Assets Realization Company, suite 320, Black building, Los Angeles, Cal., first wrote to The Intelligencer asking for assistance in locating Helen Caniff, widow of the late M. W. Caniff, the request was published in these columns, that this company desired to locate Helen Caniff as property had been located which needed the attention of the widow or heirs-at-law.

On Saturday, February 14th. Mrs. Gilbert Mason of Canifton visited The Intelligencer and supplied what information she could about the Caniff family, she being a cousin of the late M. W. Caniff. Mrs. Mason has since written to Mrs. John Bouskill, who lives at Wavy Bank, Manitoba, (near Winnipeg), and it is from Mrs. Bouskill The Intelligencer has received the letter.

Probably the letter explains the situation as minutely as possible. It follows:

Wavy Bank P.O., Man.,
February 19, 1925.

Belleville Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

I received a letter today from a cousin in Canifton, asking the location of Helen Caniff, my brother's widow. I am very sorry I cannot give you her present address. After she married the second time I lost track of her, but I know she still lives in Los Angeles. I cannot even remember her second name, but will endeavour to find out if possible. There is some mistake about my brother living in Los Angeles, as he died in Kamloops, B.C., before his widow went there to live. She has a brother by the name of Jeff Davis living at Santa Fe, I think. Now I will introduce myself. I am M. W. Caniff's only surviving sister, daughter of Jonas Caniff and Mary Bowell, (sister of Sir Mackenzie Bowell of Belleville), I am the only Caniff left of our family. If I can be of any assistance to you in locating my sister-in-law, I will gladly help all I can.

Yours truly,
Mrs. John Bouskill,
Wavy Bank P. O.,

Press Of Detroit Takes Up Fete

Give Space to News of Coming Celebration in Belleville

Sunday's edition of the Detroit News and Detroit Free Press circulated very creditable reports on the 110th Peace Anniversary and Old Boys' Re-union which is to be held here August next, also kind words for Belleville's first citizen Mayor Mikel. The following account appeared in both newspapers:

Among the well known Canadians who will attend the grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons, which opens at Windsor on Wednesday, February 25, is His Worship W. C. Mikel, K.C., mayor of the city of Belleville.

Arrangements have been made to celebrate the 110th anniversary of the peace between Canada and the United States at Belleville next August 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, and Mayor Mikel will visit Detroit on Thursday next in connection with this great peace celebration, and will call on the mayor and other leading citizens. He will be glad to meet former Canadians and others interested in the peace celebration at noon at the Detroit City Hall on Thursday, February 26.

Canada is one of the few countries that has but one foreign neighbor, and Canada and the United States are inhabited largely by the same kind of people that live in Europe, where they have been fighting for a considerable portion of the last 100 years, while the people of these two countries have lived side by side in peace and concord. The governors of Michigan and other border states will be invited, and the president or vice-president of the United States is expected to attend the celebration.

Mayor Mikel is a leading lawyer of Ontario and has been president of the Ontario Bar association. He has also been president of the Ontario Municipal association and president of the Canadian Fraternal association, representing a membership of over 400,000 Canadians.

"Sufferin' Cats" Says Hamilton Official When Peterboro,s Plan Is Put Up To Him

Hamilton Feb. 24.—Although the city fathers of Peterboro have decided to swell the municipal coffers by a tax upon the pussy which serenades at night on the back fence the idea is not likely to spread. Although there is need for increased revenue in Hamilton, civic officials say that they will not stoop to such methods.

"Sufferin' cats!" ejaculated Secretary Herbie Barr, of the property and license committee when he heard of the scheme. Herbie could not see the idea at all. "It would be a hardship on many poor people who like cats" he said. "I don't know why we tax dogs now. At first the idea of the tax on dogs was to keep their number down but now it has become a tax for revenue purposes. I guess it's enough to tax dogs without taxing cats, too. I'd tax bobbed hair though," he added. "The girls who bob their hair spend their money recklessly anyway."

"I would not tax the cat that performs on the back fence," said Mayor Jutten. "I'd shoot it. That's far more effective." However, speaking seriously, his worship said that if the civic authorities could not keep the tax rate down without going to such extremes as taxing cats, they might as well let the rate go up. "We tax dogs and we only get about $4000 a year out of it", he said. "There are other and better way of raising revenue than taxing poor pussy."

FAILED TO FIND CHEESE MAKER VICTIM OF ACT

Provincial Committee Reports on Dairy Standards Law

RECOMMEND SCHOOL

Would Establish it in Eastern Ontario to Test Vegetables

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 24— The report of the special agricultural committee of the legislature was tabled in the House this afternoon by Chairman Dr. Jamieson, M.L.A.

The Committee held 54 meetings in all parts of the province. The committee states the report, failed to find any injury to the cheese industry through the Dairy Standards Act. It does not recommend any drastic forcing of consolidation of cheese factories.

The committee recommends that the Noxious Weed Act be enforced by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and that a Province-wide campaign be started to combat weeds.

On fruit and vegetables the committee recommends the establishment of a government farm in eastern Ontario to test the best varieties of vegetables and that in the apple growing districts, experts be appointed to assist agricultural representatives.

Prince Of Wales Takes King's Place

Will Act at Two Levees at Buckingham Palace

London, Feb. 24.—The King's progress is so satisfactory that for the first time since he was stacked by bronchitis his physicians yesterday decided that it was needless to issue a bulletin. All three of them however visited the palace to-night as usual.

The King is now sleeping better and is quite cheerful.

It is not known yet when his majesty will be able to start on his cruise in the Mediterranean for which preparations are being made, in keeping with the advice of the attending physicians, but it is generally expected about a fortnight hence.

Under present arrangements the Prince of Wales who returned to London last night to fulfill some engagements will act for the King at the two levees at Buckingham Palace on March 10 and 19; thus these functions will not be abandoned, as was first supposed. This will be the first occasion on which the Prince of Wales will fill such an important state duty.

HASTINGS COUNTY CLUB IS ACTIVE

Toronto, Feb. 24—More than 250 persons were present last night at the fifth annual dinner and dance of the Hastings Club held in the Carls-Rite Hotel. Following an excellent dinner, a program of music and speechmaking was indulged in, after which the guests danced until 1 a.m. The officers of the club were elected for the coming year. These are: President, Clifford Hall; vice-President, Edward Gladney; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Phoebe Kerr-Sargent; while the committee is composed of representatives from the various towns in the county.

Among those who spoke, recalling in their speeches some of the glories and beauties of Hastings were J. F. Hill, M.P.P., and W. H. Ireland, M.P.P. The toast to "The Club" was proposed by Ed Gladney and responded to by V. Faulkner. Arthur Abbott proposed the toast to "The Country" which was responded to by Jim Parker. Songs were rendered by Miss Sirethal Walton of Belleville and Russel Johnstone.

BE AN ARCHITET

Business is after all a reciprocal matter. Stores are not alone for the merchants who own them nor are they only for the people who trade with them. Without the other the merchant cannot sell and the customer cannot buy. And reasoning in the negative, if the merchant does not satisfy the customer the customer will trade elsewhere, and if the customer trades elsewhere the merchant is deprived of the opportunity of striving to satisfy the customer.

By trading at home with home-town merchants, the people of Belleville become the architects of their own business places. They create the demand and the home manufacturer and home town merchant, assured of the demand, do not fail in meeting it. It is always more convenient to trade at home, and assured of your trade the home town manufacturer and merchants will find it quite convenient to meet every merchandise wish.

Every citizen of Belleville is interested in the growth and improvement of the community, but many of those who trade out-of-town do not realize that community improvements begin with the improvement of its business. The business of a town or city or country is its life-blood. Knowing this no citizen will stunt the natural and deserving expansion of his country and his home town while fostering that of another community and its business.

WHERE ARE CANADIAN ROAD MACHINE MAKERS?

An evidence of the effect of lack of proper tariff protection for Canadian industries was seen at the conference of County and Township Roads Superintendents at the Provincial Highways Building yesterday morning. On University avenue there is an exhibit of road-making machinery from Indianapolis. Yet, with all the highway construction that is taking place throughout Canada, not one Canadian manufacturer is present with his product.

TO LENGTHEN LIFE

Dr. Charles J. Hastings, medical officer of health, Toronto, in a brief article advocating "A complete physical examination by your family physician on your birthday," says that by doing this, a period anywhere from five to twenty-five years may be added to one's life.

"A complete physical examination demonstrates the frequency and seriousness of the chronic diseases of the heart, kidneys, arteries, liver and other organs, the existence of which is frequently not even suspected.

"These wasting diseases of middle life unfortunately come on insidiously, and the only way by which they can be detected and their disastrous results controlled, is by a complete physical examination, which you should have made by your family physician at least once a year."

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

Nurmi The Record Smasher

PAAVO NURMI, the Finn at Madison Square Garden in New York City a short time ago, showed himself to be the greatest runner of all time.

He beat Joie Ray of Chicago and Willie Ritola from his own country in the one-mile race and the 5,000 meter run.

He seems to be an extraordinary human machine. He runs with precision and accuracy and a certain rhythm. He has stamina and speed. Like all great artists he does his work easily and seems to think nothing of his performance.

Every once in a while some extraordinary man seems to stand out from his fellows. Now it is a man with a great brain, and again it is one with a tremendous physical organization. Nurmi seems to be about as near perfection as the physical frame has reached. In his American performance he repeated his European triumphs.

In the 5,000-metre run he broke the tape twenty yards or so in front of his chief rival in 14 minutes 44 3-5 seconds. This is a record for a 5,000 metre run.

Nurmi seems to win his races not by trying, but by calling upon his extraordinary endowment of physical forces. His success is not due to any extraordinary effort on his part, but to the fact that Nature has equipped him in a remarkable way.

The fact that this runner comes from Finland is a proof that the Creator picks his champions in the most unexpected places. No one expected anything out of Finland, just as no one expected anything out of Kentucky when Abraham Lincoln was born.

This was Nurmi's first experience on an indoor track and was performed after a transatlantic journey of some difficulty. But his triumph was made with that smoothness and precision for which he is noted. A crowd of unusual size witnessed this success and thousands of people were turned away for lack of room.

He was the outstanding star in the Olympic Games of 1920 and 1924 and is still going strong. He is undoubtedly the most perfect runner in the world and has broken the record for all time.

There is no especial moral to be drawn from this. Nurmi is simply better equipped physically than other men, and by sobriety and industry has conserved his splendid physique.

That he is better than other men is explained by the fact that in every forest some tree must be the tallest. So in every crowd of men some man must be the strongest.

He is entitled to all the glory he can get, for his fame has been won by fair competition against competent rivals.

ESTIMATES SHOW KING GOVERNMENT'S EXTRAVAGANCE

The main estimates submitted to Parliament show that expenditure during the coming fiscal year, instead of going down, will go up. They call for an expenditure of $402,704,597, which is only $3,692,278 below the total voted, both main and supplementary passed last session.

This shows beyond all doubt that the appropriations made this session will much exceed those of last year. It must be borne in mind that the supplementary estimates have still to be brought down, and it will be surprising if they do not reach $20,000,000.

That this is not a rash guess is evident from the following. The Government has announced that it will bring in a bill this session to recoup the Home Bank depositors, and as the latter ask for 60 cents on the dollar, this, if granted, means nearly $10,000,000 alone. Then there is $1,200,000 in the form of a subsidy for the new trans-Atlantic service. Add to these a number of other items that are sure to make their appearance during a pre-election year, and it will be seen that another $20,000,030 is not an extravagant estimate.

The Government's first announcement made it appear that the estimates were only $342,036,597, and that this was $6,933,279 below those of last year. This did not include the estimates for the Canadian National Railways and the Government Merchant Marine, which add another $60,868,000. But the Government got the benefit of the first announcement that the estimates were only $342,036,597.

Thus, at a time when all other governments are reducing expenditure and trying hard to balance their budgets the King Government proposes to spend more money. Its supporters have ceased to talk economy and are spending their time justifying expenditure. Under such conditions there can be no reduction in taxation. The taxes will go up instead of down.

This increased expenditure is going on at a time when the country is being confronted, not with a surplus, but with the heaviest decline in revenue in its history. For the loss in revenue during the first ten months of this fiscal year was $50,000,000. And yet it is proposed to spend more. No wonder taxes are high.

The call of Norfolk Street Methodist Church Guelph to Rev. H. A. Graham, for four years pastor of Colborne Street Methodist Church Brantford, has been accepted by him and he will be succeeded here by Rev. Hoyard L. Roberts, at present pastor of the Lundy's Lane Methodist Church, Niagara Falls.

Press Opinions

"BRITISH OPPRESSION"

London Morning Post:

"When we look back on the days when we were oppressed by England it would look like Paradise if we could get the same kind of oppression now." Coming from Mr. John Dillon the old irreconcilable, that is striking testimony indeed; and the bitterness of the witness' situation can hardly be abated by the reflection that it is a situation which he helped with his own hands to contrive. What Mr. Dillon realizes so painfully is the ruinous inefficiency of this Free State Government, with its extravagant taxation and its indefatigable concern for everything but what really matters! The maintenance of a standing army in so small a country Mr. Dillon denounces as "nothing short of crime," as indeed it is; and he also mocks at the policy of seeking to open embassies in foreign countries.

SHOULD EAT MORE FISH

Toronto Mail and Empire:

Canada ought to be a larger consumer of fish caught by Canadians in the Great Lakes. This market is not being cultivated by our fishermen as it ought to be, and probably as long as there is easy access to the United States market it will be neglected. Fresh fish would be consumed here on much larger scale if it could be had, but it seems always to be scarce and never to be had at what would seem a reasonable price. If our fish is barred from the United States market our fishing interests ought to begin at once to work up the home demand, which is of many times the capacity so far developed.

Here and There

An unusual consignment passed through Montreal recently in the care of the Dominion Express Company when six Rocky Mountain sheep were shipped to Austria to form part of a zoological exhibit there. The animals, which are valued at $600, came from the National Park at Banff, Alberta.

Alberta farmers have recently been shipping a new commodity to the market. During the past few years there has been a considerable increase in the number of bee-keepers and last year 160 keepers had a total production of nearly 60,000 pounds of honey, valued at approximately $15,000. The exact number of bees is not known.

Contract for aeroplane spruce has been made between Vickers Limited, manufacturers of aeroplanes, and Frank L. Buckley, of Vancouver, B.C. The spruce will be logged on the Queen Charlotte Islands and milled at the Buckley Mill at Port Clement, on Graham Island and at Burrard mill, in Vancouver. The contract calls for the delivery of two million feet during 1925.

Canada leads the world in automobile exports in proportion to production, domestic sales or ownership of motor vehicles or to population. Not relatively but absolutely the automobile exports of the Dominion are only exceeded by those of the United States. Since 1920 the motor vehicle exports of Canada have nearly doubled, the increase being from 9.8 per cent. to 17 per cent. of the automobile export trade of the world.

A special train of forty-two cars, containing nearly 900 head of stock for export to Great Britain, arrived at the Canadian Pacific Railway's East End stock yards, Montreal, recently. These, added to shipments from Packingham, Ont., Toronto and other points in Ontario and Quebec, made up what cattlemen claimed to be the greatest concentration of Canadian cattle for export in the history of the trade. From the yards the cattle were shipped by special train to the ship's side at St. John, N.B.

When the round-the-world cruise passengers aboard the Canadian Pacific steamship "Empress of France," reached Egypt recently, they were entertained by Enani Khattab, a prominent sheik holding authority over a large number of villages along the Nile. Unfortunately, the sheik succumbed to a sudden attack of heart failure. The visitors from across the Atlantic before returning to their ship were permitted to attend the funeral, which was conducted in the desert with weird and impressive religious rites, an experience few world-travellers have known.

Between 300,000 and 400,000 Canadians and Americans of Norwegian origin will gather at Minneapolis and St. Paul in June next to celebrate by a great national gathering the hundredth anniversary of the landing of the first organized party of Norwegian settlers on this continent. President Coolidge, King Haakon of Norway and Lord Byng, Governor-General of Canada, have been invited to attend. Meetings of some forty Norwegian organizations, divine service by the Bishop of Oslo (formerly Christiania), field sports, musical contests and historic pageants will make up the programme.

Dutchy's Diary

Beer and Confidence Games

When the Ferguson Government puts through its O.T.A. amendment at the Parliament Buildings in Toronto, and Ontario citizens are enabled to obtain palatable beer lawfully, will the province become known as one of "beer drinkers"?

I doubt it.

While we were sitting on Germany, to make sure that she was not fooling us following the armistice, Canadians had ample opportunity to study the beer drinking propensities of Germans in Cologne, Bonne, Coblenz and other places along the Rhine. Of the many beer gardens to be visited there is one that stands out in my memory, a palatial establishment to one side of the Kaiserplatz in Bonne. It was a roomy place, well appointed, sporting a good orchestra and enjoying the patronage of a very large number of Germans.

These regulars entered quietly, and many of them came for the evening. Apparently their idea of a good time was to smoke a heavy drooping pipe, drink beer very leisurely, listen to the music and talk to companions sparingly. There was no excitement. Few became intoxicated.

It is interesting to note that not many Canadians followed their example. Those soldiers who were bent on drinking bought Rhenish wine, and more potent liquids. The placid night life of the natives did not appeal to them.

The same held true in Paris and London. Canadians whose taste ran to beverages, sought the hard stuff rather than the light wines and beer. It seemed to be a matter for temperament, the westerners having an aversion to fooling around with drinks that got them nowhere.

Perhaps the fact that Canadians used to stand up when drinking, while Europeans sat down, explains the difference. On the one hand we have the "Let's go" spirit of the west and the "Take it Easy" idea in the long-established countries.

From this distance, it does not seem likely that we shall ape the so-called philosophical beer habit of the Germans.

Again the 'confidence" game is being worked on Canadian people; this time it is being attempted on an Oshawa man who recently received a letter from La Bisbal, Spain, offering him a fortune of $120,000 as reward for almost trifling services. This means of swindling has been active for some time, principally in the farming districts of the United States, and wide publicity has been given the matter warning those who receive letters not to send money.

Following is an exact dplicate of the letter as received:

Dear Sir,—

Being imprisoned here by bankruptcy I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of 360,000 dollars I have in America being necessary to come here to raise the seizure of my baggage paying to the Register of the Court the expenses of my trial and recover my portmanteau containing a secret pocket where I have hidden two cheques payable to bearer for that sum. As reward I will give up to you the third part, viz, 120,000 dollars.

I cannot receive your answer in prison but you can forward a cablegram to a person of my confidence who will deliver it me addressed as below:

Awaiting your answer to instruct you all my secret, I only sign now.

C—26-1-25

First of all answer by cable, not by letter.

Yulio Coll
Lista Corrios 2643

It is an old game this, becoming ever harder to put across in enlightened Canada. The reading habit has increased so much that few in this country have not heard of this and other similar confidence games. It is generally the unsophisticated foreigner who gets caught.

A REAL CONTRAST

While rain fell consistently Monday during the entire day, one year ago on the same date it was 10 degrees below zero. In comparing the temperatures for the two days, there was a difference of 21 degrees in the maximum and 39 degrees in the minimum temperature. The figures for the two days are as follows:

1925—40. 29.
1924—19 10 degrees below zero.

Deaths And Funerals

DR. SAMUEL BRENTON

Death claimed Dr. Samuel Brenton, 67 years old, one of the best known veterinary surgeons in Michigan. He died at Grace Hospital, Monday, February 16th, following a three months' illness.

Born at Corbyville, Ont., in 1858, Dr. Brenton attended Canadian schools and was a graduate of the Ontario Veterinary College at Toronto. After receiving his degree he came to Jackson, practicing there seven years before coming to Detroit in 1887.

Dr. Brenton served as secretary of the Michigan State Veterinary Board under Governors Warner and Osborne, and held a professorship in surgery at the Detroit Veterinary College. He was also past president of both the American Veterinary Medical Association and the Michigan State Association.

He is survived by two sons, Arthur S.V. and Dr. Willis L. Brenton; one daughter, Mrs. A. P. Schifer, and two brothers, Joel and James H. Brenton of Corbyville, Ont.—(From the Detroit Free Press, Feb. 17, 1925.)

Governors To Keep In Close Touch

Plans For Year Made at Hospital Meeting; R. Tannahill, Chairman

Considerable business was transacted at the inaugural meeting of the Board of Governors of the Belleville Hospital held yesterday afternoon in the Judge's Chamber at the Court House. The City and County was well represented as was also the Hospital Board. Dr. Proctor was in attendance as a Governor from the medical staff of the city.

Mr. J. A. Kerr presided over the meeting.

It was decided that the Board of Governors would hold their annual meeting the second Monday of February each year. A set of rules and regulations governing the various committees was unanimously adopted. After general business had been transacted the election of officers and committees was proceeded with resulting as follows:

Chairman, R. Tannahill; Vice-Chairman, J. A. Kerr; Hon. Secretary W. H. Nugent; Supervising Committee, Col. R. Vanderwaters, J. D. McMillan and Judge Wills. Finance committee, H. W. Ackerman, A. B. Collins and Warden W. E. Wiggins; Property committee, C. B. McGuire, J. A. Kerr and Ald. P. Harrison. The Visiting Committee for the next six months was selected as follows:

For March—W. Nugent and H. W. Ackerman.

For April—A. B. Collins and Ald. P. Harrison.

For May—Judge Wills and J. D. McMillan.

For June—Warden W. E. Wiggins, and Col. R. Vanderwaters.

For July—C. B. McGuire and Dr. Proctor.

For August—Ald. Robinson and J. A. Kerr.

The above members of the committee will also take turns in visiting the institution the remaining six months of the year.

A financial report presented showed that at the end of the fiscal year, namely October 1st, the receipts and expenditures about balanced, but since that date the expenditures have exceeded the receipts to a considerable extent. The total debt at present against the institution is close to $12,000. Money may possibly be borrowed to wipe off the existing mortgage.

Some discussion took place in reference to many patients being taken from the County to Kingston for treatment rather than to the Belleville Hospital. A committee composed of Judge Wills, J. A. Kerr, Col. R. Vanderwaters and W. H. Nugent was appointed to confer with the medical fraternity in reference to this matter.

ADVISORY COUNCIL MEETS IN MARCH

At the last session of the County Council held in January, an Advisory Agricultural Council was formed composed of the following members:

Chairman—Col. A. Vanderwater.

Members—C. Thomson, J. G. Campbell, R. M. Mitchell, J. L. Newton.

The purpose of the Advisory Agricultural Council is to advise and cooperate with the Agricultural representative in reference with the work of the Department of Agriculture to make survey of the agricultural industry or business of the County, and to plan and adopt work which has for its object the advancement of the agricultural industry in the County.

The first meeting of the newly formed organization is to be held early in March.

CHICAGO MARKETS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Feb. 24.—With Liverpool wheat market showing unexpected strength and with a big decrease looked for in the United States visible supply, the total wheat prices made a brisk early advance to-day. On upturn, profit taking sales enlarged and reactions ensued. Offering however were readily absorbed and fresh upturns took place. Initial prices which ranged from 7-8c. to 1 5-8c. higher; May $1.87 1-2 to $1.88 and July $1.57 1-4 to $1.57 1-2 were followed by numerous changes within the limits of about one cent with May touching as high as $1.88 1-2. Corn and oats were firmer, sympathizing with wheat. After opening at 3-8c decline to 7-8c. advance, May $1.29 1-2 to $1.30; corn market scored moderat gains. Oats started at 3-8c. to 3-4c. rise; May 53 1-2 to 53 5-8c., but later eased back a little; forecasts of sharp advance in hog values gave provision market notable upward slant.

OVER 300 PLAYED AT EUCHRE PARTY

The members of St. Michael's Church residing in Coleman and Murney Wards, certainly know how to put over a euchre party. At St. Michael's Academy last evening the third event of the season was held and whilst the two preceding ones were successful last night was the climax. The spacious auditorium of the Academy was filled to the door and the attendance may be judged from the fact that 75 tables were utilized by card players. Over 300 were in attendance and the receipts were $171. Euchre was the only game indulged in.

A special door prize of a $5 gold piece was given and Mr. J. A. McCormick was the winner, the lucky ticket being drawn by Mr. R. J. Wray.

The successful competitors in the card game were as follows:

Ladies 1st—Miss Nora Drumm.
2nd—Mrs. Jas. Lynch.
3rd—Miss Irene Bean.
4th—Mrs. Jas. Wims.
Gents 1st—Mr. S. Woodcock.
2nd—Mr. T. J. Hurley.
3rd—Mr. Frank Naphin.
4th—Mr. P. Bolyea.

Miss Helena Lynch who cut with Miss Drumm for 1st prize was also presented with a prize.

At the conclusion of the games dainty refreshments were served after which an elimination dance was held. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Clemect won the prize in the elimination waltz. The evening was without doubt one of the most pleasing ever held in the academy.

SCARLET CHAPTER IN HAPPY SESSION

Oshawa Scarlet Chapter of the Loyal Orange Association spent a very enjoyable evening recently. Visitors from Bowmanville, Whitby and Belleville fraternized with Oshawa Companions to the number of about sixty. The degree was exemplified by Comp. Bateman and his degree team in a most satisfactory manner and explained by an illustrated lecture given by Rev. Comp. A. L. Geen of Belleville District Scarlet Chapter, who is a Past Master in the Orange and Scarlet Order. His lecture was most interesting and instructive and enjoyed by all present.

After routine business was completed the Chapter adjourned to the dining room and the refreshment committee spared no pains to carry out their part of the programme. Songs, speeches and fraternity concluded a very enjoyable evening.

Founder Of K.K.K. In Bad Accident

Colonel Simmons Breaks Colair Bone and Four Ribs

Gainsville Ga. Feb. 24.—"Colonel" William Joseph Simmons of Atlanta, Supreme Monarch of the Knights of the Flaming Sword, the founder and former Emperor of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is in the Gainesville Hospital in a dying condition, as the result of an automobile accident Friday evening on the highway north of Gainesville.

Captain M. A. Moore, of Houston, Texas, Supreme Recording Knight of the Flaming Sword, who was in the car with Colonel Simmons, suffered a broken neck. He died at 6 o'clock Saturday night, never regaining consciousness.

Ray Ranier, of Atlanta, the third occupant of the car, escaped without being injured. The accident occurred on the highway between Clarmont and Cleveland. The road has been recently scraped, and when the automobile in which the men were driving struck a low place filled with soft earth, the car skidded over an embankment and overturned, pinning the occupants under it. Mr. Ranier extricated himself and called for aid. An ambulance was rushed from Gainesville and the two injured men were placed in the Gainesville Hospital.

Colonel Simmons, Captain Moore and Mr. Ranier were on their way to the Nacoochee Valley farm of Colonel Simmons, where the party were to spend the week end. It is said that Moore had come to hold a conference with Simmons on matters pertaining to the expansion of the Knights of the Flaming Sword.

GLORIA SWANSON IS IN BAD CONDITION

Paris, Feb. 24.—For the first time physicians attending Gloria Swanson admitted today that her condition was serious as a result of infection setting in after her recent operation.

C.N.R. SALARIES ARE NOT TO BE TOLD

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—It is not in the public interest that the Canadian National Railways should disclose the names and number of officials receiving a salary of $10,000 or more a year.

This was the answer given by Hon George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, to A. J. Doucet, of Kent, in the Commons at question time this afternoon.

Mr. Graham added that this was the opinion of the railway management.

O'BRIEN—VAN NORMAN

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Michael's Church on Monday morning at 8 o'clock before immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties, when Miss Marguerite Van Norman, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank VanNorman became the bride of Mr. Wm. O'Brien, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O'Brien. Rev. C. J. Killeen officiated.

The bride who was given away by her father wore a French dress of Log Cabin brown georgette trimmed with shadow lace and hat and shoes to match. She carried an armful of sweetheart roses. Miss Stella O'Brien, sister of the groom attended the bride and the groom was attended by the brother of the bride, Mr. Jack VanNorman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, later Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left for a short honeymoon to Western points, after which they will reside in Niagara Falls.

The bride received many beautiful gifts among which were several substantial cheques showing the esteem in which she was held.

SOILED PICTURE IS FOUND VALUABLE

Hamilton, Feb. 4.—Some years ago Mrs. Taylor, wife of Harry Taylor, 555 King street east, and former well-known grocer, visited an auction sale. During the sale the auctioneer experienced some trouble in securing bids for what appeared to be a dilapidated looking and soiled picture. Mrs. Taylor brought the picture for a song.

For years the picture hung at the Taylor home. Eventually a caller looked over the picture and pronounced it to be by an old master. The picture was given a thorough cleaning and some days ago Mrs. William Robinson Main street, east, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, went to Philadelphia, Pa., to dispose of the picture.

Deseronto News

Deseronto Feb. 21.—Mr. Harold Carman is building a very high-class motor boat for Mr. B. L. Detlor. Time was when many beautiful boats were on the bay during the summer but the auto craze caused motorboating to be neglected for a time. During the past two seasons the boats are appearance more numerously on the bay, and many fine summer cottages have been erected. There is no body of water in Ontario more appealing than the Bay of Quinte, which is safe at all times for boating, and the beautiful scenic surroundings and excellent fishing appeal to all who visit the territory. Time will be when the shores of the bay will be dotted with cottages and the Bay of Quinte will become known as a second Muskoka.

Mr. David Edwards departed on Thursday for Schenectady, N. Y., where he will engage during the contruction season. Mrs. Joseph Levique is a visitor for a week to her father at Actinolite. Mr. Wm. Wilson reports the arrival of a carload of nut coal for delivery to his retail yards East Main street. Miss Ela daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moon was taken to the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, on Thursday evening a sufferer from appendicitis. Mr. Moon accompanied his daughter to Kingston.

William H. Currie, former Londoner, widely known in New York theatricals through his associations with George Broadhurst, playwright, in the Boardhurst and Currie Producing Company, died yesterday in New York. The body is to be brought to London for burial.

H. W. Janes a resident of Woodstock for the past forty years, was found dead in bed yesterday morning. The deceased man who was in his 77th year, had not been in the best of health for some time past, but his death was not expected. Mr. Janes was born in England. He was unmarried.

SPANISH MELODY MAY UPSET JAZZ

Paris, Feb. 24.—To the Spanish melody of "Ay, Ay Ay," made popular by Raquel Meller, Parisians are learning the latest dance, which, it is promised will be the future victor over American jazz.

It is called "La Raquette," and it is the invention of the famous Professor Orbert, who, with Mlle. Mistinguett, imported the Argentine tango to Europe before the war.

It is described as a seven-step rhythmic dance and is very graceful.

It is expected to meet the approval of the publici which it is stated, is tiring of jazz and looking for something new.

NATURE LORE

By

Wallace Havelock Robb

MIKE THE PELICAN

Going about looking for birds and animals to have their pictures taken so that we may make lantern slides of these pictures and show little girls and boys in Canada, who hear or read Nature-Lore, the birds and animals that happen in these stories, is a happy occupation.

What fun it will be to see some sea gulls catching peanuts in the air, when little boys throw the nuts to them.

We are going to come along some day and let you see many of these nice bird pictures.

How would you like to see a race between a gull and a pelican, for a nice fresh fish?

Well, I cannot show you yet, for I just got the pictures yesterday. You shall see them one day.

In the meantime, it is such fun getting these birds to sit up and get a picture taken that I simply must tell you all about it.

Sometimes, like little boys and girls they don't like having a photograph taken in grand style. If they feel like that about it, we have to fool them and take nice snapshots. We do not shoot them and then look at them dead and wish they were alive. We shoot with a camera and get snapshots.

But Mike is a comical fellow. He is a Pelican. Mike Pelican.

He sits on a post, down at the pier and looks, oh, terribly wise and never goes fishing for himself, if he can get anyone to feed him fish that he does not have to catch.

Now, Mike looks wise and most folk who come to the pier cannot believe he is wise. They say he only looks wise but I saw something so funny that it made me think the Pelican is wiser than some men.

There sat Mike Pelican with a crowd of boys and girls around him. He is wild and free, goes and comes whenever it suits him, and there he sat with a boy on either side of him just as Tom, Dick and Harry might sit three in a row.

One of the boys suddenly said, "Mike, here comes a man with some fish."

Mike opened his wings, giving the two boys a push to the side, as much as to say, "Move over, boys, if this is fish, I need elbow room."

The man had a whole basketful of fish, about what a small size peach basket would hold. He began to feed Mike a tiny little fish at a time Mike stood that long enough and then poked his nose in the basket and grabbed about six and everyone laughed but the man.

The fish were not coming fast enough to suit Mike and he quit and gave the man to understand, by the abused look in his eyes, that he had a good big stomach and a very big beak and getting little fish in dribbles is too much trouble.

The man began to tease Mike and Mike got very much put out about it and told the boys and girls all about it. He shook his head, went to several with open beak, saying very plainly that the man was no good. The boys all set up a howl and told the man about it too.

"Say, Mister, why are you so stingy with the fish?" they asked. The man was ashamed and began to feed the old bird so fast that we thought he would be filled up but he only let on he swallowed them all. He stopped swallowing and soon his beak with its huge pocket, began to bulge a little.

The fish were all gone but the man wanted to make the bird give up eating, because he would be satisfied, and sort of make Mike take back what he said. He said he would only need to buy a few for Mike was nearly full already. Away he ran.

Mike waited until the man was well away after more fish then Mike flew away out over the water where he could hardly be seen.

Mike must have thought it all over He was satisfied but not full. The man went for more. He was a teaser. And Mike made up his mind to tease a little on his own account.

He flew back but landed on the pier roof, beside another Pelican. Now, nobody knows what was said and nobody heard a pelican laugh but instead of half or nearly filled Mike coming down to the post, down came his twin brother Pete, as empty as a barrel could be, but looking like Mike.

The man came back and said, "Now you greedy old fool, you are nearly full and I will make you take it all back about me being stingy. I will made you ashamed because you cannot eat it all." Poor man. The boys waited until Pete, who was as hungry as a wolf, was yelling for more and no more in the basket, then they laughed so much that the man knew someone had played a joke on him and when Mike came down again to enjoy the joke and sat down beside Pete, the man looked at them and began to see that something looked funny. He looked at the birds then at the boys, then at the girls, then at the basket, then at the birds again and said: "Everybody seems to be laughing but myself. I don't now what the joke is but if you two have fooled me, I will buy a basket of fish for birdland and throw it all at once, then I will see who gets it. Boys, which of these birds was I feeding?" And all the girls and boys yelled at once, "Both of them."

When the man came back with the basket of fish he had promised, there was plenty of fun. Next week we may hear about it.

FRUIT COMBINE IS ALLEGED AT OTTAWA

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—The alleged existence of a fruit combine in the Dominion, which is now in process of being investigated by the labor department, has called the attention of fruit growers throughout Canada to the necessity of forming some Dominion-wide organization, the purpose of which will be to follow their product right through from the orchard to the ultimate consumer.

As a result of representations made to the department of agriculture a conference has been called to meet at Ottawa on March; at this there will be represented the following bodies: The United Fruit Growers of Kentville, N.S., the New Brunswick Fruit Growers' Exchange, the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers, Limited, the Grape Growers Limited, of Niagara, the Erie Co-operative of Leamington, the Norfolk Fruit Growers of Simcoe, the Clarkson Berry Growers' Association, the Associlated Fruit Growers of British Columbia, and the Berry Growers' Associated Fruit Growers of British Quebec will be represented by M. Lavoie, provincial horticulturalist. The Dominion agricultural department will co-operate in the formation of the proposed organization.

ORPHAN BOY COMES BACK WEALTHY MAN

An interesting figure present at the orphans' festival last night at the Grand Opera House was John McConnell of Kansas City, who 50 years ago delivered the orphans' address to the late Bishop Crinnon at the festival at the old Mechanics' Hall, James street north. Mr. McConnell received his early schooling in the orphanage and since entering the world of busines has been successful and is now the head of a piano company in Kansas City, which bears his name, and is reputed to be worth over half a million dollars.

Mr. McConnell came to Hamilton and spent Sunday visiting some of the sisters at the House of Providence Dundas, who were his teachers at the orphanage half a century ago.

Mr. McConnell gave the audience his opinion of the work the sisters of St. Joseph are accomplishing in caring for homeless children.

LOVE FOR HIS DOG NEARLY DOWNFALL

Hamilton, Feb. 24—An alleged bootlegger's love for his dog nearly resulted in his apprehension early yesterday. Both dog and man however, are still at liberty.

Saturday night Inspector Cruickshank and a squad of his booze-spotters raided the home of a suspected bootlegger. Outside the house stood an old motor car loaded with three bags of beer. Car and beer were temporarily confiscated and samples of the beer sent to Toronto for analysis.

When the house was searched, no person could be be found though unlike Mother Hubbard's famous cupboard, the kitchen shelves were not empty. On them, monarch of all in sight, squatted three fine bottles of what is alleged Scotland's best.

But no one could be located—only a little dog. The pet was locked in the cellar. It was surmised someone would return in time. So police made a second visit yesterday about noon. The house was still empty, but in between visits someone had forced open a cellar window and let the dog out.

DECLARES IRISH ARE SUFFERING FOR SINS

Belfast Feb. 24.—Alluding to the distress under which a section of the Irish people is suffering Bishop Fogarty, of Killaloe, in the course of a pastoral says this distress might be in consequence of Ireland's own sins.

"During the Great War, heaven spread a mantle of protection over Ireland while the rest of Europe was undergoing dreadful castigation," the bishop writes.

"While others were starving, God lavished abundance upon the Irish people and we have shown our gratitude by burning, wrecking, and destroying the gifts of God in a campaign of crime which is an awful scandal to the world and a disgrace to the Irish name.

"Now if His chastising hand is laid on us, we have nobody to blame but ourselves.

Orioles Beaten By Over 400 Pins

Recreations Had a Good Night at Y.M.C.A. Alleys

Last night at the Y alleys the Orioles and Recreations met in a league fixture and the Recreations won by 417 pins. The Recreations started off with a good score and finished strong in the next two and set a new mark for the three games in this league of 2963. G. Lynch of the Recreations came within two pins of having the high three string of the League. He was the high three string of the evening with 692 and W. Walshe carried off the single with 266, while G. Gilbert was the high man for the Orioles.

N.H.L. Standing

With all three contenders for second and third places in the league standing winning on Saturday night, the chances of the Ottawa Senators, who are trailing St. Patrick's and Canadiens by five points, to squeeze one of the other pair out of the first division, were considerably lessened. In the remaining five games the Senators must gain at least five points on the Irish and Habitants. The standing is:

RUMORED K.K.K. AFTER THE PELLATT CASTLE

Toronto, Feb. 24—"Somebody is after it," stated Sir Henry Pellatt yesterday when told of a rumor that the Grand Kleagle and other leading Klansmen of the Invisible Empire had been looking over "Casa Loma" with the idea of purchasing the property as headquarters of the Klan. "I can't deny that somebody is after it, but I cannot say any more than that as it might spoil the deal."

Sir Henry did state that any negotiations, so far as the Orange Order purchasing the property were concerned were off.

ENERGY USED IN SEEING
A person's body is like a dynamo. It produces a certain amount of energy which is necessary to perform the daily duties. Some of this energy is used in seeing. If the eyes are not normal, too much energy is used in seeing, and less is furnished other parts of the body, which results in headaches and other troubles. You ought to have your eyes examined to determine their condition.

Niagara Falls Big Six Champs

Meet Peterboro in Finals on Thursday Next

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 24.—The Falls senior hockey team are champions of the "Big Six" senior O.H.A. group. This fact came into being here last night when the Frasermen, by a great reversal of form, overcame a three-goal lead gained by the Indians at Stratford on Friday night by pulling out a 6 to 0 win in the return game of the group play-off, making the score on the round Niagara Falls 6, Stratford 3.

Play was comparatively even in the opening chapter, when the Falls scored three and blanked the Indians. The second frame was all Clan Fraser, the homesters adding three more, and only clever work of Dolson prevented more. In the final period Bill and Frank Carson made noble attempts at scoring, the former having some hard luck when in close, although neither team could register.

Kitchen, Fraser, Siebert, Herrington, Rice and Kelterbourne all played stellar hockey for the Falls, while Bill Carson had a shade on his teammates, although brother Frank, Burke and Gross played strong games. Both Dolson and Mayo made clever saves in goal.

Fraser Wins Again

After the game Joe Dwyer, who represented Peterboro, tossed the coin for the choice of games in the senior final. Gene Fraser won the toss. The first game will be played at Toronto Thursday, with the return fixture at Niagara Falls Monday.

Secretary Hewitt, President Easson and Past President Fry of the O.H.A. were present. Wilson Tackaberry, of Toronto, acted as timekeeper. Dr. W. J. Laflamme refereed a fine game. He had a few difficult problems on his hands, but was always master of the situation.

Close, heavy and questionable checking featured the play throughout. The Falls players handed out much of the stuff they received at Stratford on Friday night. The Indians took their bumps gamely, although they were beginning to have a slowing-up effect on them toward the end of the second period. The Indians also passed out the odd rough stuff with effect. On the night's play Niagara Falls outplayed their opponents, the dead-on shots on goal totalling Niagara Falls 34, Stratford 22.

The death of Samuel Wilson, one of Ingersoll's oldest residents, occurred last night, in his 94th year. He had been ill less than a week with pneumonia. He possessed a rugged constitution and was comparatively active up to the time of his illness. He was born in England and was brought to Canada by his parents when six months of age. He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

Kingston Bowlers To Roll 'Em Here

Arrange to Play at Recreation Alleys To-morrow Night

At the Recreation alleys to-morrow night, one of Kingston's best five pin bowling teams will play a local team. Although the boys in Kingston have only been playing for the last two or three months reports say that they are hitting the wood for some good scores and no doubt when they play here tomorrow they should give the locals a good game. The team from here will very likely be the Wanderers intact as a couple of the other senior teams have a scheduled game on. The Kingston game will start about 9 o'clock.

The C. I. A. girls gave the Wanderers the best game they have had for some time when they won the first game and still had a lead of 7 pins going into the third game. In the third game the Wanderers came back strong and the C. I. A. weakening had the former won out by a safe margin.

The Industrials chalked up another win last night in the C. I. A. League and are now leading this league with 5 wins and one loss the losers were the Ink Slingers and although they rolled a good score the Industrials were just 100 pins better. Tom Barrett is playing better now than he ever has last night he rolled 743 for his three strings a record for the C. I. A. to shoot at. Jim Boyle also had a good night on the alleys rolling 313 for his first game and 698 for his total score.

The Officials No. 1 and the M. P. Office had a real old friendly game in the C. N. R. league when there were only 2 pins difference in the total score the latter team winning. Joe LaPorte lead the way for the Officials with 550 and Elliott was high for the M. P. Office.

Since the Hikers changed management in this winter league they have been playing an entirely different game. Last night they won another game winning from the Ciaco and are on top of the senior league with the Wanderers close behind. The Hikers rolled 2752 for their total score four of the bowlers running close scores. Lancaster for the Ciaco was high bowler with 648. Players and scores.

Oshawa Believes Ball Team Good

Reformer Not Worried by Rumor Of Pro. League

The Oshawa Reformer says: The baseball situation for 1925 from a local aspect continues to be encouraging with prospects for Oshawa being represented by stronger teams than ever before. While the intermediate squad in the Durham and Ontario League will be almost of senior calibre as in previous years. The Central Ontario League representatives are the centre of interest among the baseball patrons. With practically all of last year's team available and strengthened by one or two new infielders, together with a couple of pitchers, including Jimmy Breckenridge, who made such a good showing with Leaside in 1923 and with Strollers in 1924, the Motor City should be able to compete successfully with any senior aggregation in Ontario. Rumors to the effect that Peterboro, Belleville and Kingston might operate pro teams in the Quebec-Ontario circuit this year will not likely be put into operation. Kingston is the only city where a professional brand of ball could be carried out successfully, Belleville and Peterboro not being in a position to support such a project financially or otherwise. Therefore it is likely that the C.O.B.L. will be unmolested for another year, with the same four clubs providing a high class brand of ball and being able to do so without financial loss. From the attitude taken by the executives of the various clubs, expenses of each team will be considerably reduced while at the same time the league will be greatly strengthened.

J. G. Elliott, of Kingston, and Secretary T. Marshall, of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade, will come to London next Tuesday to confer with representatives of the Western Ontario United Boards of Trade on a plan to unite both bodies in a provincial organization. Negotiations to this end have been in progress for some time.

Kingston Overcame Brampton's Lead

Ready Now To Meet Grimsby-New Hamburg Winner

Kingston, Feb. 24.—Superior condition and team play gave Kingston intermediates an eight to one victory over Brampton in the return game here in the semi-finals of the O.H.A. here last night. Kingston win the round by 9 to 4. The game was most hotly contested.

Kingston will now meet the winner of the New Hamburg-Grimsby game. The first game will be played in Kingston on Thursday evening. The Kingston players faced Brampton's lead of two goals and they went after their opponents aggressively. The score at the end of the first period was tied each team scoring once. The play in this period was about even. Kingston struck their stride in the second period and before the period ended the score stood 4 to 1. In the last twenty minutes the Kingston boys simply "ran away" with their opponents and scored four goals.

Brampton were determined to win and sent their whole team up on the forward line. They certainly made a mistake when they thought they could defeat Kingston that way as the locals led by Captain "Joe" Smith, "ran wild." Hargraft started the fun in the last twenty minutes when he beat Core for a score which was not allowed. Core was chased for one minute for throwing his stick, but while he was off Kingston did not score. With the whole Brampton team on the forward line, "Joe" Smith got the puck and went the full length for the fifth counter. Hargraft got the sixth. Smith counted once more and Lawlor made the final one.

Smith, without question, was the star of the game. He was responsible for three goals. Roy Reynolds scored the prettiest goal seen in Kingston this year when he carried the puck the full length to draw Core out, and flip the rubber in. The other Kingston players gave a good exhibition. The Brampton players skated too hard for their own good in the first period and condition soon commenced to tell.

Core in goal played well. The teams each incurred about the same number of penalties.

Kingston—Goal, Rogers; defense, Rooney and Reynolds; centre, Watts; wings, Hargraft and Smith; subs., Lawler and Johnston.

Brampton—Goal, Corey; defense, Burrell and Zimmer; centre, Hills; wings, Doddemeade and Madill; subs., Worthy and Algie.

Referee—Mike Rodden, Toronto.

Fire at Wolfe Island

Fire Monday afternoon wiped out that romantic and historic building on Wolfe Island known for many years as "The Castle," and with it large quantity of hay and some farming implements which were owned by Mr. Oliver Hawkins. How the fire originated is a mystery and there was no insurance on the building or its contents.

Never Suffer From Pains You Can Stop
Most of the pains you suffer can be stopped at once. These include rheumatic pains, soreness, lameness, backache. And the congestion of chest colds.
The way is to rub the sore spot with St. Jacobs Oil. Cause a counter irritation. Or relieve the congestion by bringing the blood to the skin. A moment does this, and comfort follows before the rubbing stops.
St. Jacobs Oil has done this for 65 years. It has saved people eons of pain. Anybody who has used it will tell you that these pains are folly. A little rubbing and the pain is soothed. It seems to evaporate. Then Nature has a chance to cure while you rest in comfort.
Get this time-tried method, proved by millions. You will never find anything better. It is sure and soothing, and it doesn't burn. Have it ready when the pain begins. Keep it on your shelf. The cost is but 35 cents.
And the time is bound to come when it will save someone about you many hours of pain. Ward off the suffering which is so unnecessary.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

The captain just glanced at her and rode on at the same slow walk, but presently he saw something white lying on the path. It was a handkerchief. He looked at it—looked back at the girl, who had stopped and was kneeling on the bank gathering some more flowers, hesitated, then with an exclamation of impatience dropped from his horse and picked up the handkerchief.

It was a very delicate little specimen of its tribe, a few inches square, of very fine cambric, and an exclamation of impatience dropped from his horse and picked up the handkerchief.

It was a very delicate little specimen of its tribe, a few inches square, of very fine cambric, and an extremely pretty "Fanny" was worked in light blue at the corner.

The captain held it daintily and with the bridle of his horse slung over his arm made his way back to the damsel.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "Have you dropped your handkerchief?"

Fanny gave a little start and looked up at him with a blush that lent her face just the amount of color it needed and felt in her pocket before replying.

"Oh, yes! Thank you!" she said, in her clear and by no means unmusical voice, and the expressive eyes went up for a moment to his, then dropped timidly again. "It is my handkerchief. I am sorry you should have had the trouble to get off your horse and come back with it—Captain Sherwin."

He raised his hat, wondering who she was. He looked at her closely. She was dressed quietly and tastefully, and had evidently come from the Castle, or she would have worn a hat or bonnet. Could she be a visitor?

"I have the honor to be known to you!" he said as a feeler.

Up went the eyes again and then the lids—Fanny had good lashes—drooped again.

"Oh, yes; I remember you."

"Remember?" said the captain, beginning to think that she was rather pretty than otherwise. "I'm—I'm ashamed to say——"

"That you have forgotten me. Ah, that is only natural. You gave me a dance at the Town Ball last January, Captain Sherwin. It was not likely that you would remember it," and she seemed to check a little sigh and looked down at her flowers.

This was delightful to the captain. His vanity and self-love had received a severe wound a few hours ago, and this subtle deference and flattery fell on his chafed spirit like a healing ointment.

"Of course I remember," he said. "I can't think how I could have forgotten, Miss—Miss——"

"Inchley, Fanny Inchley," she said softly.

He paused. He had not heard her name at the ball, or if he had, had caught it only indistinctly, and had no notion who she was.

"You are staying at the Castle?" he said inquiringly.

Fanny opened her eyes upon him with innocent wonder.

"You mean as a visitor? Oh, no! But—yes, I am in a sense. I am staying with my aunt. She is the housekeeper."

The captain felt rather surprised, and looked it. This refined, fairy-like creature only the niece of an upper servant! His shifty eyes grew more bold.

"It must be very pleasant there," he said, glancing toward the park.

Fanny sighed.

"Y-e-s," she said hesitatingly. "It is a very beautiful place, but it is very lonely. There is no one there," she stopped and sighed again. "I have only just come from school, and of course it seems lonely to me. I never see any one with whom I can talk or exchange an idea. But I mustn't complain. I have always the clear brooks and the flowers, and sometimes I come and talk with the stream."

"'Pon my word I envy the stream," said the captain with what he considered one of his most killing glances.

Miss Fanny shot a half-frightened look at him.

"I deserve that you should think me silly and laugh at me," she said; and as she turned her face away from him her sensitive lip quivered.

"I—I assure you, Miss Inchley," he stammered. "Laugh at you! I never thought of such a thing! I—I think it is a very beautiful idea. Quite poetical and—and touching. And I do envy the stream. It must be very lonely for you at the Castle, especially when the marquis is away. He is here now, isn't he?" he added, looking down.

"Yes, he is at home now; but not for very long, I hope."

"You don't like him?" he said, eager to hear anything against the man he hated.

Fanny fixed her grave eyes on him.

"I dont think any one could like, respect, his lordship, Captain Sherwin," she said.

"Hes' right down bad, eh?" suggested the captain.

Miss Inchley shook her head, then turned it aside.

"I am afraid the marquis is a very wicked man, Captain Sherwin."

"Yes, you're right, I know," he said. "But I do not see anything of him, of course. I keep out of his way when he is here, and he does not know that such a person exists as my humble self."

"Quite right," he said with approval. "And—and you come down here very often, Miss Inchley?"

"Yes," said Fanny, with charming innocence. "I like this time best, because it is all so still. The birds sing more softly, and it is all so peaceful."

"So it is," he said. Then he ventured on a step further. She really was a most charming girl, and was evidently smitten by his manifold graces. "I'm fond of this place, too," he said, "and generally come along here in the evening——"

"Yes, I have seen you," said Fanny with pretty candor.

The captain glowed with pleased vanity.

"And—and perhaps I may be so fortunate as to meet you again. Who knows?"

Fanny blushed prettily and shook her head.

"Oh——" She gave a little start, and in doing so dropped her flowers. "That is the half-hour bell. I must go. My aunt will be angry with me for staying out so late."

The captain could do no less than pick up the flowers, and in restoring them to the little delicate hands her fingers touched his, and almost got entwined with them.

She blushed again, smiled—half laughed—shyly, and then with a girlish, embarassed little bow, tripped away and crossed the bridge.

The captain stood looking after her for a moment or two—he didn't mind looking at the bridge so much now—then got on his horse and rode on.

"A pretty little thing, by Jove," he muttered. "Remembered me too; seen me pass; daresay thought I was a brute for not noticing her. Of course I remember her—danced like a seraph. Housekeeper's niece. Too good for that, ever so much. Yes, I should like to meet her again."

If any one had stopped Captain Sherwin and asked him what he really intended, he would not have been able to give an answer. Marry Miss Inchley, the housekeeper's niece? Scarcely! Marriage was out of the question, but—well, a flirtation with such a refined, poetical little thing wouldn't be at all unpleasant, and when he grew tired of it——— Well, time enough to think of that hereafter.

CHAPTER VI.

That night Elaine, just before retiring, drew aside the dimity curtains from her window, and looked out over the valley. The moon was nearly at its full, and the scene was bathed in a flood of mellow light which transformed it into a perfect Eden. From her window she looked down upon the winding stream, the great elms and oaks of the park, and upon Nairne Castle. A light was burning in some of the rooms, in one of which she knew was the marquis, and she thought of him.

Roseate dreams came to her and in them the marquis figured to some extent.

She rose the next morning with all her household duties waiting for her, and attacked them with her customary cheerfulness.

The major seemed to have spent a bad night, judging by his appearance, and the batch of letters increased his gloom. There was one long blue envelope which Elaine noticed, and over the contents of which he sighed and frowned. Then he pushed it aside as if to get rid of it, and tossed a letter over to her. It was a circular printed in gold, and bearing the Barefield Town arms, and it announced the date of the next ball, named Major Delaine as one of the stewards and requested the honor of his and Miss Delaine's attendance.

They decided to attend, notwithstanding it would entail a further extension of credit to procure a suitable dress for Elaine.

"I've just had a letter from those miserable lawyers in Lincoln's Inn about that—that money I borrowed," said the major, pushing the ugly blue envelope with his forefinger. "I suppose it will have to be paid, or some of it; but upon my word, I do think it's very inconsiderate, seeing that I'm paying five per cent.——" He stopped and stammered, remembering that the letter had reminded him politely that the last year's interest had not yet been paid.

"Never mind, dear," said Elaine; "we shall find the money somehow or somewhere. Shall I write to them?"

The major caught at her offer with alacrity.

"I wish you would," he said. "You always seem to know what to say, whereas I—well, I get wild and nasty. Confound their impudence! Yes, you write to them, and his brow cleared somewhat and he looked up almost cheerfully.

With a cigar between his lips, the major went out for his usual morning stroll.

McDonald Plays In His Own Picture

"Frivolous Sal", First National Production at Griffin Theatre

In producing "Frivolous Sal", his latest First National picture, which opened at the Griffin Theatre yesterday, J. K. McDonald has given the screen a worthy successor to "Boy of Mine." The latter was a Booth Tarkington story. The photoplay was so good that its success was regarded as accidental by those who knew that it was only the second picture McDonald had ever made.

But "Frivolous Sal" maintains the high standard that this young producer has set through his previous pictures. The story is his own. It was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, and the cast includes Eugene O'Brien Mae Busch, Ben Alexander, Tom Santschi, Mitchell Lewis and Mildred Harris.

The work of these players is uniformly good. O'Brien takes a part that is entirely foreign to anything he has ever done on the screen before. It is a difficult role—that of a weak but lovable character brought to his senses only when his son lies to absolve him from complicity in a crime. Mae Busch as the girl he marries justifies the flattering tribute of her as the greatest actress on the screen.

Ben Alexander, the small boy who sprang into nation-wide prominence, through his work in D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" and who won further fame in "Penrod and Sam" and "Boy of Mine" shows more of his ability in "Frivolous Sal." Tom Santschi is seen in the role of the big westerner here with which screen fans are so familiar. Mitchell Lewis leaves nothing to the imagination in making an audience hate him. Mildred Harris wearing a black wig over her natural blonde hair, looks even more lovely than she does in real life. For the first time in her screen career she forsakes the pretty-heroine type of parts.

The story was photographed upon a background of scenic beauty such as is rarey seen on the screen. Even without the excellent work of the cast the photoplay is worth seeing for the magnificence of its natural setting.

Thomas Meighan Star at The Belle

Has Splendid Role in "The Alaskan"; Battle of Pioneers

Green valleys crowded with forests of pine, mountain ranges whose peaks are eternally white with snow, colossal glaciers and swift-rushing rivers—against this picturesque and scenically beautiful background, "The Alaskan," Herbert Brenon's production of Willis Goldbeck's adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's powerful romance of the northwest, unfolds its dramatic story of Alaska—America's last frontier. The local premiere of this Paramount picture took place last night at the Belle Theatre.

Thomas Meighan is "The Alaskan." As "Alan Holt", the hero, Meighan has a role which is ideal for him. As you watch the unreeling of this screen play, you understand why America's favorite male star holds such an eminent position in the hearts of millions of film fans. His performance is one of the outstanding features of this remarkable photo play because he has taken the role and made it his own.

"The Alaskan" is a story of the battles of pioneers in a savage land with stubborn nature and it melts into the story of a battle which the second generation fights with financial forces more relentless than those their fathers met and conquered. This second generation, the men of to-day, are the true Alaskans.

From start to finish the picture is crowded with exciting action, thrilling incidents and provoking mystery. Right from the opening of the film when there flashes before your eyes a sweeping picture of the gold rush scenes of the late nineties down to the final crashing finish that shows Meighan in a hand-to-hand struggle with his most hated enemy, the photoplay grips the interest like a vise. Estelle Taylor is seen as the mysterious girl who plays such a stirring part in Meighan's fortunes. Featured with Miss Taylor is Meighan's support are John Sainpolis, Charles Ogle, Frank Campeau and Anna May Wong, all of whom offer able characterizations.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt, "The Alaskan" is one of the greatest out-door pictures of the year. Don't miss it!

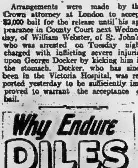
Arrangements were made by the Crown attorney at London to accept $3,000 bail for the release until his appearance in County Court next Wednesday, of William Webster, of St. John's, who was arrested on Tuesday night charged with inflicting severe injuries upon George Docker by kicking him in the stomach. Docker, who has since been in the Victoria Hospital, was reported yesterday to be sufficiently improved to warrant the acceptance of bail.



The weakening agony of piles robs life of its pleasure, turns days of brightness into days of misery, and brings periods of acute suffering. Overwhelming evidence proves Zam-Buk incomparable for banishing the pain, bleeding, swelling and inflammation.

Mr. Alf Brown, of Merritton, writes:—"I hope that my testimony will reach thousands suffering from that dreadful ailment, piles. For six years I was never free from pain. No one ever spent more money in search of a remedy. A sympathetic friend gave me a part of a box of Zam-Buk to try. Its soothing power was marvellous, and I soon had a further supply of this grand herbal healer. I used Zam-Buk until the old painful trouble was gone completely."

Equally successful for eczema, psoriasis, salt rheum, pimples, boils, bad legs, ulcers, scalp disease, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns, scalds, etc. Dealers everywhere sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, 3 for $1.25

Less Disease

Communicable diseases have shown a marked decrease during the past few weeks and at the present time there are but few existent in Oshawa. Measles and diphtheria are not prevalent here, no cases being on the records of the public health department. The only ones under their supervision at present are two scarlet fever cases and an odd case of whooping cough and mumps.

Hard-hearted

Many cases have been cited where a motorist without a heart has attempted to run down some animal in a careless manner but Thursday morning, pedestrians on King street, east, Oshawa, were horror struck to see a driver actually speed up to plunge into the midst of a number of dogs on the road. One of the animals was struck with terrific force and the impact could be heard for some distance. The dog was carried along the road for some distance under the car and when clear, the driver put on more speed and disappeared, leaving the injured animal to its fate. The dog got up and tried to gain the sidewalk but was unable to do so owing to broken limbs. Its playmates came to its assistance and the poor animal in a painful frenzy crawled in the snow by its front paws Finally it was removed by a kind hearted passer and has probably been disposed of by this time.

The Gondoliers

The Kingston Kiwanis Club will stage another of Gilbert and Sullivan's Operas in the Grand Opera House for three days on March 12th, 13th and 14th. This is the interesting announcement made in view of the disappearance of Dr. Joseph Andre, who had the training of the principals and chorus well advanced when he left the city. The stage director for the Gondoliers will be under Charlie Gates and the musical director will be Captain Alfred Light, both of whom are so well known to Kingstonians that anything they undertake is an assured success.

Deer Passes Door

W. E. Cordukes deputy reeve of the township of Kingston was greatly surprised on Saturday when he saw a deer walking along the main highway in front of his home which is eight or nine miles from the city. Mr. Cordukes lives on a farm west of Enginburg and near the Glenvale station on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

On Sunday about noon when Mr. Cordukes was out in front of his home he noticed an animal coming along the highway and at first thought that it was a cow. As the animal walked closer toward him he saw that it was a deer. Mr. Cordukes who was accompanied by his dog walked in the direction of the deer and was within seventy-five feet from it when the dog gave chase. The deer gave one leap and was away like a shot.

Broke Through the Ice

On Sunday a horse and cutter coming from Wolfe Island broke through the ice off Livingston Point about a mile from the island shore. The horse was rescued.

It is stated that the crossing between Wolfe Island and the city is still very good although the ice around the main crack is rather weak in places. Experienced drivers are aware of the conditions near the crack and keep away from the dangerous places.

Catarrh
Relieved Instantly

Catarrh in the head means that germs are attacking the membranes. So with cold in the head. The result is inflammation, stuffiness, discharge.

Deal with such troubles locally. Combat the germs where they attack. Apply Ely's Cream Balm in the nostrils and breathe it. Note how quickly its antiseptic fumes bring relief.

Don't wait for internal effects. Get instant relief. Fight the trouble at its source. Clear the air passages, check the attack. A moment will do that if you ask your druggist for a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm.

Rheumatism

First stop the pain

In rheumatism, the quickest thing is to stop pain. A modern way does that so quickly that it seems like magic.

Nothing else applies such concentrated, such penetrating heat as red pepper. And heat that doesn't hurt. Every old method seems ridiculous in comparison.

Apply Red Pepper Rub and the tingling heat is apparent instantly. In three minutes it seems to reach the depths. Circulation is started, congestion is relieved. Pain and soreness depart.

The cause of rheumatism may lie deeper. But the pain can be relieved like magic in this way.

Then why spend hours in suffering. Why toss all night? Relief is a matter of moments if you have Red Pepper Rub on hand. Then night or day, you have the best means modern scientists know to combat it.

Think what folly it is to suffer for hours the pains or soreness which a moment can stop.

William Moore West

Hastings, Feb. 24.—The funeral of Mr. William Moore West was held from his residence, the body being taken to Ottawa, where interment took place.

Deceased was born in Eversely, England, in 1849. His early school days were spent in Marlborough. At the age of twelve years he served as an apprentice in the British Navy on the training ship Britania and worked his way up to be First Lieutenant. He saw service with a detachment in the Ashantic war and was wounded.

Forty-seven years ago he came to Canada, and for some time settled in London, Canada. Here he entered the services of the Dominion Government as a civil engineer. For some time he was stationed at Trent River, and moved to Hastings a short time before work through here commenced on the Trent Canal and superintended operations in his line of work during the construction of same.

A few years ago deceased retired from his work as an engineer and spent the remainder of his life at his home on the Hastings.

Napanee News

Napanee, Feb. 24.—On Saturday afternoon Chief Barrett arrested a woman in Card's Garage block. She was taken before Police Magistrate Ruttan charged with theft and remanded for one week.

The "B" Coy. boxing bouts will take place in the Armouries.

St. Andrew's church concert will take place to-night in the Sunday school room.

W. H. Hunter, who has been quite ill for some time, is improving.

In a recent issue of one of the local papers there were seven death notices. The ages given of the five of them were respectively, 91, 85, 84, 71 and 63.

Mrs. E. J. Corkill is visiting her mother at Harriston, Ont.

Robbed Chinese

Kingston, Feb. 24.—On Sunday evening, between seven and nine o'clock some unknown persons entered the Chinese laundry on Barrie Street, near the corner of Earl and stole $27. The police were notified of the robbery and are working on the case.

Congregational Meeting

A well attended congregational meeting of St. Andrew's Church at Cobourg was held on Monday night, Col. N. F. McNachton presiding.

The following were appointed as managers: R. T. Mahan, David Kidd, W. H. A. Semple, Judd Kennedy, F. J. McArthur, Wilfrid Ferguson.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a pulpit supply until a permanent pastor takes charge.

Port Hope Fears Flood

Mr. Ferguson had the workmen of the town busy this morning blasting the ice on the creek above the bridge on Walton Street at Port Hope The heavy rain of last night swelled the water of the creek to quite an alarming proportion this morning, and as the water was rising higher every hour the engineer and the workmen worked like trojans to get a clear passage way for the rushing torrent. Large cakes of ice were jammed close to the bridge, but after two hours' work sufficient The waterway was secured to allow most of the water free course towards the lake. Reports from the back country this morning state that the streams there are badly swollen and a large volume of water is expected here before nightfall. Everything possible is being done to prevent a flood and at time of going to press it looks as if the work of the town employees would be successful.

Barn Destroyed By Fire

Flames totally destroyed the barn and chicken pen of Mr. Herman Peters of Port Britain near Port Hope Sunday night. The origin of this fire is unknown. It was first noticed about 7.15 p.m. and by 8.15 when people here were going home from church they noticed the red glow across the sky and many of them journeyed to see the blaze. This is the second time Mr. Peters has had his barn burned down the last time being about 17 years ago.

TIPS TO HOUSEWIVES

Cornmeal and vinegar will remove fruit stains from the hands.

Try to have the heels of all your shoes about the same height.

After freezing ice cream draw off all the salt water and repack with ice and salt, using four parts of ice to one part of salt. A wet, loose packing will mean soft cream.

Never throw water on blazing oil. It will only spread the flames. Earth flour or sand will extinguish the fire but if these are not at hand, a thick rug or curtain shoud be thrown on the burning oil.

When frying onions, always put a saucepan lid over the top of the frying pan to keep in the steam and flavor. It will also make the onions cook more quickly.

Chesterville Against

As a result of the voting on the question of concurrence in the United Church, the congregation of Chesterville Presbyterian Church by a vote of 46 against to 17 in favor decided to withdraw from the union. The members entitled to vote were 93. Fourteen congregations in the Brockville Presbytery have now voted against union and seven in favor of the measure.

Family Of Five In Dire Straits

Told to Leave House When He Didn't Pay Rent

Kingston, Feb. 24.—To be without work, and having received a notice to vacate the home in which he was living, in three days' time, on account of non-payment of rent, with four children to provide for, and the wife and mother in a delicate condition, was the experience of a man who applied for work at the office of the Ontario Government Bureau on Saturday morning. This is one of the many pitiful cases which Mr. Strond, the local agent, has to deal with from time to time.

When this man appeared at the office and asked for work he was informed that his turn on the drain work would be on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. When he was informed of this he immediately pulled the lawyer's document out of his pocket ordering him to vacate the house. He was asked to remain a few moments and the case was referred to Mayor Angrove who in turn saw that the needs of the home were provided for and the order regarding the vacating of the home will be held over a month.

DOMINION STORES SHOW BIG PROFIT

Toronto, Feb. 24—The fifth annual general meeting of the Dominion Stores Company was held here yesterday with the president, Robert Jackson of Concord, N.H., presiding. A substantial increase in gross earnings and net profits was shown by W. J. Pentland, vice-president and general manager, who reviewed the year's operations. Gross earnings for the fiscal year totalled $10,342,233, as compared with $7,863,650 a year ago while the net profit stood at $187,398, an increase of $98,000 over last year. A dividend of 50 cents per share of common stock, payable April 1, was declared. The number of stores now operated by the company total 354, an increase of 68 during the past year.

TORONTO SUBURB WAS FLOODED OVER

Toronto, Feb. 24— Blocked sewers, filled by rains and melting snows, or defective water systems resulted yesterday afternoon in many families in the Silverthorn district being flooded out of their homes. In some cases the water is more than six feet in depth and forms small bays.

Canoes and rowboats are the only transport that can be used to remove people from their homes and a little of their most valuable portable furniture. Several families refused to leave their homes, claiming they had nowhere to stay the night, and all they request is that bread be brought them. This was done.

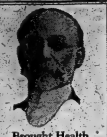
WORKING GIRL'S EXPERIENCE

Read How She Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Arnprior, Ontario.—"I must write and tell you my experience with your medicine. I was working at the factory for three years and became so run-down that I used to take weak spells and would be at home at least one day each week. I was treated by the doctors for anemia, but it didn't seem to do me any good. I was told to take a rest, but was unable to, and kept on getting worse. I was troubled mostly with my periods. I would sometimes pass three months, and when it came it would last around two weeks, and I would have such pains at times in my right side that I could hardly walk. I am only 19 years of age and weigh 115 pounds now, and before taking the Vegetable Compound I was only 105 pounds. I was sickly for two years and some of my friends told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken a bottle of it I felt a change. My mother has been taking it for a different ailment and has found it very satisfactory. I am willing to tell friends about the medicine and to answer letters asking about it."—Miss HAZEL BERNDT, Box 700, Arnprior, Ontario.

A day out each week shows in the pay envelope. If you are troubled with some weakness, indicated by a run-down condition, tired feelings, pains and irregularity, let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound help you.



We want you to make this test

WE want every weak, puny, fagged-out man and woman in America to make this test: buy one bottle of Tanlac at your druggist's, take it according to directions for one week and see how quickly you get started back to full strength and vigor.

We know what we are talking about. Tanlac has helped millions. In our files are more than 100,000 letters of praise from grateful users.

Don't confuse Tanlac with ordinary patent nostrums. It is Nature's own tonic and builder, compounded from roots, barks and herbs that we gather at great expense from the four corners of the earth.

Tanlac goes straight to the seat of your trouble, cleanses and purifies the blood stream, puts your digestion in proper shape. First thing you know you have an appetite like a starved child. You rest at night and your whole body begins to feel the stir of strength and energy.

Don't you be discouraged. Don't put off testing Tanlac another day. Get a bottle now and in a week you should notice signs of real improvement.

Brought Health and Happiness

"Since the Civil War indigestion and stomach trouble have been the bane of my existence. Tanlac made my weak stomach sound and did away with all signs of indigestion. In fact it has brought me health, strength and happiness and I give it unqualified endorsement and praise."

Tried To Frame Neighbor, Belief

Woman Steered Police to Home; Found Bottles Herself

Hamilton, Feb. 24.—"Case dismissed," Magistrate Jelis snapped in police court, when he learned that Rosie Giordana had opposed Mrs. Charles Rizzo of Stuart street west on an assault charge last week. Rose, at the time, failed to get the best of it. Mrs. Rizzo was accused of breaking the O.T.A. Constable Gent said he went to her place following information laid by the other woman. A search revealed nothing, so he left. Mrs. Giordana then phoned in and said she was quite sure her neighbor had some strong beer around somewhere. She even offered to assist in the search. This led him to return to the Rizzo dwelling, where another search was conducted. But all of the investigations led to naught, for, of illegal liquid, none was found. Then Mrs. Giordana came out of the background leading by the hand a small boy. This lad was sent in under the Rizzo garage and when he emerged he clutched in his hand a bag containing 23 quart bottles of beer stated Constable Gent.

Mrs. Rizzo claimed she knew nothing of the stuff, and averred that she had been "framed." The magistrate gave his decision and his opinion in the same words.

CAUGHT WOLVES WITH FISHHOOKS

Sault Ste. Marie Ont., Feb. 24.—A strange wolf story comes from Alma Heights, east of the Soo. For the last weeks the howls of a couple of packs of wolves have been heard every night in the vicinity of the hamlet.

A local trapper undertook to thin out the packs, but in spite of all his ingenuity the wolves would rob his traps of baits and retain their freedom.

The resourceful bushman conceived the idea of "playing the animals for suckers," and rigged up some heavy fishhooks on the end of strong brass wire, upon which he impaled attractive bait. About this set he distributed a few traps. Next morning visiting his traps, he discovered that two wolves had been nicked by the hooks, and in their sudden terror had forgotten the traps, in which they were caught in their effort to free themselves. He killed them both.

Tom Kirby, it is reported to-day, killed two wolves on the north shore, opposite Richards' Landing, St. Joe Island.

ZOO KEEPER CALLS HALT TO PUZZLERS

London, Feb. 24—So many enquiries have been received at the London zoo asing for the scientific name of jumping mice (zapodidae) or other animals that the following stereotyped letter has been prepared for all such queries: Dear Sir.—In reply to your letter I regret that I cannot undertake to assist in the solution of cross-word puzzles. Yours faithfully, Curator.

WOULD MARK ALL PAID EDITORIALS

Ottawa Feb. 24.—A bill to amend the Post Office Act received first reading at the opening of the House of Commons yesterday. The object of the bill as explained by T. L. Church (Conservative, North Toronto), is to require sworn statements containing the names and addresses of editors, owners and stockholders of magazines, newspapers, trades journals and other periodicals, to be made semi-annually. Mr. Church said that his amendments followed the law in force in the United States, Britain and Australia. After the sworn statements had been filed the amendments provide that it should be published in the publication filing it. The registration was introduced in the public interest and in the best interest of the free press.

Paid editorial and other reading matter for which money was paid should be plainly marked "advertisement" he said. Statements were to be made in duplicate, and delivered to the Postmaster-general who it is provided in the bill, would make provision for the carrying out of the Act. The bill contained a proviso that it should not be applicable to religious, fraternal, temperance, scientific or other such publications.

FIFTY VOLUNTEERED TO GIVE UP BLOOD

Toronto, Feb. 24—No fewer than 50 persons volunteered to give their blood needed to save the life of Audrey Porter, aged 2 1-2 years, of 15 Hastings ave., who was badly scalded about the face and body when she pulled a kettle of boiling water over herself. Of the 50, three were in the right class and gave blood to make the transfusion at the Hospital for Sick Children yesterday.

Motor League Told Of A 3 Cents Tax

Deputation Was Very Much Surprised by Premier Ferguson

A deputation of some two or three hundred motor car owners and members of the Ontario Motor League received a rude shock at the hands of Premier Ferguson yesterday afternoon when they waited on him in connection with the Government's proposal to charge a 2-cent-per-gallon impost on gasoline. The deputation had just completed expressing the opinion to the Premier that they were ready to accept the 2-cent tax if the motor license fees were reduced, when they were bluntly informed that the Government had made up its mind to impose a tax of three cents per gallon.

"Quebec has now a tax of two cents per gallon," stated Premier Ferguson. "That province is suggesting that it be raised four cents and are asking us to do the same to make it uniform. This Government, however, has seriously considered a tax of three cents per gallon (Whistles of amazement from the deputation) and there will be no reduction in motor fees at present nor until such time as we compute the amount of revenue to be received from such a tax. It is quite apparent that this will not meet with your approval."

Highways Cost Money

"The policy of the Government," the Premier continued, "is to make every department pay its own way in the future. Highways cost money, and you evidently only want to pay the maintenance in the future without a cent towards the capital expenditure. We hope to be able to say in two or three years that revenue from department is taking care of expenditure, so it will not be unduly heavy. You claim that 75 per cent. of the highways are paid for by the motorists. I claim that 75 per cent. of the damage done to them is by the motors and trucks of the province. There is no thought, as has been suggested, that the motorists should be singled out for unfair treatment. The tax will be assessed at the source of supply. By that I mean that the man who first handles it in this province after it comes from the manufacturer will pay it. You will not have the bother paying the operator of every pump along the roadside.

Express Disappointment

Morden Neilson, President of the Organization: "We were chagrined at thought of a 2-cent tax, Mr. Premier, so you must know how we feel about 3 cents. We must express our disappointment that the tax is to be so high and that there will be no reduction in licenses."

Representatives of the Ontario League, the Motor Truck Owners' Association, The Ottawa Motor Club, The Kingston Motor Club, The St. Catharines Club, South Waterloo Club and Peterboro and other clubs also addressed the gathering. All spoke in favor of the two cents tax if it was accompanied with a decrease in license fees.

COL. CURRIE TO INTRODUCE BILL

Toronto, Feb. 24—The Ontario Government Liquor Control Act will be the title and purport of a bill to be introduced in the Legislature this week by Col. J. A. Currie, member for S.E. Toronto.

"Nobody else seems to want to do it," said Col. Currie yesterday afternoon, when asked why he was introducing the bill, "and because, in the recent plebiscite, 49 percent of the voters registered their approval of Government control."

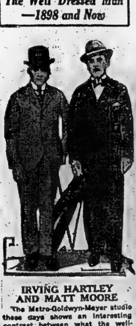
Details as to the bill will be ready in a day or two.

ENGLISH BOYS KEEP ADVENTUROUS SPIRIT

London, Feb. 24—The same adventurous youths who flocked to enlist under the flag when England's navy was called to Trafalgar, live today in modern England. Mitchell Hedges, who recenty advertised for three youths to accompany him on an expedition to the wilds of British Honduras, has had 2,300 applications from boys. Most of the applicants gave their age as 19, and finally Mr. Hedges selected two boys of this age and one four years older.

The expedition is to search for cities and relics of the ancient Maya civilization Mr. Hedges is taking with him a new invention called the amber spray, which is to be used to spray a varnish like liquid on any relics discovered to protect them from the air and sun. The relic can be sprayed inch by inch as it is unearthed, and later the varnish removed by spraying the object with another liquid.

The Well Dressed Man —1898 and Now



IRVING HARTLEY AND MATT MOORE

The Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer studio these days shows an interesting contrast between what the well-dressed man will wear today and what he wore back in the palmy days of the Spanish-American War. Here is Irving Hartley, dressed up in his Sunday best of 1898 vintage, as he appears in Hobart Henley's production of "The Denial," adapted by Agnes Christine Johnston from Lewis Beach's play, "The Square Peg." At the right is Matt Moore, the very smartly dressed hero of Robert Vignola's "The Way of a Girl," adapted by Albert Shelby Le Vine from Katherine Newlin Burt's "The Summons."

$12.50 - $15.00 - 16.75 - $25.00 - $35.00 - $39.00

New Millinery Is Unusual as to Crown

The high crown is strikingly different, and yet becoming to most types. And it is vibrant with spring spirit, especially when enhanced by pert bows, placed at flatteringly youthful angles.

Due to the ever-prevailing and increasing vogue for bobbed hair, brims are generally short at back and increase in width across the side to the front.

Laize Straw in Moire Laize, Ottoman and Marocain Laize and Bengal Straw together with Silk Failles or Silk Ottoman are the materials, where cock feathers, bird's breasts, wings, also moire, Velvet and Grosgrain Ribbons, and decorative pins in composition, are effectively used as trimmings.

Top of crown trimming is endorsed for spring and shown in many of our new models.

Prices range $3. and slowly to $12.

AUSTRALIA GETTING MANY IMMIGRANTS

Melburne, Australia, Feb. 24.—Since the United States began restricting immigration, southern Europe has turned covetous eyes on Australia, and there has been a great influx of Slavs, Greeks, Italians, Maltese and other peoples. The latest advice is that the steamer Cephee will arrive here in a few weeks with 1,200 Jugo-slavs.

Sir George Fuller, promeir of New South Wales, has writen the federal government suggesting that the Commonwealth institute a quota system on the American lines, or adopt other means to limit foreign immigration.

Official government statements declare that while the need for population in Australia is urgent, some substantial reason must be advanced before the door be shut against white Europeans. Nevertheless the government is watching the situation carefully.

FORD PEOPLE MAY BUILD IN AUSTRALIA

Melbourne, Feb. 23.—Australian motor world is much interested in the proposed establishment of five assembling plants by the Ford Motor Corporation of Canada, and since the arrival of W. P. Grandjean, secretary of the company, and other representatives, speculation has been nearly as great as the reticence of the visitors.

Mr. Grandjean has interviewed commonwealth ministers and sounded them on the tariff and its effect on the Ford project. There is reason to believe that the Ford corporation, in accordance with customs by-laws now operating would be granted concessions on plant importations, provided the material is not available in Australia.

MAYBE IRISH WILL DO WITHOUT MOVIES

Dublin, Feb. 24.—Ireland may soon have no movies. Strict censorship is threatening to result in the closing of all picture houses.

James Montgomery, Free State censor, has banned scores of films passed by the censors of other countries, and appeals for more laxity have failed. Prof. Magennis, a member of the appeal board, has told representatives of the cinema industry that the Free State would rather have no films than the ones forbidden. The representatives have hinted they may oblige him.

EVEN HIS MAJESTY KNOWS OBEDIENCE

London, Feb. 24.—The Evening News reports an interesting incident in connection with King George's illness.

His Majesty awoke much revived yesterday, the newspaper says, and after breakfasting asked for a cigar. The doctors forbade smoking, however, and the Royal patient said ruefully, "Well even kings must learn to obey."

NO MOVE YET TO STOCK UP WITH GASOLINE

Proposed Tax Causes Little Excitement Here as Yet

NOT VERY SEVERE

Would Cost Ordinary Motorist But $7.50 For The Season

There is apparently no immediate need of oil for the troubled waters in Belleville as a result of the proposed three cents per gallon tax on gasoline for there is not a ripple in the usual calm procedure of business according to information supplied the Intelligencer by retail dealers in gases and oils.

Not one dealer of a number interrogated this morning had noticed any increase in business recently though it was felt that probably the anxious motorist or truck owner would be stocking up with fuel for the season before the tax was imposed.

There are probably several reasons why no impetus has been realized here. Firstly there are those who probably believe that the tax will not become law despite the discussion pro and con in the legislature and the daily newspapers. Of course dealers agreed that there had been a brisk turn in business recently, which they attributed rather to the increased use of motor vehicles owing to the springlike weather.

One dealer was not backward in stating his opinion that the tax was a bit heavy, but seemed to believe that a two cents per gallon tax would not be too burdensome. This dealer predicted that a number of automobiles would be actually laid up this season, owing to the owner's inability to maintain them and keep them on the road.

"Licenses have not come down in price for motor cars", he explained "and they have gone up in price for commercial motor vehicles, so that there is not relief from the added tax burden in this department."

No Preparations Yet

While it was expected that anyone owning a big tank would certainly stock up, no dealer of the number interviewed had made any special preparation for the rush—if there happens to be a rush for gas before the tax becomes law. Of course it is but a few days since the proposed gas tax announcement was made and it is probably a bit early for preparation on the part of the dealer or action on the part of fthe consumer.

The tax so far as the individual is concerned is not, however, very high. Assuming that a motorist drives his car 5,000 miles in a season, which is about the average, and that he gets about 20 miles to a gallon, the tax will amount to $7.50 as he will use about 250 gallons of gas. It is, however, just that much more added to the operating cost of a car.

For commercial vehicles where the average mileage is lower, the cost will be greater and it may mean that the horse will again be more extensively used for delivery purposes. Several big firms in different parts of the country have in the last year or two done away with motor driven delivery wagons where certain conditions held sway and are using horses again.

MUST PLAY GAME FOR GAME'S SAKE

Cecil Facer of Belleville has returned from a conference of volunteer leaders interested in Y.M.C.A. physical work which was held in the city of London. He was appointed on the executive for the next conference which is to be held in Toronto in the year 1926. The London gathering was for Ontario men. Next year, it is expected it will be of a national character.

One of the messages brought back to Belleville by Mr. Facer was from the speech of J. H. Crocker, national secretary of the physical end of Y.M.C.A. work. Mr. Crocker expressed his belief that if the games of the present day were not played merely for the sake of the game, they would be killed in the same manner as lacrosse had been killed in the Dominion.

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS DAY ON FRIDAY NEXT

An interesting and full program is being arranged at the Y.M.C.A. for Religious Emphasis Day—Friday next. T. D. Patton, National Secretary Y.M.C.A., J. W. Hopkins, Metropolitan Secretary of Toronto and J. P. Hagerman, High School Boys' Secretary of Toronto, will be in the city and will address guests at a dinner to be held at the Y.M.C.A. At 4.30 o'clock Friday afternoon a conference with High School and Albert College students will be held and in the evening a supper will be held after which Mr. Hagerman will give an address.

ONTARIO MEMBERS GET HEAVY MAIL

Toronto, Feb. 25—Members of the Legislature who are not engaged in writing speeches for delivery in the current debate are even more busily engaged in writing letters to constituents, anent the Government's beer proposals. Members complain that never in their parliamentary careers have they been so swamped with correspondence from their ridings. The sessional stenographic staff is almost overtaxed with the flood of dictation.

Boat House Burned Early This Morning

Ed. Little Sustains Bad Loss, Chicken Thieves Thought Responsible

A boat house the property of Mr. Ed. Little, located on the bay shore near the Government fish Hatchery, Thurlow was destroyed by fire, at an early hour this morning. A chicken coop adjacent to the boat house was partially burned It is thought that chicken thieves were responsible for the blaze. In the building burned was a skiff and a considerable quantity of fishing nets the property of Mr. Little who is engaged in fishing. The loss is a rather severe one for Mr. Little as he had but slight insurance. The city fire brigade was called out but the fire was over a mile east of the city limits.

Raney Will Soon Be All Alone

Two More Break Away from Progressive Group At Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 25.—In the person of W. S. Haney (Conservative, West Lambton), one more dry riding representative of the Ontario Legislaturue yesterday told the Chamber why he would support the 4.4 beer amendment of the Ferguson Government. Citing conditions of law evasion in the border district which had been tending towards the debauchery of a section of the population, he declared his acceptance of the Government's measures as one which would be in the interests of true temperance, which would do much to remedy the evils which had grown up about the O. T. A. situation, and which would discourage the drinking of hard and inferior liquors, which the present law had so fostered.

Hon. Manning Doherty, erstwhile Progressive leader, could see no good in the beer proposed because of his contention that it was the way back to the open bar.

Speeches were made upon the matter by other members of the Chamber, in the course of which L. Oke (U.F.O., East Lambton), declared himself opposed to the amendment; D. J. Taylor (Progressive, North Grey), declared himself likewise; E. P. Tellier (Liberal, North Essex), declared that he would vote for the bill, and J. A. Sangster (Liberal, Glengary) forbore from expessing any opinion.

The other feature of the day's debate, apart from the O.T.A. references was Mr. Oke's open statement of his break with Hon. Mr. Raney and the Progressives. Mr. Oke said that the U.F.O. movement in politics had been sacrificed to the personal ambition of Mr. Drury and like figures and that he intended to represent the simon pure farm movement in the House, abetted by Hon. Beniah Bowman, one of the late Drury Cabinet Ministers, who still holds his place in the House. They two, Mr. Oke said, would form a new group in the Chamber.

The debate lasted until close to midnight, and the intention is for a similarly strenuous session this evening.

Ciaco Office Folk At Enjoyable Dance

Varied Program and Good Music Delighted All Guests

A most enjoyable informal dance was given last night in the Moose Auditorium by the office staff of The Consolidated Distilleries Limited. There was a splendid attendance and a most happy time resulted.

Music for dancing, which commenced at nine o'clock was supplied by the orchestra from the office, assisted by Messrs M. Young and G. Dobbs, and for an orchestra whose members have been playing together for so short a time, their music was very good. They received a great ovation from the dancers and repeated encores resulted in each dance.

A very nicely balanced program of dances in two parts gave everyone ample opportunity to enjoy themselves for the last time probably before the Lenten season. Waltzes, fox trots, social circle, moon waltz and one Rye waltz made up the interesting program.

A novelty balloon dance created a deal of fun when clusters of the short lived novelties were released among the guests. Another novelty dance into which confetti was suspiciously introduced as well as entangling streamers also proved interesting.

A dainty lunch was served after eleven o'clock.

During the evening, songs were well rendered by Mr. Arnold Thomson and Mr. Albert Baldwin. Both singers were heartily applauded. Mr. C. A. Strang played the piano accompaniment for Mr. Baldwin.

The patronesses were Mrs. W. J. Hume, Mrs. H. F. Wilkie Mrs. G. W. Davis. Mrs. J. W. Lill, Mrs. C. B. Treverton and Mrs. C. T. Carson, the patrons being: Mr. W. J. Hume, Mr. H. F. Wilkie, Mr. G. W. Davis, Mr. J. W. Lill, Mr. C. B. Treverton, Mr. C. A. Strang, Mr. J. F. Monroe, Mr. C. T. Carson and Mr. W. P. Kinsella.

FIRED SALUTE IN HONOR OF DEAD AIRMEN

Funeral Services Held at Barrie For Lieuts. White and Cross

COLLIDED IN MID-AIR

Result of Investigation Being Sent on to Ottawa

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Barrie, Feb. 25.—Funeral services were held to-day in the local churches, where the bodies of Flight Lieut. J. L. M. White, of Halifax, and Flying Officer R. H. Cross, of Toronto, were removed yesterday afternoon following the mid-air collision at Camp Borden in which the two young aviators lost their lives.

In the afternoon the remains of both officers were conducted to the station by Royal Air Force escort, the salute being fired as the train pulled out. The body of Lieut. White was removed to St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church where a service was held at 10 a.m. while the service was held in Holy Trinity Anglican Church for his brother officer at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The result of the investigation being conducted to determine the cause of the accident will be forwarded to authorities at Ottawa when completed.

The accident happened about 9.30 a.m. yesterday, soon after the two aeroplanes had gone up. There were no other machines in the air at the time, but as the crash occurred immediately above the aviation field, at an altitude of about 1,000 feet, it was seen by many persons. Col. L. S. Breadner, D.F.C., O.C. at Camp Borden, stated that both machines were apparently under good control up to the time of the impact, and that it was evident that the tragedy was the result of neither flying officer having been aware of the proximity of the other aeroplane until they crashed together.

Young Ladies Put On Splendid Show

"The Young Person in Pink" Was City Hall Attraction

Last night in the City Hall, the Hotena C.G.I.T. presented Gertrude Jenning's play "The Young Person in Pink", a favorite with the students of the Margaret Eaton School, Toronto.

Miss Alice McIntosh looked lovely as the delightful young heroine in distress and Mr. Harvey Ross made a very gallant knight errant. The part of the middle-aged Lady Towbridge, who had entrapped the hero into an engagement when he was a patient in her U. A. D. Hospital, was extremely well taken by Lazietta Currie. Arlene Andrews as Mrs. Badges provided a comedy element and all the way through the play sustained her part well. Ruth Andrews as the Balloon Woman was also very funny. The part of Miss Wynch an inquisitive maiden lady of uncertain age was ably taken by Edith Vallance. Mrs. Courtney Miller, Lady Sara and Emily, friends of Lady Towbridge, were well done by Elizabeth Cooper, Bernice and Margaret Blaind. Marjorie Taylor made a very charming Ada—the loyal champion of beauty in distress. Charlie Galway as the park keeper, Evelyn Vallance as Louisa and Ethel Lewis as Dawkins completed the cast.

The young people have been invited to repeat the play tonight at Point Anne for the benefit of the new church there.

FAMOUS OLD CHURCH DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Morlaix, France, Feb. 25—Fire destroyed the fifteenth century church of St. Jean Du Deigt, near here, one of the most famous shrines of Brittany, during the storm yesterday. Lightning struck and set fire to the adjoining house and the flames ignited the church.

Not Much Danger Of Flooding Now

River is Clear to Smith Hardware; Ice Settled Down

Belleville's liability for a spring flood in February this season is growing slighter hourly it seems to-day. Although huge and jagged ice slabs and cakes still clutter the Moira in sections, the water has lowered nearly three feet since late Tuesday afternoon when it reached its highest mark after ice floes liberated in the river near the Belleville Paper Mills, jostled their way towards the bay mouth, being temporarily delayed enroute owing to a jam up the river. During the night, however, the ice settled down and is now submerged in water here and there. The high water mark on buildings hard by the river is visible to-day, and huge slabs of ice, carried up on the river banks by the high water, are to-day marooned high and dry for destruction by sun or rain.

This afternoon the river is clear as far down as the rear of the Smith hardware. From that point southwards however, the river is a mass of ice and a sprinkling of drift wood. North of the rear of the lower fire station and on the east side of the stream, there is a break in the mass, where the fast moving and murky water hurries to the fountain head. The fast motion of the water here has cleared the spaces between two of the Railway bridge piers and a portion of the third space, making up almost half of the total width of the river at this point. Between the Lower bridge and the Railway bridge however, the ice still halts, piled highly and closely.

This morning one daring youth was seen out on the ice cakes probably seeking fire wood among the debris which include such heavy timber as a small tree, long, stout log probably from the dam, planks and boards.

HENRY SPEAKS AT ROADS CONVENTION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Motor cars and motor trucks during recent years have altered the whole aspect of highway construction, declared Hon. George S. Henry, Provincial Minister of Highways, at the twenty-third annual convention of Ontario Good Roads Association of which he is president. He thought the system of contribution to Provincial Roads was working out well. The convention will last two days. Delegates from all parts of Ontario and several prominent speakers are present.

FLOOD ANXIETIES STILL AT TORONTO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 25—Rivers and big creeks flowing into Lake Ontario through or near this city continue to cause much anxiety, following thaws and heavy rains of the last few days and consequent ice jams and flooding. Today waters of the Etobicoke creek just west of the city have swollen to raging flood and blasting may be resorted to, to release the ice at the lake front to let the waters out. In the meantime many suburban homes and the new sewage disposal plant are in danger of submergence.

REFER UNION BILL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Feb. 25—On motion of Premier Taschereau the private bills committee of the Legislative Assembly to-day referred the amended church union bill to the Legislative Assembly without recommendation.

By a vote of 87 to 35 the St. Paul's Presbyterian church Harwich township, has decided to remain in the United Church of Canada.

Councils Must Care For Graves

Letter is Sent Out By Chief Officer of Health

Ontario's Chief Officer of Health has sent out a letter to the County Councils of the Province directing their attention to the Cemeteries Act which places upon municipal authorities the responsibility of seeing that burial places are kept in decency and order. In many neighborhoods this law has long been treated as a dead letter, and the condition of the graveyards in which lie most of the local population of former generations is deplorable. To the letter of the Chief Officer of Health favorable replies have, it is understood, been received from all the County Councils so that action seems certain to be taken throughout the Province for the better care of the graveyards.

Dr. J. W. S. McCullough's letter follows:—

"I am directed respectfully to call the attention of the various County Councils of Ontario to the neglected condition of many of the cemeteries particularly the older ones of the province In these cemeteries are deposited the honored dead of the early population the pioneers of Ontario, to whose effort much of the comfort and prosperity of the present generation are due.

"I am sure the members of Councils will agree that the graves of our forefathers should not be neglected and that cemeteries should so be maintained as to prevent their being, as many are at present, an eyesore to the public.

Under the laws of Ontario (see Cemeteries Act and amendments) it is the duty of the Council of a municipality to inspect the cemeteries within the municipality and to see that the owners thereof properly maintain their respective cemeteries; but if there is no apparent owner the duty of maintenance falls directly upon the local Council. As the members of the County Council are the representtaives of the municipalities may I earnestly solicit their co-operation in this respect.

"I should be obliged if you will advise me what action if any, your Council takes in this matter."

ALASKA SHAKES AS THE EARTH QUAKES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Anchorage, Alaska, Feb 24—Towns along the 468 miles of Alaska Railroad were rocked yesterday by one of most severe earthquakes ever experienced in Alaska according to reports received today. Chimneys were wrecked, water lines broken and a Seward to Valdez cable severed. Two distinct shocks were felt here, accompanied by deep rumblings, dishes were broken in homes and patients in hospitals thrown from beds. The public school was dismissed.

KING'S CONDITION IMPROVES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 25—Improvement in King George's condition continued during the night, it was learned today. Plans are being made for His Majesty's Mediterrean trip following convalescence from bronchitis.

The twentieth anniversary of the founding of Rotary was observed at Chatham last night by members of the local club with a banquet.

PLAN TO ERECT MAUSOLEUM IN CITY CEMETERY

Agreement Signed Between Cemetery Board and Company

TO OPEN OFFICE

Cost Estimated Between $80,000 and $100,000 Lovely Structure

An agreement was completed and signed yesterday afternoon between the Belleville Mausoleums Limited for the erection of a mausoleum in Belleville's cemetery. The building is to be of stone with marble and bronze trimming and interior finish. The cost is estimated at from $80,000 to $100,000 according to the number of crypts which are required.

The Canada Mausoleums Limited will at once open an office in the Chamber of Commerce building here for the purpose of securing contracts for space in the mausoleum.

When the structure is completed the title deeds will be vested in the local cemetery board. As planned, the building will contain a chapel for funeral services and space for temporary winter interments.

Murdock Declares Nothing Doing

Ontario Representatives Turned Down on Unemployed Request

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 25—A deputation urging relief by the Federal Government for the unemployed in Western Ontario municipalities waited upon Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor, this evening. Included in the delegation were: Mayor Wenige and Alderman Neely, London, Aldermen E. J. Campbell and James Ansell, Brantford; Alderman J. W. Dawes, Belleville; Finance Commissioner Ross Toronto, in addition to J. F. White, M.P., London, and W. G. Raymond, M.P., Brantford.

Mayor Wenige and Alderman Neely and other speakers pointed out that considerable unemployment existed resulting in acute distress. Work had been undertaken by various municipalities to relieve the situation and the province was contributing one-third of the excess cost of such municipal work, which was being carried on for this purpose.

Commissioner Ross, Toronto, declared that that city was besieged with men seeking work who did not belong to Toronto.

The Minister of Labor informed the delegation that he could not hold out any hope of success towards having the Dominion Government grant assistance. The attitude had already been taken that the matter was one for the province and municipalities although he would, however, place the matter again before the Government.

COLLINS' ESTATE NEAR $10,000,000

ROTARY, ORANGE AND GREEN

Belleville Rotarians who pride themselves and rightly so, upon the achievements of that organization, will be interested in the subjoined from the pen of Captain Stephen Gwynne, ex-Irish Nationalist, M.P., and well-known author, in the London Observer:

"I confess to finding more interest in a Rotarian ceremony, at which Belfast Rotarians entertained those of Dublin, and one speaker quoted the following example as worthy of imitation. The Dublin motor trade challenged the Belfast motor trade to a friendly contest on the golf links in County Dublin. A Belfast man came on to the course wearing an Orange lily, which he promptly exchanged for the tricolor flag that decorated a prominent Sinn Feiner, and the two finished the course under these exchanged colors. It is unfortunately not recorded which won."

Any organization that unites such conflicting ingredients needs no other commendation, remarks the Ottawa Journal.

FIRST GAS

Paris is about to immortalize with a tablet the site and building which constitute the first gas house in Paris in 1797. An engineer, Philip Lebon, was the first producer, experimenting with the combustion of woods. He called his apparatus thermolamps. He did not, however, ever reap his reward, for he was assassinated the day of Bonaparte's coronation. He bore a striking resemblance to the First Consul, for whom his murderers mistook him. Gas was not enthusiastically received at first and it was not until 1819 that it was first used in the opera.

Press Opinions

EDITOR'S NARROW ESCAPE
(Bracebridge Gazette)

Once I came very near being a party politician. Only the kind advice of friends and elders prevented it. They told me party politics led to narrowness, strife, bitterness. "Give up worldly things. Ally yourself, not to a political party, but to a religious party and find peace perfect peace." So my youthful thoughts were turned in a new direction. Then I began readinig "Union" and "Anti-Union" literature. After reading several tons of it I have concluded that, in comparison, party politics is a Quaker meeting.

THE KITCHENER SENTIMENT
(Kitchener Record)

Mr. Nickle states that unless something is done to relieve present conditions the O. T. A. is doomed. In our opinion the act is doomed now. If the O. T. A. cannot be enforced it should be done away with. Laws that are not respected are worse than no laws at all. Stronger beer may mitigate some of the shortcomings of the O. T. A. but it is not likely that the enforcement of the act will be made any easier.

FLYING AND FLOODS

I've had one trip in an aeroplane. In 1920, while the Canadian National Exhibition was in progress, arrangements were made to have a race between the plane and a speed boat along the water front.

As we circled up and up over the aerodrome north east of Toronto, I admit a certain feeling of squeamishness as the hangars and fields became smaller and smaller down over the slanted flying machine. But as the machine straightened out towards the lake we began to enjoy the novel view of the big city from the air. We were still trying to locate our home just below the hill when the Exhibition grounds were reached and we were swooping down at the Manufacturers Building.

It had started to rain. The crowds had taken to the shelter of the buildings. The speed boat showed no disposition to race. The pilot jerked his head around as if to say "It's all off" and we were on our way back.

There was a touch of novelty as far as we were concerned but there was no attending feeling of fear.

The element of danger still gives a thrill to flying however. Yesterday, two Canadians were killed at Camp Borden. Quite frequently news dispatches tell of accidents.

It is a peculiar fact though that those masters of the flying act, heroes of daring exploits in the big war, are reluctant to tell others about the risky experiences they have. And it is with this in mind, I pass along a short description of "a Forced Landing" by "a pilot" which I read this week:

• • •

"Pop—Pop—Splutter—Pop."

What's that?

You are 2,000 feet up on a cross-country flight over strange country, and your engine fails! Automatically your free hand flies to the throttle control. In a quick, searching glance your eyes swing round the cockpit, taking in the details of each instrument, and finally resting on the revolution indicator the needle of which, accompanied by more pops and splutters, and a cold feeling down your spine, wavers and drops back to zero.

You've cooked! No matter the cause—your motive power is finished, and you have got to make a forced landing. Subconsciously you put her nose down into a dive thereby keeping flying speed, otherwise the machine would get out of control and spin madly downwards.

With a wonderful little thrill as you realise the test to which your wits and common sense are about to be put, with perhaps fatal results to yourself should they fail, you glance over the side to select a suitable field to land in. You select your field. The one that is largest, flattest, and is least surrounded by high trees and other obstacles. From that moment, one eye never leaves it. With the other eye you observe the direction of the wind, by watching the smoke from a chimney or by some other means. That being done, you glide the machine down to a position to leeward of the field you are going to land in. On the way down your spare hand wanders round the cockpit, pulling back the throttle, turning off the petrol and ignition switches. These precautions are to minimise the danger of fire, in case you should "crash."

You are now perhaps at 1,000 feet and you concentrate on manoeuvring the machine by means of "S" turns, into a position that will just give you sufficient height on the final approach, to clear any obstacles such as trees, houses, or hedges on the nearside of the field, at the same time leaving you as much of the field as possible to bring the machine to rest in after landing.

By now you are at 300 feet, with probably a little height to spare for the distance you have to go. You, therefore, put the machine into a "side-slip," thereby losing height without a great deal of forward movement. If you have approached well, your "side-slip" should just scrape you over the trees or other obstacles at the near end of the field, with just a few feet to spare. You are only a few feet from the ground now, and you flatten out, straighten the machine into wind and land.

You are safely down—your wits and common sense have stood the test!

Talk of the Moira overflowing her banks in Belleville, reminded me of that old story about the hero of the Johnstown flood who rode along and warned people at the risk of his own life.

This hero died, so the story goes, and he went to Heaven, where all the inhabitants gathered round and asked to hear the story of the flood first hand.

After some persuasion, the new arrival started in, but had no sooner started in, when one of the large audience, an old man with long whiskers, began to interrupt. Every little while, as the Johnstown man talked, this man would say,

"Aw H—!"

Finally the interrupter got the speaker's goat. The hero stopped his narrative and turning to one nearby said,

"Who's that old fellow breaking in on my story?"

The angel smiled indulgently and answered,

"Oh, that's Mr. Noah."

Wonder

FEW of us appreciate the value in the world of wonder.

Some two thousand years ago a Child was born, one of Whose names was Wonderful.

The shepherds wondered in the fields, the Magi wondered and worshipped the Child, and the people wondered at Him.

The people of earth have not got over their wonder yet. Once a year all the stores are decorated, the shops are full of pretty things, and people have an orgy of buying. Gifts are given to the little ones of the family and sometimes to the relatives.

Services are held in the churches and the keynote of all is this same wonderful occurrence that took place two thousand years ago.

So you see wonder is not to be discounted as a business asset. It sells many goods every year.

We come into the world wonderful at all about us. We wonder at our parents, at the house we live in, at the sky above us at everything that happens.

Little by little this faculty for wonder disappears. This process we call sophistication.

All of us seem anxious to lose our ability to wonder and to become sophisticated. Then after we have lost it we would like to have it back again.

We ridicule the poor boob at the theatre ticket office who is confused and amazed by all that is going on around him, who is awkward and stumbling because of his great wonder at what is taking place. But he goes in to the show and he gets twice as much out of it as we do.

We would give anything to be in his shoes and to have that tremendous faculty of appreciation which he has.

Wonder is at the bottom of religion. For this reason perhaps it was said that whoever shall not become as a little child shall not get into the Kingdom.

We must have the child faculty of wonder. In fact it is what keeps a man young. When he has ceased to wonder he has grown old.

True wisdom is indicated by a capacity for wonder. The really wise man knows that with all that he has found out there yet remains an infinite number of things to be discovered. He stands on the edge of his knowledge and looks at the myriad things that he cannot know.

The cheap wise man, the fraud and the egoist, looks back rather to the things he has discovered and congratulates himself upon knowing so much.

Most inventions that are of any value to the race are born of wonder. People get to wondering what this thing and that are for. They get to fumbling over it and the first thing you know is that they have come upon a great discovery.

No wonder the Lord of heaven and earth was called Wonderful.

THREE KILLED IN WRECK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 24.—The Pennsylvania Railroad issued a statement from its offices here today saying that three men were known to have been killed in a collision of two passenger trains at Manhattan Transfer N.J. The dead men whose names were not available were an engineer on one of the trains and two car inspectors who were on the ground near the collision.

To-day's Smile

Mrs. James had just moved into the neighborhood and it was her first meeting with the local sewing circle. As the conversation turned on the absent men one of the members said: "What does your husband do?" "Oh!" said Mrs. James, "he is manager of a pail factory."

"Pail factory?" said the other. "Why, I didn't know we had such a factory in town. Where is it situated?" "Well," replied Mrs. James, "my husband calls it a bucket shop, but I think pail factory sounds much better."

CIRCUS TIGER KILLS GIRL PERFORMER

Manila Feb. 25.—Crashing through the steel bars that separated it from the girl performer who was putting the animal through its tricks, a circus tiger at a Manila carnival show killed the young woman.

A Filipino detective in the audience shot and killed the maddened beast just as it was leaping from the stage on which it had ended the girl's life, into the midst of the crowded seats encircling the ringside.

"In His Quiet Moments"

A True Story

Always 'the life of the party', everybody admires Ted Carruthers for his breezy good nature and winning personality. He is a real man through and through.

But in his quiet moments—

Poor Ted has his personal problem from which he cannot shake himself free when alone. A recent illness, the price of overwork, left his health impaired. The doctor says it is only a matter of time.

He now has only a few short years in which to provide for Mary and the children. What is he to do? He is not able to get life insurance and cannot save much more than $300.00 a year. In five years this will be but $1,500.00—not nearly enough!

'Tis now he realizes just what it would have meant if he had insured when able, to provide for his wife an income of at least $100.00 a month ($1,200.00 a year) as long as she lived. At his age (35) $6.40 a week with the London Life would have guaranteed it, and worry would not now be further sapping his strength, killing any chance he may have had of recovery.

The future may easily be made safe for loved ones by insurance, and worry removed from those who have dependents.

Sorrowful Tale Of House Party

Which Ended in Death of Suitor by Young Girl

New York, Feb. 25—Visions of the electric chair came before the tear-stained eyes of 17-year-old Dorothy Perkins, as she waited in her cell in Jefferson market prison, to be arranged on a charge of killing Thomas Templeton, a suitor, at a party, in the home of her parents, 26 Jane Street, Saturday night.

"I am not a murderer—I shot Templeton by accident. Why should I shoot him—I loved him?"

The shooting broke up a party in honor of the 47th birthday of the girl's father, Randolph Perkins, and some of the witnesses bear out the girl's statement that the bullet which killed Templeton was accidentally discharged when an attempt was made to wrest the pistol from her hands.

The girl brought the pistol from her aunt's home in Connecticut a couple of weeks ago she said. She told the police she went to a dance at the Ninth Regiment Armory Friday with Templeton, a brother of former Assemblyman Jas. Templeton of Jersey City. There out of a whim—just to make Templeton jealous—she danced and was somewhat attentive to Michael Connors, 40, a contractor, and divorced.

Tells of Shooting

At the birthday party an argument arose over the girl's attentions to Connors, and, according to the girl, her father struck her.

"It made me very angry and I felt humiliated before the guests," she said. "I walked out of the room to cool off. I went to my own room and sat there thinking. I was excited and I knew everyone was drinking and it looked like trouble.

"I thought of the revolver. None of them knew I had it. I got it at my cousin's last week. She did not know I took it. Why I did I do not know. The one thought in my mind was that Dad tried to humiliate me before everyone and I wanted to get the gun away before anyone got hurt

"I hid it under my arm, I started to go out and give it to a friend to mind for me. Dad stopped me. He had been drinking. He tried to hit me. I struggled to get past him. The gun slipped down my arm in the fight. I grabbed for it. There was an explosion I saw Tom stagger back. Dad took the gun away from me and then mother took it from him.

"The bullet went through Dad's coat before it hit Tom. I ran and they caught me over at Mrs. Nora Keating's at [illegible] Greenwich street. I guess it was the drink that did it. I loved Tom. I didn't want to shoot him I just wanted to make him jealous.

"My advice to girls is to do what your father and mother want you to do and never fall in love with a married man."

CHICAGO MARKETS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Indications of enlarged export business led to upturn in wheat prices to-day, after a decline at the start.

The initial weakness was in sympathy with lower quotations at Liverpool.

It developed however, that Argentine wheat was no longer available at prices under United States wheat, and that exporters were buying in this country both at seaboard and at points elsewhere, such as Omaha. Opening which ranged from 1-8 to 7-8 lower, with May $1.86 3-4 to $1.87 and July $1.56 to $1.56 3-8, was followed by material gains all around.

Corn and oats harmonized with wheat action. After opening at 1-8c. to 7-8c. decline, May $1.28 3-8 to $1.28 5-8, the corn market scored a good general advance; oats started unchanged to 3-8c. off; May 53 3-8 to 53 1-2 and then rose to well above yesterday's finish.

Provisions were responsive to upturns in price of hogs.

2.30 p.m. quotations as received by private wire and suppplied by Dickinson and Walbank, members Montreal Stock Exchange. Belleville branch, Hotel Quinte.

MRS. EDITH LELAN GROVES —Whose long and faithful service on behalf of under privileged children, while she was a member of the Toronto school board, brought her recognition in the form of a public banquet and presentation.

Bolshies Puzzled By Famous Woman

Afraid to Deport Her; She Is Idol of the Peasants

Riga, Feb. 25.—Maria Spiridonova, probably the most famous of all Russian woman revolutionists, is on a hunger strike in a Moscow prison and it is reported that the Bolshevist officials are about to deport her to Turkestan.

Emma Goldman and other radicals have been exerting every effort to have Spiridonova released from Russia that she might recruit her broken health in Germany. But Moscow officials are apparently afraid to let her leave Russian soil. She is the idol of the peasants, and is believed by them to have a charmed life.

As a young girl Spiridonova bombed a Russian provincial governor who was notorious for his brutal treatment of the peasantry. She suffered every indignity at the hands of czarist officers and was sentenced to death. But this young school teacher who had made such a battle against the inhuman treatment of the peasantry was too well known to be executed, and was banished instead to Siberia.

The 1917 revolution brought her back to Petrograd, and although she was not a Bolshevist, she induced the social revolutionists of the left to cooperate with the Lenine forces, and became a powerful factor in the congress of soldiers, sailors and workers which brought the Bolshevist government into existence and hastened the end of the Kerensky regime.

Opposed Lenine

But Spiridonova was opposed to the Brest Litovsk Treaty. She battled against the shipments of grain and cloth from starving Russia to Germany, and opposed Lenine's efforts to arraign the penniless peasants against the thrifty peasants who had managed to buy a few sheep and cows. In the All-Russian Soviet Congress in July, 1918, Spiridonova openly assailed Lenine's policy and defied the German ambassador, Mirbach, who was subsequently murdered.

Since that speech Spiridonova has never been a free woman. For a time she was in a sanitorium and the Bolshevist authorities declared she was mentally irresponsible. Later she has been in various prisons and under guard in villages near Moscow. But at all times she has realized her steps were dogged by the secret police and she has more than once appealed to the officials to throw her back in jail. She said she preferred actual confinement to life under constant espionage.

Emma Goldman and other liberals who have seen Spiridonova frequently in Russia scout all suggestions that her mind is affected.

BELGIUM HAS RECORD IN NUMBER OF BIKES

Brussels, Feb. 25.—Belgium for its size and population, can boast of more bicycles than any other country in the world. One out of every nine men, women and children in Belgium owns a wheel, the official figures being 792,384 out of a population of a little over 7,000,000.

Bicycle racing is the national sport of the little kingdom, and 64 velodromes are holding weekly and bi-weekly meets.

Belgian riders are noted for their endurance and they devote most of their efforts to road racing over long distances. Up to 1923 and 1924, when Henri Pelissier of France and Ottavia Bottechia of Italy won the 4,000 miles "Tour de France," the race had been regularly carried off by Belgians. Local riders all look forward to the winning of a six-day race in America as the crowning success of their careers.

You Want It Hot

Every time a man invents one thing, that thing brings into use other things. Thus piping water into the home suggested the bathtub, and the bathtub suggested the lavatory and the closet and the sink.

And the man who invented the safety razor suggested hot water all the year round.

WE POINT WITH PRIDE TO THE FOLKS WE'VE SUPPLIED SATISFIED PATRONS

There is only one thing worse than shaving with cold water, and that is not shaving at all.

Summer and winter—all the time—when a man wants water for shaving, he wants it hot. And he wants it hot when he wants it—on the minute—on the turn of the faucet.

The way to have it the way he wants it is to have a hot water heater in your home.

There isn't anything that saves temper and loud words more than a water heater. It keeps cool those who shave, and it keeps sweet those who do not. (Phone 1054.)

Suppose—just for the time being—suppose we change the question, "Have You a Little Fairy in Your Home?" to "Have you a Little Heater in Your Home?"

Ask "The Little Plumber Around the Corner" about it.

Ladies League In C.N.R. Out To Start

Hopes Win From 6,000's; Wolves Roll Tidy Score

At the Recreation alleys yesterday afternoon Hope and the 6,000's played their first game in the C.N.R. ladies' league, the former team winning out, although the scores were not very high these are all new bowlers and will come right along with a little practice.

The Wolves of the North rolled up a nice tidy score of 2719 and won from the Bankers by over 400 pins in a junior league match. J. Alexander rolled 639 and Wilbur 625. For the bankers Morlock was high bowler.

The Officials team No. 2 won a very close game from the Express, winning out by 25 pins. The Express got off to a good start, getting a lead of 39 pins in the first game but weakened in the second by 87 pins and played a tie game in the third. High bowlers were Chapman and Wallace. TRAILERS AND O.S.D. WINNERS AT Y.M.C.A.

Once annually, at least, the Trailers team must go back on their name and for a brief period they fail to trail the opposition. Last night was the occasion of their departure from the beaten paths of generosity to the other team and on this instance it happened to be the Breezes. Both teams have rolled higher scores than they did in last night's fixture, in fact it was a combination of good and not so good bowling. The end of the second string saw the two teams on fairly even standing but in the final round the Trailers sprinted up and left no doubt as to the outcome. Miss McIntosh's was the outstanding score of the contest, a single of 219, and a total of 467.

Ritchie & Co. Ladies vs. O.S.D. was the second fixture of the evening and the result of this game shows a record win for the ladies from the institution of learning. In many ways it was a parallel to the first game total scores being similar also the order in which the games were won. Obtaining a good lead in the first string the O.S.D. fell off slightly in the second only to come back with renewed vigour in the final session. Miss Sinnot's 441 was the high total of the fixture and her team-mate Miss Aitcheson rolled the high single game score of 186.

STOMACH DISTRESS

MRS. CHAS. TRIMPER

Bear River, N.S.—"It is a pleasure to me to write a few lines about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In August 1923 I was taken sick and a doctor was called. He pronounced my case inflammation of the stomach and attended me for about a week, but I was getting worse. My son advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Discovery. I did so, and am glad to say in twenty-four hours I was out of bed. I am still taking Dr. Pierce's medicine. I have not had a doctor since. I am feeling well for a woman past sixty. I would highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Discovery to any similar sufferer."—Mrs. Charles Trimper, Route 1.

Golden Medical Discovery is put up in Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., and sold by all druggists in both tablets and liquid. Send Dr. Pierce 10c for trial pkg.

GRIMSBY TO MEET KINGSTON TEAM

New Hamburg, Feb 25.—Grimsby nosed out a 3 to 2 victory at the local rink last night in the second semi-final game and won the round by 5 to 2, qualifying to meet Kingston in the finals. The game was rather a hectic affair. The heavy going kept the game minus team play.

Lederman, the local defense man, who received a nasty gash at Grimsby, played a fine game during the first two periods, but had to retire in the third. The first period was the best of the three. In it the locals had the visitors backed at their own end and only the good goal-tending of Fisher saved his team.

The second period was Grimsby's and they scored two goals, one by Burnside and one by Clark. The locals worked hard in the last period and managed to notch two, one by Bowman and the other by Hamel. Horne scored Grimsby's third. The locals had the better of this period, but Fisher again saved his team. All the locals played well and to select a star would be impossible. Fisher was Grimsby's best by long odds, while Horne also played well.

New Hamburg wish Grimsby all kinds of good luck in the finals.

New Hamburg—Goal, Oliver; defense, Trushinski and Lederman; centre, L. Roth; wings, L. Bowman and E. Kalbfleisch; subs., Hamel and W. Roth.

Grimsby—Goal, Fisher; defense, Carson and McVicar; centre, Reid; wings, Horne and Clark; subs., Burnside and Hayhoe.

CLEAN-UP STAGE OR BE CLEANED UP

Paris, Feb. 25.—"If they do not do it themselves, the rest of us will have to," was the brief comment of Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, on New York's movement to correct Broadway's stage morals. "I do not know much about it myself, but it looks to me as if they needed a house cleaning." The Chicago prelate, who left for Rome, explained that his principal mission there was to consult the wishes of Pope Pius regarding the genial eucharistic congress which is to be held in Chicago from June 19 to 26.

CHURCH QUESTIONS ON GASOLINE TAX

Ottawa Ont., Feb. 23.—T. L. Church, M.P., is asking the following questions of the Government:—

(1) Has the attention of the Government been called to a proposed bill by the Ontario Government to tax gasoline three cents a gallon?

(2)—Will the Government look into the legality of this new form of taxation in view of the large grants made to the province for roads and whether the said tax is not ultra vires of the province under section 91 of the B.N.A. Act "re trade and commerce" and on other grounds?

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN: SERIAL: THEATRES

Social Items

Mrs. F. E. Jenkins, of Madoc, was a visitor in Belleville yesterday.

Mr. E. R. McBride, Charles street is in Toronto on a business trip.

Mr. Hugh Middlemiss of J. and J. Cash Inc. left this morning on a business trip to New York City.

Miss Florence Wilson, Moira street, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson in Holloway.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Anderson of Warkworth, are in Belleville visiting friends. They are staying with Mrs. Coulter on Ann St.

Mr. Clayton Hicks, Catherine street, who has been emloyed at the Hydro is leaving for Frankford, where he has a position at the Power House.

The ladies of Bleecker and Baldwin wards of St. Michael's Parish, were hostesses at one of the most successful teas of the season yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Thos. Cushing, 22 Alexander street.

The proceeds, which far exceeded expectations, are to be donated toward the St. Michael's Bazaar Fund, which event is to take place immediately after Easter.

The ladies of the two wards were responsible for the beautiful decorations, and the tea service was under the direction of Mrs. Daly and Miss Marjory Lynch.

The Bon Ton Orchestra, consisting of T. A. Robertson, Dr. Hough, J. Humphreys, F. Tracey, W. Warham, and Albert Adams, furnished concert and novelty numbers from Il Trovatore The Pink Lady, and a complete program of the latest dance music during the tea service.

Little Mary Forster pleased those present with some old Irish jigs and dances.

Miss Mercedes McLennan gave several recitations that were heartily received.

A piano trio was given by the Misses Black, Cannon and Donohue; a banjo solo by Leo Flagler and some novelty piano numbers by Jack Barrett.

Mrs. Flagler acted as convener of the ward.

MUCH CHURCH MUSIC IMMORAL, HE SAYS

York, Eng., Feb. 25.—A great deal of church and chapel music is "beneath contempt and even immoral," and "appeals to all that is low," Canon Bell, precentor of York Minister, declared in an address on religion and music.

"I believe God," he added, "does not want people to be so conceited as to think that they can sing when they cannot. I believe we can play golf or cricket to the glory of God, but I do not believe it is any good trying to sing a song to the glory of God when we cannot sing at all."

Mary Philbin Is On Her Way Here

Will Appear in "The Rose of Paris" At Belle Theatre

Winsome Mary Philbin is coming to town in a new starring vehicle, her third since she gained fame by reason of her work in "Merry-Go-Round," where she had by no means the principal part in an all star cast. Regardless of the part, however, her name was made so far as motion pictures are concerned, and Universal Pictures Corporation, makers of "Merry-Go Round," realized that in this young woman the screen had another star.

The picture in which Miss Philbin will be seen next is "The Rose of Paris," Universal-Jewel which will be screened in the Belle Theatre commencing to-morrow. Irving Cummings who directed Miss Philbin in "Fools Highway" directed, and he surrounded the star with one of the most capable casts assembled in a long time for work before a camera.

The other Universal production in which Miss Philbin was starred is "The Gaiety Girl," directed by King Baggot.

"The Rose of Paris" was adapted from the story, "Mitsi," by Delly, the pen name of a sister and brother who have taken France by storm with a number of novels in the writing of which they have collaborated. It is the story of an orphan girl whose widowed mother died leaving her to the only friend she had after being disowned because of her marriage.

Then the death of the child's grandfather leads to a search for the daughter and discloses the existence of the granddaughter, who immdiately becomes the pawn in a game of strategy played by the woman cafe owner and the partner and potential heir of the girl's grandfather.

OPERA STARS SUE ON NOVEL GROUNDS

Vienna, Feb. 25.—A novel radio lawsuit is pending in the local courts. Singers of the Vienna opera, whose voices are broadcast from the stage, have sued the management on the grounds that their commercial value is depreciated by the radio.

An opera star's assets, they claim depend not only upon his ability as a singer, but also upon his acting. The fact that the radio can transmit the voice only, but not the gestures, they contend gives an erroneous impression of the artist and thus interferes with his popularity to such an extent that his commercial value is lessened.

MANY TEACHERS WOULD GO SOUTH

Honolulu, Feb. 25.—The influx of applications of mainland teachers for positions in the Hawaiian schools this year is growing daily into proportions that lead Superintendent W. E. Givens, of the department of public instruction, to predict that the number will exceed that of last year, when there were 5,000 applications from mainland teachers for 125 vacancies.

There will be only about 100 vacancies this year and preference will be given, as in the past, to graduates of the territorial normal school or the University of Hawaii.

According to school authorities, the so called lure of the South Seas is very potent upon teachers, thousands of whom apply annually for the comparatively few vacancies that occur in the department's staffs.

Laughs Are Packed In Lloyd Picture

Famous Comedian Portrays Man Who Falls Hard For Eyes

You have heard of the fellow who vowed never to fall for a pair of "soft boiled eyes"? He usually is the first to flop. It is this type of character Harold Lloyd portrays in his newest laugh sensation, "Hot Water," his second venture as an independent producer, and showing at the Griffin theatre, Thursday to Saturday.

In the opening scenes of the picture Lloyd is shown running to a wedding to play best man for his pal. On the way he bumps into pretty Jobyna Ralston, and all his resolutions never to give up his freedom for any skirt are shot right there. The balance of the picture relates the story of their matrimonial life, with their ripples turned into wild waves of discontent through the intervention of the girl's mother and her two brothers.

There is much that's true to life in "Hot Water," but even the mother-in-law with the heart of a traffic policeman depicted in this funmaker, will have to laugh at the development of the film. One wonders how so many laughs can be created as are crowded into the five reels of "Hot Water" but Lloyd and his staff eat and sleep gags while they are engaged on a picture. They never allow their thoughts to wander, and it is this concentration which brings them the tremendous success that has been won by Lloyd and his pictures in the last few years.

Jobyna Ralston, Josephine Crowell, Charles Stevenson and Mickey McBan will be found in support of Mr. Lloyd.

HEALTHY WOMEN, HAPPY HOMES

Good dispositions succumb. Irritability and snappy retort take the place of happiness and amiability. Sunshine is driven out of homes; in fact, they are often wrecked, and friends are estranged because women suffer with ailments peculiar to their sex. The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will overcome such ailments and restore health and happiness. Do not resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy made from roots and herbs is always within reach.

Elaine

BY

Charles Garvice

Elaine was alone an hour later fashioning a garment out of nun's veiling, when there came a double knock at the door. She thought it might be the rector's daughter, May Bradley, a young girl who regarded Elaine as a type and model of all that was desirable in womanhood, and she looked up with a smile of welcome on her face, and the scissors still in her hand but Bridget burst in with distended eyes and gaping mouth.

"It's the—the marquis, miss!" she gasped holding out a card.

"The—who?" said Elaine; but she saw the tall form of the Lord of Nairne behind the startled Bridget, who had been too flustered to say anything but "Walk in, sir," and she came forward to greet him.

There was a delicious blush on her face, but she was not embarassed. If he was a marquis she was a lady, and Major Delaine's daughter was not likely to be overwhelmed even if the visitor had proved to be the Prince of Wales himself.

"How do you do, Lord Nairne?" she said, giving him her soft, cool hand—the scissors still hanging on the finger of her left.

He looked taller and more stalwart in the small room even than he had looked on the bridge when she had first seen him: and though he was dressed somewhat after the style favored by a country squire, in grey Melton coat with breeches and gaiters, there was the air of a man of fashion about him. He took her hand and looked at her fixedly for a moment.

"I had hoped to find Major Delaine at home," he said, as he sat down on the chair Bridget had nervously placed for him.

Elaine glanced at the clock on the mantelshelf—she did not possess a watch.

"I thought when I heard your step on the walk that it was my father's," she said; and even as she spoke she remembered having heard that the marquis had never been known to call at any house in Barefield. "I am expecting him every moment. I wonder you did not meet him—if you walked up from the Castle."

"I walked up, yes," he said.

He did not add that he had come to inquire about her health after the scene of yesterday, but as Elaine got rid of the scissors, and began to fold up the nun's veiling, said:

"I'm afraid I've disturbed you. Please don't allow me to do so, or I shall think myself de trop."

"You have not disturbed me in the least," she said with her bright smile. "I was just going to cut out a dress—that was all."

"A dress!" he said. "It will be a very pretty one, I should think."

"I hope so," she said. "It is for the ball on the twenty-first."

"The ball?" he said.

"Yes," said Elaine. "It is the Town Ball; we always go. It is a very good ball and I enjoy it very much."

"I didn't know anything about it," he said. "They haven't sent me an invitation." And he smiled.

Elaine could scarcely retort, "Because they didn't care to waste a circular and a stamp," and he went on:

"It is a long time since I went to a dance."

"I think you would like this one," said Elaine, for the sake of saying something.

"I'm afraid not," he responded. "The last ball I was at—it was at St. Petersburg—I trod on a lady's dress. She was one of the maids of honor to the Empress. Her brother called me an English bear, and with the laudible intention of putting an end to such an uncomfortable animal called me out and shot me in the shoulder."

Elaine colored and laughed softly.

"We are not so savage here," she said. "You can tread upon any number of ladies' dresses with impunity. I should not care to go to such a serious business as a ball at St. Petersburg. Were you glad that you did not shoot the lady's brother?"

He smiled grimly.

"Am I to tell the truth?" he said.

Elaine laughed.

"It's always best to do that," she said.

"I don't know that," he retorted. "But I'll tell it now—for once. I was rather sorry, when I felt the sting of the bullet, that I had—missed him" (he had fired in the air), "but the regret didn't last long. The poor young fellow was going to be married, so that I had my revenge by letting him live."

"I see," said Elaine. "It was a terrible revenge. He lived, and was unhappy ever afterward. Is that the end of the story?"

"Yes," he said. "Scarcely, though We met two years afterward in Paris, and he was good enough to take me by the arm—the arm he had shot—and ask me to dine at the embassy with him."

"I hope you went," she said.

"Yes, I was even magnanimous enough for that; and I was repaid, for over the dessert he assured me that it would have been far better for him if I had killed him."

Elaine looked down gravely.

"I thought you were jesting," she said. "I mean about the latter part."

He frowned slightly, as if he regretted what he had said.

"Treat it as a jest," he said. "All life is one. It is better to laugh than to cry, as Luigi says."

"Luigi?" said Elaine, raising her face.

"I beg your pardon. That is the name of a young fellow, a great friend of mine. He is as good as—as an angel, and as gentle as a woman; but he catches the reflection of my cynicism sometimes, or pretends to be cynical to please me. I am the only friend he has in the world, and he is the only—" He stopped. "Are you fond of music Miss Delaine?"

"Is there any one who is not?" she replied.

"I have never met any one who would own it," he said. "Luigi is a musician. I should like you to hear him play, and there is nothing he would like better than to have so sympathetic a listener. Perhaps Major Delaine can be induced to bring you to the Castle some afternoon?"

Elaine inclined her head slightly. After the fact of his calling nothing could surprise her.

He glanced round the room during the pause, and his penetrating eyes took in the old fashioned well-worn furniture, the threadbare carpet, the darned lace curtains; then his glance went back to the lovely face again.

"The high and mighty old Scotchman who condescends to call himself my gardener assured me in the broadest of accents, when I remarked that his roses were looking well, that he had nothing to compare with those of Miss Delaine," he said.

Elaine laughed.

"Mr. Mackay was unfair to himself considering that he gave me so many of his cuttings," she said. "And he is kind enough to come up and give me the benefit of his advice sometimes. He is a very nice old man."

"Is he?" said the marquis naively. "He is never more than barely civil to me, and only this morning informed me that I ought to be ashamed of myself for neglecting to build a new orchid house. He is a terrible old man, and every time I go into the garden I look round to see if he is in sight; and if he is I beat a retreat into the house."

"Will you come and see my roses?" said Elaine. "And will you have some tea?"

"Thank you," he said.

She led the way through the passage and the dining-room—the marquis could not fail to notice that it was, if anything, rather shabbier than the room they had just left—and into the garden.

The marquis looked round him.

"Mackay is right," he said. "You have the prettiest garden I have ever seen. It is a miniature paradise. No wonder you look so happy, Miss Delaine. I shall ask Mackay why he doesn't make such a garden down there——" and he pointed to the Castle. "But he could not do that if he tried."

"Please do not tell him that," she said with a smile. "It will seem so ungrateful to him for his beautiful gardens——"

"Yes," he said. "I know; but who would compare the huge lawns and long walks and neatly cut beds to this? And is this your seat?" he asked, stopping before the rustic bench in its bowery screen.

"Yes," said Elaine. "I spend all my idle moments here—they are not many ——" He looked at her, and she went on answering the look. "I have so much to do. And that reminds me. Do you mind my leaving you to see after tea? Bridget—our maid—has uncertain ideas as to the boiling of the kettle; and you know to make good tea the water must really boil. Will you sit down and excuse me?"

He did not sit down for a moment or two, but walked slowly about the garden, pausing now and again to look at the Castle gleaming whitely at his feet; then, seemingly lost in thought, standing before a rose tree. At last he sat down, and with downcast head looked at nothing, apparently in deep and half moody reverie.

The first sod of the St. Thomas new vocational high school will be turned on Wednesday afternoon. The honor will go to Trustee A. P. Conley, the dean of the board.

Cheese Makers' Course

The special cheese makers' course given annually at the Dairy School in Kingston opened yesterday morning and will continue till the 28th of the month. Registration started yesterday morning and up to yesterday afternoon 13 had been registered. A large number were expected to arrive in the city yesterday afternoon on the late trains and the classes started this morning.

The course which is in reality more of a convention, is intended for the experienced cheesemaker who has spent some time in the business and who wishes to keep in touch with latest advancements in the work. General defects and difficulties met with in the average day's work will be prescribed. Cheese judging, grading, and other closely related subjects will also receive attention.

Invited to Remain

CENTENARY

(By Staff Correspondent)

Decidedly the most enthusiastic reorganization meeting in the history of the Rednersville Community Club was held in Victoria church on Friday evening. Heretofore the meetings of re-organization have always been held at Centre but this year it was felt that a change would be quite in order and the movement proved a very popular one for the appointments were well represented and those present felt that they were well-paid for their attendance. The meeting opened with past president Doug. Redner in the chair and after the usual opening with Community singing he called on Centre orchestra for a selection which was greatly appreciated. The next number was a monologue by Miss Geraldine Weese which was also exceedingly well rendered and drew forth rounds of applause. The work of re-organization was then assumed and the officers, with the exception of president, were elected. President Doug was again nominated but declined the office for a third term and as no other nominations were offered it was left over until the next meeting which will be held at Albury, Wednesday, March 4th.

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows:

President—(to be elected).
Vice-president—Donald Spencer.
Secretary—Gerald Anderson.
Treasurer—Marion Allison.

Program Committees

Centre—Melvin Pulver, Annie Price, Helen Redner.

Victoria—Audra Brickman, Beryl Weese, Harmon Montgomery,

Albury—Bob Dempsey, Marion Allison, Eleanor Bonter.

Rednersville—Sherman Babbit, Ethel McLeod, Morley Wellbanks.

Solos by Miss Audra Brickman and Evelyn Montgomery and another selection by the orchestra completed the first meeting of what it is hoped will be the most successful year in the club's history.

Several of our Centre folk have been drawing ice while the ice houses at Quinte factory was being filled.

One of the most popular questions of the day seems to be "Have you fallen yet on this slippery ice."

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Harrison and son and Mrs. Harrison, Sr., of Bayside, spent Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Blakely.

Mr. D. W. Redner and Mrs. D. K. Redner visited the former's sister, Mrs. R. G. Way at Murray on Thursday.

Mr. Wesley Coulter is drawing lumber to build a new drive house.

Mr. George Clapp spent several days last week at West Lake with his brother, Rae.

Mr. William Early Brickman had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse on Monday.

HARLOWE

(By Staff Correspondent)

The roads are in a very bad condition. Owing to the heavy rain, the lumbermen are looking quite anxious. If snow doesn't come they will be at a loss as they will have to leave so much timber in the bush.

Mrs. J. Huffman, who has been visiting with friends at Tweed will be home today.

Rev. Beck had service in the Methodist Church Sunday.

Mrs. Edwin Cole of Kingston, is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Thompson.

Mr. Fred Cole from Yarker is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott.

Mrs. C. N. Bait has returned to Harlowe after spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Wood.

J. White had the misfortune to Mrs. W. Thompson. break a sleigh runner coming from Kaladan on Saturday.

GILEAD

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of M. Albert Lawrenson, on Monday evening, February 10th, when a number of their friends and neighbors invaded their home and presented them with a beautiful library table and to bid them goodbye before they took their departure for their new home at Melrose. After the crowd became seated Mr. and Mrs. Lawrenson were called and given chairs in the center of the room and the following address was read by Mr. Everett Yorke:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Lawrenson,—

It is with feelings of pleasure mingled with regret that we have invaded your home to-night. Pleasure that we can enjoy social intercourse again, and regret to feel that these opportunities in the future will be fewer. We like to think of the many times we have gathered together for pleasure only with you both in our midst and we hope they are not wholly past, yet we feel we are losing good neighbors, friends and fellow-workers.

We have always found you both ready and willing to do your part in helping in every way possible to further the interest of the church and in affairs that pertain only to the neighborhood. Your neighbors have always felt they could turn to you both in times of joy and sorrow and what greater test do we need.

True friends are indeed worth their weight in gold. We pray that God's blessing may attend you wherever you may be and may your closing years be spent in the light of his presence.

We also assure you of a warm welcome back in our midst as often as opportunity permits. We would like you to have some tangible expression of our sorrow in parting with you to accept this gift as a pleasant reminder of the many friends you leave in Gilead.

Signed on behalf of the community.

Wilmot Clare.
Thos. Coulter.
Everett Yorke.

Mr. Lawrenson though taken by surprise spoke a few words which showed that he felt the situation keenly in leaving the old neighbors. Music and games were indulged in for a time after which refreshments were served and the company dispersed wishing Mr. and Mrs. Lawrenson God Speed in their new home.

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

When you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

Avoid Laxatives—Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Old Recipe Of Sage Tea Darkens Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Keep Kidneys Clean, Drink More Water

IF BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS, ALSO TAKE A LITTLE SALTS

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep their kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Antis At Fairbank Are Going To Court

Start Action to Set Aside Vote; Unproper List Alleged

Toronto, Feb. 25—First recourse to the courts following the vote in the Presbyterian church on the question of union with the Methodist and Congregational bodies comes from Fairbank, where there was a majority of 19 for union.

Acting for George Ogle, Walter Johnston, Howard J. Deacoff, Wm. Stewart, Annie Reid, and all other members and adherents of Fairbank Presbyterian Church who do not desire to become members of the United Church of Canada, the firm of Mowat Maclennan, Hunter and Titus has entered action by a writ issued in the Supreme Court of Ontario against Rev. Harold S. Clugson, D.D., described as minister and moderator of the Kirk Session of the congregation of Fairbank Presbyterian Church, W. J. Trotham, Clerk of the Session and Robert Gibson, chairman of the Board of Managers.

The action is to set aside the vote, owing to objections of list used and to the allegation that anti-union votes were improperly rejected.

An order is asked declaring that the vote cannot effectively pass the church property to the United Church

The writ is endorsed as follows:

Plaintiff's Claim

"The plaintiff's claim is for a declaration that the vote taken in the congregation of Fairbank Presbyterian Church, Toronto, from 22nd December 1924, to the 7th January 1925, under provisions of section 10 of the United Church of Canada Act, statutes of Canada 14-15 George V., Chapter 100, was not a proper or legal vote, and should be set aside and declared void and of no effect, for, among other reasons, that the original communion roll of the congregation showing all persons in full communion on 19th July, 1924, was not produced or used at the time of voting, but instead a list of voters was prepared by the defendants on which did not appear the names of many members entitled to vote, that such members whose names were thus left off were not allowed to vote, that ballots marked against union were improperly rejected and that undue influence was used.

"The plaintiffs claim as alternative relief that it be declared that the said vote or any vote under the said United Church of Canada Act can have no legal effect to divert the property of the congregation of Fairbank Presbyterian Church, Toronto, to or for the use of the United Church of Canada or any congregation thereof."

The church property cost $91,000, and is fully paid up.

ENERGY USED IN SEEING

A person's body is like a dynamo. It produces a certain amount of energy which is necessary to perform the daily duties. Some of this energy is used in seeing. If the eyes are not normal, too much energy is used in seeing, and less is furnished other parts of the body, which results in headaches and other troubles. You ought to have your eyes examined to determine their condition.

EXPECT ELECTION IN SASKATCHEWAN

Regina, Sask., Feb. 23.—Saskatchewan will be in the throes of a provincial election campaign within six weeks, according to predictions made by persons in close touch with Premier Dunning's Cabinet.

It has been generally understood for some time that the Saskatchewan elections would occur during the summer.

It is now firmly believed that the reason for holding the Saskatchewan elections so early in the spring is to make it possible to reorganize the provincial cabinet so as to release Premier Dunning for the Federal field. It is thought that his acceptance of a Federal portfolio probably as Minister of Immigration would greatly strengthen the prospects of Liberal candidates in Federal ridings not only in Saskatchewan but in Alberta and Manitoba as well.

Ernest Foster, a young man, giving his home address as Chatham, was arrested at Alymer Saturday afternoon, and convicted of having liquor in other than private dwelling.

Alberta Coal Is Live Question Yet

Premier Ferguson Says Negotiations on For Large Shipment

Toronto, Feb. 25—The Ontario government is still hopeful that Alberta coal may find its way into many Ontario bins before next winter.

Negotiations with the western province are now under way looking to the bringing of a test shipment of 100,000 tons to Ontario early in the summer, Premier Ferguson said.

With a price $3.50 per ton, loaded on the cars from the Alberta mines, practically assured, the authorities here are hopeful that the test may prove the practicability of the undertaking.

"It will depend, of course, on what freight rate is obtainable," Mr. Ferguson pointed out. The Alberta authorities are now conferring with the railways on this question with a view to obtaining the minimum quotation. The province will be protected from loss on the experimental shipment, by reason of the fact that the dominion government has agreed to take care of any deficit which may arise on the transportation.

Such a guarantee does not, of course, extend to further shipments; and if a loss of any proportions is incurred on the trial the project may once more have to be abandoned.

A number of transportation experts appointed by the Ontario government have already been studying the project with a view to determining as to its feasibility.

GASOLINE TAX NOT FOR HYDRO BONDS

Toronto Feb. 25.—Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Highways, speaking at the annual banquet of the Ontario Motor League at the King Edward Hotel nailed to the counter the misstatement that the proposed new gasoline tax three cents a gallon was for the taking up of Hydro bonds. Every cent would be spent on the improvement of highways. The Government had in mind the debt on roads.

The minister pointed out that whereas 20 years ago, $1,000,000 a year was spent on roads, to-day $20,000,000 a year was being spent, largely due to the advent of the motor car. The Government naturally looked to motorists bearing a fair share of the cost, because "if it were not for the motor car we would not be building the type of highway we are building to-day."

During the time $22,000,000 had been collected in license fees the province returned to the municipalities $25,000,000 to improve highways.

GASOLINE TAX IN MANITOBA OPPOSED

Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Feb. 24.—Last night was gasoline tax night in the legislature and the government's bill amending the act by increasing the tax from one to three cents on gasoline used for agricultural cents on gasoline used for agricultural machinery purposes met with strenuous opposition due to the fact that additional revenue to be derived will not be earmarked for road purposes. Progress on bill was reported.

Henry Ford Buys Edison's Old Tools

Priceless Junk to be Placed In Museum at Detroit

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 25.—Henry Ford has bought the old tools and laboratory equipment of Thomas A. Edison and will ship to Detroit for display in the Ford Museum the materials with which Mr. Edison experimented and brought to perfection many of the world's most wonderful inventions.

Mr. Ford purchased the material from W. P. Ross, a blacksmith, who bought the "priceless junk" from Mr. Edison six or seven years ago. Ross has made good use of virtually every piece of the Edison equipment in his blacksmith shop, but in buying it knew that some day he would be able to realize on it.

In his museum in Detroit Mr. Ford is gathering relics of pioneer inventions. It is his wish to set aside one room for the works of Mr. Edison, who to Ford, is more than the world's greatest inventor. The two are close friends and neighbors, of Coloosahatchee Bay, a mile from Fort Myers.

It was in Fort Myers that Mr. Edison worked out a substitute for the old carbon filament then used in electric light bulbs. Here he also perfected the modern incandescent lamp. The reproduction of the human voice through the phonograph was brought to perfection here and the quiet workroom under the palms has seen numbers of other inventions progress to reality.

Ross has worked in the Edison laboratories here at intervals for the past 12 years. During that time he has never known what Mr. Edison was working on, so closely guarded have been the secrets of the wizard. It is understood that none of his workmen even knew what Mr. Edison was experimenting on.

MAY THROW OUT COL. CURRIE'S BILL

Toronto, Feb. 25.—There are indications at Queen's Park that the "government control" bill which Col. J. A. Currie, Conservative member for South east Toronto, proposes to sponsor, may meet with very short shrift.

A measure of this nature, if it affects the revenues of the province, would be out of order unless brought in as a government bill, Premier Ferguson stated yesterday.

"Of course, there might be government control without revenue, then the bill might be in order," he conceded. "But I haven't seen it, and don't know what it contains."

UNITED CHURCH IN BELLEVILLE TO BE STRONG

Estimated Total Membership Will Be Around Twenty-Two Hundred

NO CHURCHES CLOSED

Indications Are That Adjustments Will Cover Long Period

As near as can be estimated the total strength of the United Church in Belleville will be over twenty-two hundred members.

So far as Belleville is concerned, however, the consummation of Church Union on June 10th next will not cause material changes to be made for the present at least. That is, no church of the five affected by union in this city will close. The three Methodist churches will continue with the present and efficient pastors, and the two present Presbyterian churches will carry on, the John Street Presbyterian Church as a union church, however, after June 10th. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of course, will remain Presbyterian.

"We do not know what the future holds," explained Rev. Dr. F. E. Malott, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church this morning, "but so far as I can now speak, there will not be any church closed."

Time For Adjustment

Dr. Malott further explained to The Intelligencer that it would require at least two years in which to make the adjustments resultant from church union. The Methodist churches automatically enter the union it was pointed out, having so decided unanimously and being still unanimous not to reverse their decision.

Strong congregations will continue in Belleville. The membership of Bridge street church is 925, Tabernacle church is 529, and Holloway street church 431. In other words Dr. Malott ministers to 500 families, Rev. Captain H. B. Kenny to 310 families and Dr. A. Brown to 225 families. Then there are at least 100 families in, and hard by the city reckoned as Methodist families. In fact fifty additional members should be added to the membership strength as coming from mission churches in the city supported by the church.

With regard to the two Presbyterian churches, it appears as though a portion of each congregation has changed churches. The unionists from St. Andrews have joined the John street church which entered union, while the anti-union members from John street are now linked up with St. Andrew's church. Judging by enthusiasm displayed since the vote, it has caused an awakening for both churches are enjoying splendid services as well as the patronage of an enthusiastic and large congregation.

Invited to Stay

Monday night at the third quarterly meeting of the official Board of Bridge Street Methodist Church, Dr. Malott was unanimously invited to continue his term as pastor of that church, and he has accepted the invitation, the new term to commence May first. Dr. Malott, who came to Belleville from Peterboro in 1922, has enjoyed a happy and successful pastorate at Bridge street and has been very active in the welfare of the city, two organizations in which he has been a prominent leader being the Kiwanis club an dthe Boy Scout movement.

Recently Rev. Captain H. B. Kenny, pastor of the Tabernacle church was also unanimously invited to remain as pastor there for another term, and accepted. The Tabernacle church under Captain Kenny's pastorate has enjoyed almost unprecedented prosperity and success.

Similarly, Dr. Alfred Brown, pastor of Holloway street church continues his good work for the common good.

The Figures

The total membership of the three Methodist churches in Belleville is 1,935. In St. Andrews church 185 members voted against entering union, and 141 in favour of it. In John Street Presbyterian congregation, 123 voted against and 139 for it. Of the two congregations then of those members who voted, 280 members of the two Presbyterian churches signified their willingness to enter the United Church, which number with the 1,935 membership of three Methodist churches, swells the union strength of this city to 3,215.

HAMILTON TRIMS OTTAWA SENATORS

Hamilton, Feb. 26.—The league leaders played a heavy defensive game with the Ottawa Senators here last night to add another victory to their list, the score being 2 to 0. Ottawa without Cy Denneny, didn't appear as strong as on previous occasions, and they showed an inclination to play the man more than the puck with the result that the penalty box was well filled all evening. The body-checking was very heavy.

After "Red" Green and Burch had tallied for the locals, the Gardiner crew settled back to protect their lead which they did successfully by playing brilliant hockey to stave off the savage attacks of the Senators. The entire local team played well, with Forbes especially brilliant. Gorman and Clancy were Ottawa's stars, while Connell alone saved his team from a far worse beating. The Terrors had a good edge throughout.

FINE PROGRESS WAS REPORTED FOR RE-UNION

Schools Co-operate Most Enthusiastically in Giving Names

B. HYMAN, TREASURER

Letter of Invitation Prepared By Col. W. N. Ponton

B. L. Hyman was appointed treasurer of the Old Boys' Re-union Association at a meeting which was held in Judges' Chambers, Court House, last evening. This appointment was made necessary through the resignation of C. E. Hanna, who found that he would be unable to act owing to his periods of absence from the city. The appointment was made without discussion after Judge J. F. Wills President of the Old Boys' Re-union Association told the meeting that Mr. Hanna had intimated to him that were he able to be present at the meeting last night he would be favourable to the appointment.

J. A. Kerr, County court clerk who is in charge of the harvesting of names of old Belleville boys and girls the world over, so that invitations may be sent them, announces that he has received a large number of names to date and is anxiously expecting "heaps" more. In this connection, he states, the High School and Queen Alexandra public school has co-operated most enthusiastically with the result that many names have been secured from those two sources. To-day principals of other public schools will be again asked to assist the Association in this work. To assist in this work postal cards, self addressed to J. A. Kerr have been printed, and are being distributed to individuals in packages of 25, as well as to Lodges and societies in the city in as large quantities as they require. The idea is that the names and addresses of friends who are old Belleville boys or girls shall be written on the other side of the card and the card mailed to Mr. Kerr.

The meeting was approached last night by a representative of a Montreal firm which manufactures advertising stickers, samples of which were submitted. The miniature advertisers are paper and are round. They may be secured in any color and the advertising matter desired may be printed on them. A 25,000 lot would cost $100. They may be pasted on grips, club bags or about towns, and might also be used in shipping departments of industrial concerns here as well as by the express companies, it was pointed out.

President Wills promised due consideration.

A committee of four—Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., Mayor W. C. Mikel, K. C., Mark Sprague and R. D. Macauley—were appointed to arrange plans whereby a pamphlet will be printed for distribution to everyone whose name has been submitted to Mr. Kerr. The material to be used in the pamphlet will be found in the six-page letter of welcome prepared by Col. Ponton. The welcome letter which was read before the meeting by Judge Wills last evening, is a remarkable one, doubtless taking up much of the Colonel's time. It is carefully done, and written only as Col. Ponton can write.

The next meeting will be held on Saturday March 7th at 7.30 o'clock in Judge's chambers.

LIBERALS MOVE FOR HYDRO COMMISSIONER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 26—W. E. N. Sinclair Liberal leader in the Legislature has given notice of motion "that the interests of Hydro-Electric development in Ontario demand the immediate appointment of a third member of the Hydro Commission." There have been only two commissioners for several years.

BROCKVILLE LOSES

Brockville, Feb. 2—Aura Lee juniors of Toronto, playing high class hockey under bad ice conditions defeated the Brockville team last night by 2 to 1, and practically made sure of a place in the finals. The fast local players who are lighter than their conquerors were unable to get going on the soft ice surface, but even at that Brockville fans do not expect a victory in Toronto. Aura Lee, a more experienced squad, hit hard in the pinches, and they played a safe sound defensive game that had Brockville baffled.

Foxboro Man Was Killed in Napanee

John Blakely Struck By Train Late This Morning

John Blakely of Foxboro village, employed with the Bridge Construction Department of the C.N.R. was mangled to death at Napanee station before eleven o'clock this morning, when he was struck by the west bound local which is due at Napanee at 10.54 o'clock. His head was torn off and his body otherwise badly mangled.

How or why he did not hear the warning of the approaching train is not known unless the high wind which prevailed made it difficult to hear. It was not snowing at the time. Blakely was engaged at his work with other men who witnessed the accident, carrying material across the tracks when the engine struck him.

Provincial police here were notified of the tragedy and left for Napanee immediately. Coroner Cowan of Napanee will doubtless order an inquest.

The victim has lived in Foxboro for ten years. Previous to being on the bridge construction gang of the C.N.R. Blakely was engaged in farming. A widow survives, also one son, Roy, who is employed in the C.N.R. yard in Belleville, and one daughter, Hazel, at home. Mr. Blakely was a man highly respected in Foxboro and vicinity and his untimely death is much regretted by a large circle of friends.

IMPROVE APPEARANCE OF COURT HOUSE

At the recent meeting of the County Council the finance committee was empowered to make some improvements to the court room in the county court house also to the judges' room. The work is now being proceeded with and when completed the court room will present a more attractive appearance. Painters have been busily engaged in decorating the ceiling and walls, while carpenters have made improvements within the bar where the lawyers take their places. The judge's bench has been extended a few inches and a new chair has been provided. The judge's room has been redecorated and the furniture repaired. Everything will be in readiness for the opening of the Spring Assize on the 10th of March.

PASSENGER DERAILED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brockville, Feb. 26—The Canadian passenger train number 20 was derailed at 2 o'clock this afternoon at Glen Tay, three miles west of Perth, according to telephone information received here. The extent of possible casualties has not yet been ascertained. A relief train carrying doctors and nurses is en route from Smith's Falls, to the scene of the accident and all doctors in Perth have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to proceed.

Principal Doorkeep of Indiana Senate Sent to Arrest 16 Members Who Bolted

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 26.—A blanket warrant for the arrest of sixteen Democratic Senators of the Indiana General Assembly, who bolted from the Legislature yesterday and came to Dayton, was served this morning.

The Indiana Senators left their state, going into voluntary exile here last night as a protest against a gerrymander bill which they declared was detrimental to the interests of their party. By refusing to attend the legislature, they have made the passage of the bill impossible owing to the lack of a quorum. Jerome Brown, principal doorkeeper of the Indiana Senate, who was mandated to take the law makers back to the state house at Indianapolis said the men flatly refused to acknowledge the instrument. They challenged his authority, he added.

Mr. Brown said he was awaiting advice from Indianapolis and was uncertain as to his next plans.

Miss Abby Rockefeller, One of World's Richest Girls To Marry Humble Lawyer

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 26.—One of the world's richest girls will step from her parent's mansion into a modest apartment of a young lawyer when Miss Abby Rockefeller, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and David Merriwether Milton, Jr., are married next Ma. The standard of living they will adopt after their marriage will be set by his comparatively small salary instead of by her parents' millions, it was learned last night with the announcement of their betrothal. The engagement is the culmination of a romance which started in their childhood and grew during the years their families were neighbors at Pocantico Hills and Seal Harbor, Maine.

Hydro Offices at Campbellford Gone

Were Visited by Flames at Early Hour This Morning

Fire, believed to have been caused by an overheated electric stove in the offices of the Hydro construction camp at dam 9 near Campbelford, levelled the offices to the ground this morning, it being impossible to save a thing in the face of the strong wind which fanned the flames.

The fire broke out between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning and no one was in the offices at the time, the Employes at the Hydro power house which is at a safe distance away, sounding the alarm.

Wednesday was pay day at the camp, and five pay envelopes which had not been picked up were burned, more than $900 in cash going up in smoke. All books and records which are not kept in a safe but in an open drawer were consumed.

Tyendinaga Man Badly Frostbitten

Got His Feet Wet While Tending to Live Stock

W. McAuley, a resident of the Marysville district, in Tyendinaga, was brought to the Hotel Dieu Hospital late last night, suffering from a rather bad case of frostbite and while he was resting easily as could be expected this afternoon, his physicians have not yet decided whether he will escape amputation of at least several toes.

Mr. McAuley was working for a farmer in his home district, and had gone yesterday afternoon to a rear barn to feed some cattle which were kept there.

In doing so he got his feet wet. This rendered him more susceptible to frost bite, and before he could get back to the farm home he found that his feet were badly bitten. He was given first aid at the home where he worked and then brought to the Hotel Dieu.

BRITISH WORKMEN GIVING UP BOOZE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 26.—The British workmen of to-day prefers wireless to whiskey and Bunyan to Barleycorn, Captain Charles Nicholson of the Salvation Army told Finsbury Justices at their meeting to consider liquor license renewals.

"Drukenness has been retired by one half during the last few years," said Captain Nicholson "and many public drinking houses are often empty on Sunday evenings.

KING MAY RSET UNTIL APRIL NEXT

London, Feb. 26.—The progress in the condition of King George, who has been ill for several days, was maintained yesterday afternoon and only two physicians are now attending him. Lord Bertrand Dawson, the King's physician, has ceased his visits. It has been settled that their Majesties will travel overland to the Mediterranean, where the King is going to recuperate, in order to avoid the roughness of the Bay of Biscay. It is not believed that they will return to England before the latter part of April.

PLAYED HUNTER; KILLS, GRANDMA

Napa, Cal. Feb 26—Playing at hunting wild animals, Adolph Hatto 11 years old shot and killed his grandmother, Mrs. Etta Holliday last night, according to the Sheriff's office.

The boy with two younger brothers armed himself with a rifle supposed to be unloaded ran to the door to chase away "wild animals" When Mrs. Holliday atempted to take away the rifle from him it was discharged the bullet striking her in the head.

APPEAL DISMISSED

London, Feb. 26—The judicial committee of the Privy Council to-day dismissed the appeal of the Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario and decided that an amendment to judiciture act of Province of Ontario, 1924 was not within legislative authority of that province.

The amendment provides that the province would have the right to name the duties of various judges appointed to Supreme Court by Dominion Government and designate judges to head various divisions of court.

Cement Plant To Start on Saturday

Has Been Closed For Few Weeks For Repairs

Point Anne, Feb. 26.—The Canada Cement plant at Point Anne, after a few weeks' close-down for the annual repairs is to start in operation again on Saturday, Feb. 28th, and all indications point a very busy season. The storage bins are entirely emptied of cement, and many large orders are now in file for shipment. The operation of the large plant means much to Deseronto, as many men, whose homes and families are located in this town, find steady employment at the cement plant, with many of them holding important positions.

ICE HAS PASSED BELOW FOOT BRIDGE

There has been a gradual movement of the ice baywards since Wednesday until all ice has passed underneath the foot bridge. All floes are now compressing in the river between the foot bridge and the railway bridge with a channel open on the east side of the river from above a point opposite the lower fire hall to a point south of the railway bridge. Water continues to roll through this channel and is evidently finding an outlet underneath the ice which has not yet heaved at the bay mouth.

The river is now almost clear of ice as far as Corbyville but the ice in its tributaries in the north land has not yet broken up preparatory to the annual pilgrimage to Belleville.

COMPLIMENTS TEAM FROM BELLEVILLE

The following letter from J. H. Crocker, National Secretary of physical education in the Y.M.C.A. to Phil Brockel, throws light on the prowess of the Belleville Business Men's Volleyball team:

"I wish to congratulate you on the splendid volleyball team which represented Belleville. These boys were the surprise of the day's tournament and everybody was delighted with their showing. I think if they had not been so tired with their long journey that they probably would have made a far better showing, in fact I think they would have beaten the Toronto team.

"We are planning for an open tournament which will give them another chance some time early in April."

MAY RE-ORGANIZE COLONIAL OFFICE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 26.—There is a considerable omoun tof reorganization proceeding in the Colonial office in order that it will be better able to deal with the growing mass of work involved in discussing Imperial affairs with the Dominions. Treasury committee is considering certain changes which will involve increased expenditure. It is suggested that the designation "Colonial Secretary" should be changed to Secretary of State for Imperial Affairs, or som eother suitable title, also that there should be two permonent secretaries and parliamentary under secretaries instead of one. One would devote his entire attention to Dominion and Irish affairs and the other to the affairs of Crown colonies.

Caught With Dope At Noon To-day

Colored Boys From Niagara Falls Given Six Months

Frank Jones, 26, and John Parker, 2?, both of Niagara Falls, and both colored boys stopped off in Belleville enroute to "Montreal the mecca" today and their stop-over was serious for them.

Sergeant of Detectives John Truaisch arrested the duo on Bridge street east during the noon hour and in afternoon police court Parker was sentenced to serve six months on a vagrancy charge, and Jones on whose person morphine was found, was sentenced to six months on a vagrancy charge and also fined $200 and costs on a charge of having a narcotic drug. He will not pay the fine, but there is no alternative provided in the act for non-payment.

Jones has taken morphine for two years for a bad stomach he says and to-day, the pair made unsuccessful attempts to procure drugs from two local physicians. Parker, though not an addict admits having "tried" drugs. He had none of the stuff on his person when arrested.

DOMESTIC EXPORTS UP A LITTLE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—Exports of Canadian commodities exceeded imports of foreign products in value by $263,847,726 in the twelve months ended January 31. A statement made public to day shows total imports for the period of $799,982,015 as compared with $901,512,730 for the preceding twelve months. Domestic exports amounted to $1,063,829,743 as against $1,019,860,499 for the corresponding period of a year ago.

TORONTO IS WARNED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 26.—"Continued additions to the gross debt of the city cannot be made without seriously straining its credits in the eyes of the financial world," warns George H Ross, Finance Commissioner of Toronto in his introduction to the draft estimates for the city of the year 1925. Mr. Ross points out that the gros debt of the city has increased from $44,000,000 in 1912 to 173,000,000 in 1924. Taxes which in pre-war days averaged from $12 to $2 per capita now amount to $46 per capita of population.

Man Who Ran Down Wife's Companion At Niagara Pleaded Guilty To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Welland, Ont., Feb. 26.—Frank Barned, of London, Ont., when about to go to trial this morning for the murder of Smylie Muirhead at Niagara Falls last October, pleaded guilty to manslaughter which plea was accepted by the court and no evidence was taken. Barned will be sentenced at the end of the assizes.

Barned who had been separated from his wife drove his automobile on the sidewalk as she was walking a long with Smyllie Muirhead and Mrs. Muirhead striking them down. Mr. Muirhead was killed and Mrs. Barned was seriously injured.

WEST HAS WON ITS APPEAL ON FREIGHT RATES

Supreme Court Rules Crow's Nest Pass Act Holds

NOT FOR EVERY PLACE

Apply Strictly to Points Designated When Agreement Made

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—Western provinces have won their appeal in the Crow's Nest Pass rates case. The Supreme court of Canada decided this morning that the Crow's Nest Pass Act was binding on the board of railway commissioners.

The court however, holds that the Crow's Nest Rates are not applicable to all points east of Fort William now on the Canadian Pacific Company's lines. To the question.

"Are such rates confined to west bound traffic originating at Fort William and at such points east of Fort William as were at the date of the passing of the act and, (or) making of the agreement on company's line or railway, the court answered in the affirmitive.

The court also holds that the rates apply only on traffic consigned to places west of Fort William which were on the campanys lines, owned or operated at the time of the passing of the act.

To the question whether the Railway Board had power to authorize rates on the C. P. R. on grain and flour from all points on the company's lines west of Fort William to Fort William and Port Arthur and all points east, beyond maximum rates specified in the Crow Nest Act, the court answered "no."

CHICAGO MARKET

Chicago, Feb. 26.—With broader demand from speculative buyers and with offerings scarce wheat market made lively advance today during early dealings. Gossip was current that rural domestic stocks are smaller than generally supposed. Besides reports were at hand that Russia had purchased 20,000 tons of wheat and flour at London in last four days and that Fall sown crops in Southeastern Europe had suffered widespread damage. Opening which ranged from ½ to 1⅝c higher, May $1.90¾ to 1.91½ and July $1.59½ to 1.60 was followed by additional upturn that carried May to $1.92½. Increased commission house buying of corn gave strength to that cereal and to oats as well. After opening unchanged to 1¼c higher May $1.31¼ to $1.31¾, corn market scored material gains all around. Oats started unchanged to ¼c up, May 54⅛ to 54⅜. Later moderate general advance took place. Provisions were firmer sympathizing with higher quotations on hogs and on grains.

Time Savers

ALMOST all modern inventions are eventually for the purpose of saving time.

Mr. B. C. Forbes in his column gives us an interesting list of these time savers.

It includes electricity, the cinema, the airplane, the mechanical harvester and the like.

It will be found that the cotton gin, power loom, shoe making machinery, the sewing machine, washing machine, steam drill, electric iron, dish washing machine, mimeograph, telephone, telephone, telegraph and subway are fundamentally valuable because they save time.

Time savers release the activity of the race from being occupied with menial tasks to be devoted to better things.

It has been often said that everyone of these inventions turned a certain number of men out of work. They do this but they re-employ the men at better jobs and at better wages.

The locomotive threw an infinite number of hostlers and horse tenders out of their employment, but re-employed them as brakemen, conductors and the like.

These men have an opportunity of living better lives, have more leisure and more comforts.

"Business," says Mr. Forbes, "may have its faults; it does have its faults. But let us in all fairness never forget that business is largely responsible for enriching our lives by saving us with the abundance of necessaries, comforts and luxuries which we Americans enjoy in greater measure than any people on the face of the earth."

It used to take a great deal of time to communicate with people by messenger, which is now all saved by the use of the telephone and telegraph.

It is now taking much time to reach the Pacific coast from the Atlantic by train, which will soon be cut short by the use of the airplane.

The United States is a great mixer of peoples. And the mixture is made more complete by the ease and rapidity of travel and by the quick communication of thought.

There is much said about the modern man's not having as much leisure as the man of former time. As a matter of fact he has more leisure. Only he gets more done before he rests.

One reason why he is so efficient is because of his ingenuity in invention and in training the powers of nature to do work that was formerly done by human power.

The time is coming, and it is not far distant, when all the menial work of the race will be done by the inanimate forces, and the power of all men will be released to devote itself to social progress.

MAKING MONEY FOR FARMERS

Time is money, is an old axiom, and one that is only too true, says the Natural Resources Intelligence Service. Especially do we appreciate this condition when we find it necessary to call in the plumber, the carpenter, or any mechanic of other trades whose charges are based upon the length of time he occupies in completing the work required of him. The farmer's time also is valuable, and must be paid for by the consumer of his products. If he requires two hours to perform a certain piece of work he is entitled to be paid for the time consumed, and no one will begrudge him his charge.

This applies to his time in reaching markets or in his other trips to dispose of his produce. Under old highway conditions, when mud roads were mainly the only kind available, many valuable hours were consumed in reaching the destination, and loads were limited in many instances to the capacity of the team to haul the wagon over the poor roads. When any considerable distance had to be covered, a start had to be made in the small hours of the morning to reach the market on time, and the return journey had to be started early sometimes entailing the acceptance of sacrifice prices in order to dispose of the load. Times have changed, however, with the coming of good roads. Today he can get over the same distance in one-half or less of the time he previously took, and he can do it with much more comfort. He need not start as early in the morning and he has a longer time to sell his produce while the early evening sees him back home. His day is consequently shortened and life is made more enjoyable. An illustration of what good roads mean in actual cash is furnished by a large dairy company that collects its milk within a wide radius. The company pays a higher price to the farmers living on good roads than to those situated on highways that are unimproved. The reason is quite evident. It costs the company more in time to collect the milk on the poor roads.

Canada has invested nearly $100,000,000 in improved highways, and has nearly 200,000 miles of good roads. Millions of dollars are being spent yearly to add to this mileage and to improve existing roads. It would be interesting to farmers located on good roads if they would keep a record of the time saved by them and of the greater loads they were able to haul over the good roads. It would lead to a greater appreciation of what this enormous expenditure means to them.

And while we are giving credit to our good roads, let us not forget that Canada's mineral resources have made the good roads possible.

BUGS AND BUGABOOS

Just when the farmers of the Maritime provinces were beginning to feel that they have found in Great Britain a good market for their potatoes, says the Woodstock Sentinel Review, the British authorities have placed an embargo on all potatoes from Canada. The embargo applies to the United States as well as to Canada; or it might be nearer the exact truth to say that the embargo applies to Canada as well as to the United States, for it was to American-grown tubers that the order was first applied; and the professed purpose is to protect British potato-growers from the menace of the Colorado beetle, more commonly known in this country as the potato bug. The Canadian authorities have been putting up a strong fight against the embargo, but apparently in vain. They have undertaken to prove, and apparently have succeeded in proving to their own satisfaction, that it is impossible for potato bugs to be included in shipments from Canada. Potato bugs do not feed on the tubers, but only on the leaves, but when the potatoes are ready for shipment there are no leaves, and the potato bugs are in the ground undergoing a certain stage of their development.

The weight of the argument seems to be on the side of the Canadian authorities; but the British authorities claim to have discovered potato bugs in shipments of American potatoes, and that would seem to place the weight of the facts on the side of the British authorities. At any rate the British authorities have the say.

It will be remembered that once upon a time an embargo was placed on Canadian cattle for the avowed purpose of protecting British farmers against a certain disease. Long after it was acknowledged that whatever danger from disease there might have been had passed, the embargo was maintained, for the protection of British farmers against Canadian competition. There is a feeling in some quarters at the present time that the potato bug may be called upon to serve the same purpose as that which was served by the alleged cattle disease, namely, that of furnishing an excuse for protecting the British potato-grower from Canadian competition. Of course if the British authorities want to do that, it is their own business; but it is scarcely the British way or what people have come to regard as the British way, to blame even a potato bug unfairly.

Press Opinions

THE "GAS" TAX

(Hamilton Herald)

The joke was on the deputation from the Ontario Motor League which waited upon Premier Ferguson yesterday to protest against the imposition of a tax of two cents a gallon on gasoline. After listening to their protest, the premier calmly announced that the tax would be, not two cents a gallon, but three cents.

It remained for the Minister of Highways, Mr. Henry, to defend the proposed tax. He did so at the dinner of the Motor League in the evening; and it is fair to say that Mr. Henry presented a pretty good case. The proposed tax is about the same as that imposed in many states of the American Union, and it is less than the Quebec tax, which is four cents a gallon. All the revenue derived from it will be used for the upkeep of the highways and the reduction of the capital indebtedness incurred in their construction.

It would not be easy to suggest a fairer expedient for raising revenue for these purposes.

THE ANNUITY FOR DR. SAUNDERS

(London Free Press)

While the Free Press has been a critic of governmental expenditure and believes that national economy is a pressing necessity, yet it must commend the King government for including in the estimates an annuity to Dr. Charles Saunders of $5000. Dr. Saunders, who retired recently from the government service owing to ill-health, has increased the wealth of Canada by millions through his discovery of Marquis wheat. This wheat is now the standard No. 1 of western Canada. From a few grains first produced but a few years ago, there is now grown yearly hundreds of millions of bushels.

MACHINE MUSIC

(Woodstock Sentinel Review)

Some new and interesting light on the development of the phonograph business was furnished by representatives of big talking machine companies who appeared before a committee of the U. S. congress recently. One statement was that it cost $100,000 to secure a satisfactory record of "Nearer, my God to Thee"—it was necessary to buy a church and a pipe organ to carry on experiments. One witness testified that his company paid out a million dollars annually in royalties on records. It also came out that Ethelbert Nevin received the magnificent sum of $15 from the publishers for "The Rosary" and slightly larger sums for "Narcissus" and "Mighty Lak a Rose." His widow received big sums in royalties on records of these pieces. It was given in evidence that one cheque alone which she received was for $15,000.

Clearly the talking machine business is not all talk.

A horse with a cutter attached, came down from Trenton last night without any passengers. The young men hired a rig and followed. An upset was the cause of the trouble.

Hot water and steam radiators are said to be doing more to cause colds and pneumonia than any other agency of modern times.

It has been known for some time that Bridge St. Church has had a committee at work endeavoring to arrange to the satisfaction of everyone a successor to the Rev. E. N. Baker. This committee reported to the official board of the Church on Tuesday recommending that Rev. John E. Lanceley be invited to the pastorate for next year.

Mr. Martin Wims, proprietor of the Ontario House, was married in St. Michael's Church early this morning to Miss Minnie Berry.

The end of the barn at the Old Homestead, on the corner of Hotel and John Sts., nearest the street, had a falling out with the rest of the structure last night and this morning it lay upon the sidewalk. The street was cleared up to-day and a reconciliation will likey be patched up between the parts.

Proposals to make London's drinking bars more attractive by decoration and improved lighting effects, have met with protests from many prominent people, among them Lady Lawson, who contends that brighter 'pubs' would tend to increase drunkenness, especially among the women. The United Kingdom Alliance condemns the brighter bars movement, as "designed to catch the young people.

Dutchy's Diary

COCKFIGHTING

I see that a man down Windsor way has pleaded guilty to operating a cocking main and has been fined $50 or three months. There were more than one hundred cockfight fans from Detroit and Michigan points to witness the sport.

Battle to the death by game cocks is amusement for the few. The ordinary citizen hears about them but is not privileged to be present. I understand that in what are styled "the good old days" there was much of this sort of entertainment to be had in Hastings County. Perhaps the odd bout is staged now, but if they are, the proceedings are kept strictly quiet.

For the life of me, I cannot analyse the strange kink in the mind of a man that permits him to take enjoyment from this sport. I know one or two Canadians who in their normal life are good fellows, often going out of their way to help others, and are yet keen on a cockfight.

After the Somme scrap in 1916, before we moved up into Vimy, two of us heard of a cockfight to be held on a Sunday afternoon in the French town of Bruay. Neither of us had seen one before, and we walked four miles to get there after a heavy dinner of stew and rice.

Upon making some discreet inquiries, we found our way to an estaminet, bought dirty pasteboard tickets from Monsieur at two francs apiece, passed out the back door and found ourselves at the scene of battle.

The place was the site of a small back yard in a big city. Storey and a half wooden structures flanked the area and a high board fence shut off any view from the back. It was a little arena. Down in the centre was a square platform something like that used for boxing matches only wire netting took the place of ropes. A space of about four feet was left between this ring, or main, and the ringside seats, in which the bet takers travelled. The seats were banked up in arena style to a height about half way up the adjoining buildings.

In a short while all available accommodation was taken up and the bird owners brought out their bags containing the fighting birds.

The first scrap was fought by a little red fellow and a black. They were dumped in the ring by their owners at opposite sides, and for a moment or two blinked stupidly in the bright daylight.

Frenchmen commenced to yell encouragement at their favorite gamesters. A couple started the rounds, clutching five franc notes in their hands and calling for bets.

"Cinquante francs en rouge!" exclaimed one man.

"Vingt francs en noir," cried another.

"Allez! Allez!" the crowd shouted to the birds.

The red chap took a step or two toward the centre for all the world like a man with newly shined shoes crossing a muddy road. The black shifted his position slightly and the combattants began to glare at each other.

A rustle of feathers accompanied a rush at each other that took place much quicker than it takes to tell it.

Sharpened needles or spurs as they are called had been attached to the feet of both. They went home in the bodies of the birds with rapier like thrusts. The red boy stuck his weapon in the eye of his opponent, and his backers shouted with glee. Blood dripped to the floor. The black became groggy but fought back hard and in a moment had drawn blood from the red.

Another rush and the black was down, the red on top. The vanquished quivered and died. The owner of the victor picked him up with pride. Two others were prepared for the next battle.

We watched this struggle and left the rest of the afternoon's program to the Frenchman. We had had enough.

Perhaps these men who take a delight in this kind of sport may be traced in a direct line to the old Romans who cheered men as they battled to the death for the sport of the thing, and enjoyed watching the hungry lions mangle the Christians.

At any rate the legislation that forbids cockfighting should not be classed with "blue" laws.

U.S. PEOPLE ARE TIRING OF JAZZ?

New York, Feb. 26.—"Jazz age" is passing, according to a referendum of 54,000 fans analyzed by radio officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Whereas two years ago "fan letters" indicated an overwhelming desire for jazz music from broadcasting stations, John A. Holman, manager of WEAF, announces that a recent poll revealed only five per cent. preferring jazz and a tremendously increased percentage desiring good music.

Here are the referendum reports: 1923—Jazz, 75 per cent.; good music, 20 per cent.; talks, 5 per cent. 1925—Jazz, 5 per cent.; good music, 45 per cent.; talks, 20 per cent.; scattered, 30 per cent.

Holman estimated that there are now 20,000,000 radio fans in the country. "Good music," he said, "that is, concert and standard numbers, philharmonic concerts and the like are steadily growing in popularity."

NORWEGIANS TO GATHER AT TWIN CITIES

Fifty Thousand Canadian-Norwegians Will Attend Norse-American Centennial at Minneapolis and St. Paul in June.

King Haakon, President Coolidge and Lord and Lady Byng Invited.

Professor Gisle Bothne

In June next, between three and four hundred thousand Canadians and Americans of Norwegian origin will gather at the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul to celebrate by a great national gathering the hundredth anniversary of the landing in America of the first organized party of Norwegian settlers on the Continent. It was in 1825 that the little sloop Restaurationen, of 45 tons, set sail from Stavanger carrying a little band of adventurers who settled in New York state and ever since that time there has been a steady stream of newcomers to this continent from their homeland.

The coming gathering and its purposes were recently discussed at the head offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal, by Professor Gisle Bothne of the Minnesota state University at Minneapolis. The professor stated that the Legislatures of Minnesota had endorsed the gathering and had forwarded through the Secretary of the State of Washington invitations to President Coolidge, King Haakon of Norway and the Governor General of Canada. President Coolidge had already accepted and Lord and Lady Byng have given assurance that they will attend. It is expected that about 50,000 Norwegians now living in Canada will attend the Norse-American Centennial.

The gathering will be opened on June 6 next and about forty "Bygdelags" or Norwegians Clans will hold meetings during the first day. On Sunday June 7 the Bishop of Oslo, which until recently was known as Christiana, will hold a divine service and the succeeding days will be given up to meetings, field sports and musical competitions, and an historical pageant depicting the Viking activities of one thousand years ago and the history of Norsemen at home and abroad up to the present time, portraying their contributions to civilization, in discoveries, science, agriculture, industry and commerce, in art and literature will be staged. The costumes will be magnificent and in brilliancy of technique, in magnitude and splendour the whole array will rival anything of its kind that has heretofore been produced. The other features of the Centennial are being prepared on the same elaborate scale.

It is already arranged that a large delegation from Norway's parliament will be present and there is some hope that the Norwegian Crown Prince may attend. Five Norwegian-American universities are closing for the summer early so that their faculties and students may be present. Professor Bothne pointed out that the Norwegians had done much in the building up of the central western states and their influence was shown by the fact that the governors of no less than five states were of Norwegian birth or descent. It has been proposed that the Canadian Department of Colonization shall have an exhibit at the convention.

In the course of the interview professor Bothne stated that undoubtedly the new United States immigration laws would result in large numbers of Norwegians coming to this country during the next few years.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM SURROUNDING PLACES

This week Mr. Harry Darling of Latimer met with an unfortunate accident when chopping wood. A small stick with pointed end flew backward and struck him in the face, penetrating the flesh on one side. Medical attention was needed to close the wound which required several stitches.

Rev. John McCarthy

The Archdiocese of Kingston has lost a valued priest in the death of the late Rev. John McCarthy, who passed away at Centreville on Saturday after a brief illness. The funeral takes place there to-morrow morning, the pontifical requiem mass being celebrated by His Grace Archbishop Spratt, assisted by the priests of the Archdiocese, and the sermon will be delivered by Rev. D. O'Sullivan, C.S.S.R.

The late Father McCarthy was a native of Ireland, and was ordained there in 1888, coming to this country shortly after. His first parochial duty was as curate at Prescott, later he was appointed parish priest at Merrickville and still later he was transferred to Morrisburg. About seventeen years ago he was transferred to Camden, where he has labored since.

In all his charges he was distinguished by many priestly virtues, and he did much to advance the spiritual and temporal welfare of all. Among others than his parishoners he was highly esteemed and his passing is regretted on all sides.

Ice Goes Fast

The roar of the water going over the falls at Napanee night and day is an indication that spring is near at hand. Not in many years has the ice began to break up as early as it has this year. The river below the falls is clear of ice as far as the foot bridge, which is a record in Napanee.

Cheesemakers Register

Up till noon on Tuesday fifty-five cheesemakers had registered for the short course at the Eastern Dairy School, and it was believed that five or ten more might still report. Lectures began Tuesday morning. This is a special course lasting only a week and intended for experienced cheesemakers. Here they meet and discuss the difficulties and learn of the latest advancements and specializations in their profession. It is this sort of study done by the keen men who attend such courses that does much to place Canadian cheese in the envied position which it holds in the export markets of the world.

Standard Bank is In Strong Position

Total Assets Amount to $83,520,820; Add to Reserve Fund

A position of unusual strength and a condition that will enable it to handle its full share of the business requirements of the country are the outstanding features shown in the annual statement of the Standard Bank of Canada. The report, which is for the year ending January 31st, is the first issued by the Standard Bank since the Sterling Bank of Canada was amalgamated with it. On this account there will be special interest in the figures submitted and it should be a matter of great satisfaction to the public, as well as to the shareholders, that the combined resources have made for such marked strength and at the same time enable the Bank to offer more efficient services to a much larger clientele.

The general statement of assets and liabilities shows that the total assets of the combined banks amount to $83,520,820. Of this amount as much as $40,000,000 is in liquid, or immediately available assets, equal to over 53% of liabilities to the public. In addition these liquid assets include cash, as represented by current coin, Dominion notes and deposit in central gold reserves, of over $10,000,000, being more than 25% of liquid assets.

Holdings of High Grade Securities

The principal accounts included in liquid assets are a very large proportion of holdings in high grade securities, Dominion and Provincial Government securities amount to $14,383,293; Canadian Municipal and British, Foreign and Colonial Public securities $3,148,197; Railway and other bonds $450,475, and total call and short loans $6,769,330, making the total in this department $24,750,296.

Indicating the large amount of general business being handled are current loans and discounts entirely in Canada of $36,077,030 and loans to cities, towns and municipalities $1,758,201.

The confidence enjoyed by the Bank among a large number of depositors is reflected by total deposits of $63,432,377. These include deposits bearing interest of $52,048,439 and deposits not bearing interest $11,383,938. The Bank's paid up capital now stands at $4,833,400 and the Reserve Funds to which has been added $150,000 now totals $2,900,000.

Earnings Well Maintained

The Profit and Loss statement shows that earnings, after providing for all charges and dividends, permitted of a liberal amount being added to the balance carried forward. The profit for the year after deducting expenses, interest accrued on deposits and rebate on unmatured bills, Provincial taxes and making provision for bad and doubtful debts, was $685,682. This, added to the amount carried forward from the previous year, brought the total amount available for distribution up to $904,344, which was appropriated as follows: dividends $488,234; war taxes on note circulation $40,000; Reserve for Dominion Income Taxes $50,000; contributed to Officers' Pension Fund $25,000; transferred to Reserve Fund $150,000; leaving a balance to be carried forward of $151,110.

Meddling With Canada's Affairs

(From Saturday Night)

The National Publishers' Association of the U. S. A. is all "het up" over the oft repeated suggestion in this country that something should be done to either cut off or slow down the export of our pulpwood to the United States. In a word conserve Canada's natural resources for the use of Canadians or Americans who wish to take advantage of their opportunities by operating in Canada.

A brief was presented the other day on behalf of the National Publishers' Association to Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. The document is interesting. Among other things it accuses us of bad faith. "Under a mask of forest conservation," says the document, "Canadian manufacturers are trying to force the Dominion Government to stop the exportation of pulpwood." Further on the Brief states: "They are trying to force the American operators to move their mills into Canada where the wood would be transformed into pulp for the paper mills here. That accomplished, the next step would be to embargo pulp, thus forcing Americans to make their paper in Dominion territory under the domination of the Canadian paper industry."

Well, supposing we do all that. A million cords of pulpwood exported brings Canada some $10,000,000. Made into newsprint this amount of pulpwood is worth approximately $70,000,000. Is that worth while?

In their brief the National Publishers' Association admit their dependence upon Canadian pulp, and they further state that without Canadian pulp being freely admitted to the United States the employment of some 120,000 workers would be jeopardized. That can be readily adjusted, for they may work up here. That seems a reasonable solution.

Any objection to our looking out for our own interests comes with bad grace from a people who have done everything possible to keep Canadian products out of the United States market. And as they apparently have a great dislike to that word embargo, let us drop it and substitute the word duty, —a duty on export. There can be no possible objection to a duty which will preserve our pulpwood for our own people in the same manner as the United States farmer and stockraiser and dairyman are preserving their own market for their own produce by placing an insurmountable duty against Canada.

Of course this is not the first time we have heard of the National Publishers' Association. If we are not mistaken these are the same gentlemen or was it their confreres the members of the American Pulp and Paper Association who employed expensive lawyers to trapes around with the Royal Commission re the pulpwood situation a couple of years ago, feeding the members of the Commission such evidence as best suited their purposes, in their attempt to defeat the objects for which the Commission was appointed.

As the Toronto "Mail and Empire" well puts it: "The pulpwood produced in this country is subject to the laws that are made in this country with which our neighbors have nothing to do."

The farmers of the Fordney tariff did not consult us previous to cutting out from under Canadian producers practically our entire United States market in certain lines, and it is indeed a poor rule that will not work both ways.

The contention of the National Publisher's Association that an embargo on pulpwood will advance the cost of newsprint and other papers cannot be taken seriously in view of the fact that Canadian newsprint makers are successfully competing with the United States manufacturers in their own market, and costs if anything are lower here than in that country.

There is no reason whatever why Canadians should pay the least attention to what the National Publishers' Association, Senator Borah or others from the United States have to say in respect to the distribution of our own products. This is a matter that is exclusively our own business and the country as a whole is in practical agreement as to what should be done. Let Parliament at the coming session put into effect this embargo, or if they like it better an export duty on pulpwood. It is already two years overdue. The last shred of argument against it went by the board when the United States government placed what is tantamount to an embargo against Canadian products.

Hotels Want Sole To Sell New Beer

Association President Says Accommodation Would Be Improved

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 26— Standard hotels should be given the sole right to handle the new 4.4 per cent. beer if it is authorised by the Ontario government, declared George H. O'Neill of Toronto, president of the Ontario Hotel Association, and general manager of the United Hotels of Canada, in an interview given at the Prince Edward Hotel here.

"Our hotels are public utilities, giving public service for which they receive no benefit," Mr. O'Neill said, "and should receive whatever benefit may arise from the sale of this beer. It is considered to be non-intoxicating, but it is a beverage people will want, and its sale by hotels exclusively would assure the maintenance of better accommodation for commercial travellers and tourists."

All classes of standard hotels would benefit by the move, Mr. O'Neill declared, providing uniformly beter accommodation and service for different classes of the travelliing pubic.

SMUGGLER IN FRANCE FINED HUGE SUM

Paris, Feb. 26—A fine of 80,000,000 francs and a sentence of fifteen days imprisonment in jail was imposed on Henri Manem by a Paris court on conviction on a charge of bringing into the country 2,000 pounds of gold, silver and platinum ingots, valued at $4,000,000 paper francs.

Manem purchased the bullion in Germany. It was mostly of melted currency smuggled into France during the course of several trips he made across the Rhine. Manem hid the bullion inside his mattress in the sleeping car and virtually slept on a bed of gold. He was arrested by customs officials at Thionville.

Canadian Move Criticized by Times

Australian Government's Shipping Venture Proved Costly Failure

London, Feb. 26— The Times, commenting on what it terms the collapse of the Australian government's experiments in public ownership of merchant shipping," says that the report of W. T. R. Preston to the Canadian government on the North Atlantic freight rates situation, has a material bearing on the question of state as opposed to private enterprise.

"There is a certain irony in the fact that just when the Australian government's shipping venture proved a costly failure, the Canadian government is proposing to subsidize private shipping interests," says the Times. "It is, of course, their right and duty to frame their transport arrangements on lines which seem to them best calculated to promote the interests of the population they serve. It can only be hoped from that point of view that this experimental step will prove more successful than has been the case with her sister dominion, and that the burden of the tax payers will not grow to proportions too heavy to be borne.

"But there is an aspect of the proposal with which the government and shipping interests of Great Britain are intimately concerned. Its basis is that in the opinion of the Canadian government the freight rates in the North Atlantic are unfounded on Preston's report. In defending British ship owners against the charge of strangling trade from Canada by excessive rates, it has already been pointed out how relatively small compared with land rates are sea freight rates for shipping Canadian wheat across the Atlantic. This is only one example of the kind of rebutting evidence which could be set against Preston's charges.

"The case for a searching enquiry of the whole question by the imperial shipping committee seems complete."

THIS DRY CLEANER KNOWS HER FOLK

San Francisco, Feb. 26—The old saw that no man is a hero to his valet might be transposed to say that no man or woman either is entirely a mystery to his or her dry cleaner if one accepts the views of Miss Elizabeth Santry, receiver at a local dry cleaning establishment.

Miss Santry sums up her recreations severely as follows. "The men are unfaithful and careless. The women are stupid and indifferent." She explains that men are prone to leave love letters in their clothes, and that women make a habit of sending garments with jewelry adhering.

"Life in a dry cleaning office is just one piece of jewelry after another and one love letter on the heels of another. When we send the letters home in the cleaned clothes, wives always get them and trouble follows.

"I called one woman up at a hotel and told we had her diamond sunburst, worth a fortune. She yawned and told her we had her diamond sun a bell hop over some time today."

AUDITORS' REPORT TO THE SHAREHOLDERS

We have examined the books and accounts of The Standard Bank of Canada at its head office for the year ended January 31, 1925, and have been furnished with certified returns from the branches. We have obtained all the information and explanations we have required, and in our opinion all transactions of the Bank which have come under our notice have been within the powers of the Bank.

The Bank's investments and cash on hand at its chief office and certain of its principal branches, were verified by us as at January 31, 1925.

We certify that, in our opinion, the above general statement of Liabilities and Assets at January 31, 1925, discloses the true condition of the Bank, and is in accordance with the books of the Bank.

But Belleville Wins by 2775 To 2681 at Recreation Alleys

Kingston bowlers may have been bowling only a short time, but that isn't saying that they are not very good in knocking the wood down. Last night at the Recreation alleys a Kingston team played the Wanderers and it looked for a while as if Kingston was going to pull out a win. Both teams started off like a house afire, the Wanderers rolling 1007 and Kingston only 63 pins down; in the second, Kingston rolled 95 with the local team 11 pins on them, in the third both teams weakened from their other score the Wanderers rolling 834 and the visitors 788 the locals winning by 94 pins Players and scores.

Another new league started at the Recreation alleys yesterday morning the Night Hawks from the C.N.R. The first game to be played was between the Greasy Five and the Hot Shot the latter team winning out after being down the first and second games.

The Ramblers won from the Strikers in the ladies league by an even 300 pins. Miss H. Blaind and Mrs. Salisbury were high bowlers.

The Natural Tread are keeping up their winning streak after losing the first two games. last night they put away the Nat. Castings by 111 pins. N. Turner with 678 was top notch bowler, for the winners Rofe was high.

In the C.N.R. league the Supt's. Office No. 1 won from the B&B Dept. by 70 pins—both teams rolling up a nice total score. Sloan and Lent were the leading bowlers for their teams.

The Kiwanis lost another game and this practically puts them out of the running. The winners were the Hardware, winning by 223 pins. Whelan and Donahue were high bowlers. Players and scores.

ENERGY USED IN SEEING

A person's body is like a dynamo. It produces a certain amount of energy which is necessary to perform the daily duties. Some of this energy is used in seeing. If the eyes are not normal, too much energy is used in seeing, and less is furnished other parts of the body, which results in headaches and other troubles. You ought to have your eyes examined to determine their condition.

Rinky Dinks Make Last Lap Sprint

Overcame Granites' Lead at Y.M.C.A. Alleys Last Night

Although they were leading the parade at the end of both the first and second strings, the Granites were not able to keep up with the pace that the Rinky Dinks set in the final chapter of last night's league fixture. In this string the latter quintette broke loose gaining up 126 points which was good enough to cancel the lead the Granites obtained in the first two strings and put them in the non-win column.

Mrs. Sprague bowling 532 for three strings, lead the score column but was not far in advance of Miss Ford who rolled the high single of 229.

PESSIMISTS READY FOR FRAY ON ALLEY

The "Pessimists", cream of the Corbyville Office staff bowlers, a clean, fast, snappy aggregation of bowlers, with a chain of decisive victories to their credit, are anxious to again exhibit their wares.

The players include Bert Blain, Chief Pessimist and Captain of the team "Hard-Hearted" Hannah, terror of the pin-boys, Ernie Hyslop, who knows the ropes; Stan Lennox, who blows with prolific profusion, and Sam Waterhouse, star, with Scotch tendencies and execution which would do any congregation proud.

The "Pessimists" are anxious to meet a team "churned" from the cream of the Corbyville Office Staff bowlers, and will be on hand for that purpose at the Recreation Alleys" on Saturday, February 28th, at three o'clock in the afternoon.

Risto Ryti, governor of the Bank of Finland is now in London with the object of enlarging the important connections his bank has with British institutions. He said Finland's economic and financial position was so strong that she was considering returning to the gold standard in the near future, but in his opinion she could not do so until Great Britain had led the way.

Lame-Stiff

Red Pepper brings relief in 3 minutes

You will be amazed to learn how quickly red pepper relieves stiffness and lameness and rheumatism.

It is folly to suffer—even for an hour. Just apply Red Pepper Rub. You will feel the heat instantly, and in three minutes it will seem to reach the depths. Circulation starts, congestion is relieved. The pain and the soreness depart.

No heat is so concentrated, so penetrating. Yet it brings quick relief without hurting. No old-time method compares with this.

Red Pepper Rub is the new-day method for dealing with pain, soreness, and congestion. You will always use it when you know it. It is saving people nowadays millions of hours of pain.

It is something to keep on hand. Stop the pain when it starts. Don't be lame or stiff for an hour. At the first sign of trouble just apply this heat-producing rub.

KNOTTY LEE TO MANAGE LONDON?

The Hamilton Spectator says:

"The announcement that the smiling countenance of Knotty Lee is to again be seen in M.-O. circles will come as pleasant news to the fans. Lee was one of the men who helped to organize the circuit, and as manager of the Brantford club for two seasons, he was popular throughout the circuit. He is mentioned as manager of the London club for this year, and will get the position if the fans of that city get behind the club and show that they want to have professional ball."

Y.M.C.A. Basketball Team Wins Out

Had Little Trouble in Taking Kingston in Tow

Belleville Y. M. C. A. basketball intermediates had no trouble in taking the measure of their brother association team from Kingston, when the teams met in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium here last night at nine o'clock, for they defeated them quite decisively by a score of 38-24 before a good sized and enthusiastic gallery.

The big game followed an interesting girls' exhibition when the High School girls defeated the Y. M. C. A. girls by 28-9.

The game, though far from being as strenuous as the Queen's-Belleville tilt here recently was interesting and snappy the locals suppling by far the most snap. The visitors, though a here recently was interesting though a heavy and likely looking outfit lacked the zip which is required of a successful basketball players. The locals did not experience difficulty in working through and many good shots registered especially in the case of Ken Bryce who stood out. Brunke a sturdy and active thinker and actor for Kingston went strong but was watched. He plays wearing spectacles which are guarded. He is game and a dead shot being in the game all the time and always "on" when it comes to shooting. He with Laurenson did most of the scoring for the visitors. Though Bryce was the big scorer for locals, all had a finger in the victory pie, it being the best exhibition of team play shown by the locals this season. "Jimmie" Alexander, replaced Vern Weir, who was unavoidably absent last night, and incidentally played a good game. One of "Slim's" baskets in the early stages was among the prettiest of the evening, being a clean one from way out.

Locals stepped fast early and piled them up having double the score and then some at the end of the first half, when the tallies stood 23-10. Kingston pulled up in the second and were only down one point on the half.

The line-up.

Kingston—Smith 2, H. Harper, 2, Brunke 10, Lane 2, Laurenson 8, Rider, Huggill, Kindrick—24.

Belleville—Hurley 4, Doughty 4, Bryce 22, Armstrong 4, Rowell 2, Maidens, Alexander 2—38.

Referee—Phil Brockel.

Umpire—Stan. Nurse.

The preliminary game was a strenuous affair the B. H. S. girls' team winning from Y. M. C. A. by the score of 28-9. The early part of the game was very close the Y Girls holding their own but the third period was all school their combination and team playing being very evident.

BOXING TOOK WELL DOWN AT NAPANEE

Napanee, Feb 26—That Napanee is a good sporting town was well evidenced by the very large crowd which turned out to the armouries to witness the exceedingly fine exhibitions of boxing, given under the auspices of the officers and men of "B" Company, Frontenac Regiment. It is safe to say that the large number of ladies who were present enjoyed the bouts as heartily as did the men.

Of course, the greatest attraction was Bobby Booth, leading amateur bantamweight boxer of Ontario. But all the events were good; any one of which was well worth the price of admission.

The fine music rendered during the evening by "B" Company's own orchestra added much to the pleasures of the evening's entertainment. The events were:

Douglas won in 3 rounds over Tierney.

Anderson, Kingston, won in two rounds over Deshane.

Lucas won in three rounds over Arthur Smith.

E. Fraser won in three rounds over C. Bartels, Kingston.

Albert Smith won in three rounds over Doug. Marshall Belleville.

Gardiner, Kingston, won in three rounds over Whitney, Kingston.

W. Bartels, Kingston won in three rounds over R. Walker.

Bobby Booth won in three rounds over Herbert Hannah.

Billy Hughes, referee, announced that another exhibition would be put on in the latter part of March. (Loud applause).

After the boxing show the contestants and other guests were entertained to supper by the Frontenac Club in the club-rooms.

ST. PATS SECOND; DEFEAT CANADIENS

Montreal, Feb. 26.—St. Patrick's went into undisputed possession of second place in the National Hockey League when they defeated Canadiens here last night 3 to 1 in what proved a ragged game. Canadiens were without Joliat, their start scorer and he was badly missed.

The teams apparently a bit anxious, started the game on edge, and early penalties allowed St. Pats to make the lead in goals, and they were never caught to the end. Canadiens tried hard, but passes went astray at critical moments, and other splendid chances to score were beaten back by the hardest kind of luck around the Toronto net.

St. Pats, too, were weakened by the absence of Jack Adams, but Neville turned in a smart game at centre for the Irish, and Adams' absence was not felt so much by St. Pats as was Joliat's by Canadiens.

Referee O'Leary came in for a fair amount of jeering after inflicting early penalties, though the less partisan of the crowd gave him credit for handling the game fairly and well. He was the target for penies and other missies as he left the ice, some of which hit St. Pat players as they were on their way to their dressing-rooms and all but started some minor little fights.

Anthony Pensa, of London, was charged with operating a still before Police Magistrate Graydon, Saturday. The court imposed a $200 levy.

Belleville people who delight in the home beautiful will profit greatly by the many new quirks and suggestions Mr. Poste anticipates bringing with him on his return.

A very enjoyable party was held at the home of Mrs. Denton, 29 West Bridge St., on Wednesday evening when the girls of the Morning Class of Holloway St. Church gathered to say goodbye to Misses Theda Mott and Winnie Black in view of their approaching departure to Hamilton where they will enter as nurses in training in the General Hospital. The evening was spent in contests and amusements after which the two girls were presented with leather covered Methodist Hymn books as a small token of the esteem in which they were held. Lunch was served and the party broke up after singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

Young Paris Girl Is Caught at Last

Secret of 'Phantom Burglar' Explained by Her Wardrobe

Paris, Feb. 26.—After a chase extending over several months the police have arrested a wealthy and fashionable girl of 24, who was known as "phantom burglar" through the amazing manner in which she disappeared after rifling houses and flats in broad daylight.

She was often caught in the act of leaving villas she had burgled, but every time she vanished mysteriously.

The secret of her success was discovered when she walked into the shop of a gunsmith whose house she had visited recently. The gunsmith recognized her at once, but the "phantom burglar" said: "Oh, you take me for the mysterious woman thief, don't you. You are wrong again."

She then dashed out of the shop, followed by the gunsmith.

The pursuit was taken up by several policemen and she was on the point of being overtaken when she ran into a restaurant and rushed up to the first floor.

When the police entered they passed an elegantly dressed woman, who calmly walked out without attracting their attention.

The "phantom burglar" had carried out a quick change, so that she was not recognizable. She had carelessly left her address with the gunsmith, however, and later she was arrested at the comfortable villa which she recently bought.

Here a whole wardrobe of quick-change costumes was found.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

The ensemble wardrobe considers itself as a whole and plans one set of accessories to be worn with any and all of its costumes.

With a wool frock to match the coat, and a tunic blouse to match the coat-lining worn over a slip faced with the coat material you have the makings of an ensemble wardrobe. If you line a wool coat with contrasting colored heavy silk crêpe—black and sand are smart—and bring the lining to the edge of the coat, you can reserve it and wear it as a silk coat. The tunic blouse should be of the heavy silk crêpe. The hat and envelope bag can match the coat or the lining.

Elaine

BY Charles Garvice

He heard a light footstep on the path presently, and Elaine returned, followed by Bridget with the tea-tray. She set it down on the rustic little table, and Elaine, seating herself, began to pour out a cup. She stopped, and turned her face to him.

"Are you sure you like tea, Lord Nairne?" she said, and she had turned so suddenly that she met his eyes fixed on her face with a strange intent look. It was the look of a man who is asking himself some serious critical question respecting the object which he is regarding.

"I beg your pardon," he said gravely. "Yes, milk and sugar, please."

Elaine gave him his cup and filled her own and as she did so there came floating down the garden a fragment of the Soldier's Chorus from "Faust," and the next moment the major came toward them.

He stopped short at sight of his daughter's companion, and Elaine said quietly and naturally:

"My father, Lord Nairne."

The major was a gentleman, but he was almost guilty of an exclamation of astonishment. The marquis, the man whose wickedness and dare-deviltry were a byword, seated by his daughter, and drinking tea like a pale-faced curate. But he did not allow his astonishment to overmaster him for more than a moment and, raising his hat, held out his hand.

"How do you do, Lord Nairne?" he said. "Very glad to see you. By George you've chosen the best place; it's as hot as an oven in the house."

"There could not be a more charming spot than this," said the marquis.

He made no apology for not calling before, nor explain why he had called then; but spoke as calmly and pleasantly as if he had known the major for years; and the major, like a man of the world, caught the tone instantly.

"Is there any more tea left, Elaine?" he said.

"Take my seat, papa," she said, "and I will get you some."

She was gone a few minutes, and when she came back the two men were talking fluently, or rather the major was talking and the marquis listening with the grave face and half sad smile.

She poured out a cup of tea, and then wandered away from them to her roses, and amused herself by cutting a bunch for the dinner table.

The voices of the two men floated to her indistinctly, and she was conscious of a feeling of strangeness. It all seemed like a dream, and the scene of yesterday more dream-like than all.

Why had he called? Why had he who had never entered any house but his own in Barefield chosen to pay a visit to such a humble place as Myrtle Cottage?

Suddenly she became aware that he was standing beside her.

"I have paid an unconscionably long visit, Miss Delaine," he said. "But your father and I have found much to talk about. I have been a bad neighbor, but——" he stopped. "Is that a Marechal Niel?"

"This?" she said, pointing to a rose in the centre of her bouquet. "Yes."

"It is a very fine one, is it not? I don't wonder at Mackay's envy. I should like him to see that."

"Would you?" said Elaine with a smile. "Shall I send it to him? Or wouldn't that be too cruel?"

"Let me give it to him, I should enjoy it," he said.

"It is a shame," she said; but she picked out the rose and held it out to him.

He took it, and held it for a moment looking at it; then he put it in his coat.

"Poor Mackay!" he said. Then he turned to the major. "Before you came in, major, I was telling Miss Delaine of a friend of mine who is staying with me. He is a musician. Will you bring Miss Delaine to hear him play some afternoon? He—and I—would be very pleased and honored."

The major bowed.

"Thank you, my lord," he said. "We shall be very pleased. My daughter is fond of music."

"Very well," said the marquis. "To-morrow?"

"To-morrow, Elaine?" asked the major.

Elaine looked down a moment. She had expected—shall it be said, feared?—that her father would have declined.

"Yes, papa," she said, in a rather low voice.

A moment afterward the marquis' hand had closed on hers, and released it, and he was on his way down the hill.

The major stood and stared after him as if he enjoyed the freedom to vent his surprise.

"Good Heavens!" he exclaimed. "What on earth brought him here? Why he has never been known to cross the threshold of a house in the place. And—and asks us to go down to the Castle! Well!"

"And you accepted, papa," she said gravely.

"Ahem—well, yes. You see, my dear—why, dash it, you know, he is Marquis of Nairne, and—and one can't refuse it! It's—it's like a Royal command! But what puzzles me is, what brought him here."

In his astonishment his eyes left the retreating form of the marquis, and settled on the lovely face of Elaine, and then he stopped short, and a startled half-conscious look came into his youthful face, and it grew red, and then pale. And his eyes drooping suddenly before her innocent unconscious ones, he turned and went into the house.

CHAPTER VII.

As Elaine stands and looks down at Nairne Castle, and thinks of the strange, half-ashamed expression with which the major has walked off, a cloud, a doubt, a presentiment falls upon her spirit, and causes her eyes to grow grave and thoughtful.

Both she and her father were puzzled to understand the meaning of the invitation extended by the marquis. To them there was something odd, inexplicable about it.

It was with a commingling of dread and pleasure that Elaine set out with the major the next day. The major was well dressed as usual, and his step was if anything more jaunty and juvenile.

Elaine was very quiet. She wore one of her plainest gowns, and had on her rather sunburnt garden hat; but her father, as he glanced at her now and again, felt a paternal pride that, plain though the gown might be, and well-worn though the hat was, his daughter looked a lady.

"Headaches, Bilious Spells, Are Now All Gone"

Mrs. John Ireland, Nobleton, Ont., writes:

"I was a great sufferer from severe headaches and bilious spells. I tried a number of remedies without obtaining any benefit until I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These completely relieved me, and made me feel like a new person. I am very grateful to Dr. Chase's Medicines for what they have done for me, and you may use my letter for the benefit of others."

FOR JOY OF GOOD HEALTH

Manitoba Woman Thanks Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Crandall, Manitoba.—"When I was a young girl at home and working I had terrible pains, almost more than I could bear, and I was not regular. These troubles kept me so tired all the time that I had no strength and no ambition to join in with my friends and have a good time. I was just tired and miserable always and life just seemed as if it wasn't worth living. I saw so much in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then I had a friend who had taken it and told me about it, so I got some. Every month after taking it I got stronger and I soon did not suffer every month. It stopped the pains and helped me other ways. Then when my babies were coming I was tired and worn out the first three months and ached badly. I took the Vegetable Compound right along and must say it made a new woman of me and able to do my work, and it helped me through confinement. You see I am a farmer's wife with a big house to look after, and three babies now. I have told ever so many women about your medicine. Just last week I got a letter from my old chum in the East. Her baby was born fifteen days before mine and she told me she was not feeling very well, her back aches so much, and that she is going to take the same medicine I took. You can use my letter and I hope some one will be helped by it."—Mrs. Jos. H. Kuhn, Box 56, Crandall, Manitoba. C

Took Two Trips To Film "Secrets"

Norma Talmadge's Company Went to Wyoming and Mexico

Two trips were taken by the members of Norma Talmadge's "Secrets" company during the filming of the picture. One was to Mexico and the other to Wyoming.

Frank Borzage, director of "Secrets" the First National picture made the Mexican trip because of the difficulty he had in finding 3,000 long horn steers in one group on the ranges around Los Angeles. Long horns, it seems, have gone out and the bald faces are now the popular kind of cows with ranchers. Plenty of long horns were found in Mexico, however.

The trip to Wyoming was necessary in order to get the Wyoming atmosphere for the story. On his way to Wyoming, Borzage stopped off in Salt Lake City, his old home, to visit with the home town boys and renew old acquaintances.

Heading Norma's supporting cast in "Secrets" is Eugene O'Brien, famous photoplay and stage star. Others in the cast are Gertrude Astor, Clare McDowell, Emily Fitzroy, George Nichols, Francis Feeney, Winston Miller, Patterson Dial, Alice Day, Florence Wicks and Winter Hall.

Gaetano Gaudio, veteran cinematographer, is filming "Secrets," which was adapted from the famous stage play by Frances Marion will be the attraction at Griffin's on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. Stewart-Miller Joins Ritchie Co.

Well-Known Milliner Who Has Established Excellent Reputation

Evidently the keynote to the success of the Ritchie Co., Limited, which by the way is one of the largest and most successful in Eastern Ontario, is the paramount service they maintain and to which end they are constantly on the alert to improve.

To the women of Belleville who appreciate the service of getting high class millinery, at a moderate cost together with the personal touch and services of an acknowledged expert in this line, this is indeed gladsome news.

Fitting the hat to the features is a very essential service and consideration in which Mrs. Miller specializes. Tendencies in crowns and brims are subordinate to the essential question of what is most becoming to the individual.

Mrs. Alma Sewart-Miller, the new head of the Ritchie's Millinery department has had a wide experience in high class trade and is also an acknowledged expert in the finer art of trimming and designing.

For several seasons she was connected with the firm of Natalie, of Washington, D.C., who have one of the largest and most exclusive millinery sections in America. Recently she has been associated with John Northway & Co., Toronto, where she acted in the capacity of buyer and manager of their extensive millinery section.

Mrs. Miller has just returned from an extended buying trip in the interests of the Ritchie Co., visiting the markets and large show rooms of Virginia, Philadelphia, Washington D.C. and New York.

Many pleasant surprises are in store for women spring bonnet shoppers in Ritchie's Millinery Section this season. You'll find Mrs. Miller ready to give you first hand information and a solution to your millinery troubles for the mere asking.

DENIED STORY OF BATTLE IN CELLS

Welland, Ont., Feb. 26—That the report published in a Buffalo paper, coming from a Niagara Falls source, was without foundation and made of whole cloth, was the official declaration of Sheriff Davidson to the Canadian Press this morning. The story declared that Barned, accused of murdering Smylie Muirhead at Niagara Falls on September 26 last, has two black eyes as a result of a fight he had with a fellow prisoner in Welland jail this week. The story is absolutely without foundation, declared the sheriff. Barned will be placed on trial after the conclusion of the Trott trial which is expected to end this afternoon. No new evidence was presented by the defense this morning.

Sulphur Will Clear Skin Over Night

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

Is no Need For Filth in Movies

Harold Lloyd Has Built Reputation on Clean Productions

In a speech before the producers publicity and advertising men in Los Angeles not long ago, Will H. Hays made one of his most emphatic statements since becoming pilot of the motion picture industry.

"Filth must be banished from the screen. There is no place for it there, any more than there is for it any place else. We have pledged our entire resources to maintain the motion picture on the highest possible moral and artistic standard and we intend absolutely to do it."

Pictures to be successful do not have to be loud or obscene, or appeal in any way to the baser emotions. The screen's greatest success has been built by a boy who has never resorted to that type of motion picture. In all the world there is to-day no bigger box-office attraction than Harold Lloyd. Four years ago his art first began to be recognized by the American public. "A Sailor Made Man" established him as an artist of the highest degree. From then on his climb has been steady, and even sensational. Every picture has brought him new admirers, but never once has a single objection been found, even by the severest moralist, to anything that ever appeared in his pictures. He proved convincingly that pictures can be kept clean and still be successful.

Now he comes to bat with what everyone who has seen it declares is another comedy knockout. This one is "Hot Water," showing now at the Griffin Theatre, and while it is not quite as long as "Girl Shy" or "Why Worry" and other recent Lloyd attractions, it rates with his funniest pictures.

"Hot Water" is just what Lloyd set out to make—a funny picture. Its plot is just strong enough to hold together in continuity the hilarious sequences and episodes. Unlike "Girl Shy", its story treatment is very light, and the serious moments of the last Lloyd picture will not be found in "Hot Water." It is a story of "The First Year" type, with three distinct laugh-factions.

Sam Taylor, John Grey, Tom Gray and Tim Whelan wrote this story, which was directed y Fred Newmeyer and Taylor. In the cast are Jobyna Ralston, as leading lady; Josephine Crowell, the mother-in-law; Charles Stevenson, as the lazy brother-in-law, and Mickey McBan as the youngest troublemaker.

Mary Philbin Does Even Better Work

In "The Rose of Paris" Now At Belle Theatre

Persons who will go to see Mary Philbin in "The Rose of Paris" Universal-Jewel now on the screen in the Belle Theatre, will wonder whe-

They will be convinced that Miss reputation she has gained by reason of her work in "Merry-Go-Round," "Fools Highway," and "The Gaiety Girl."

They came away convinced that Miss Philbin has not reached the apex of her ability, for in each of the formea picture plays it appeared that she had attained the ultimate in soul-searching portrayals of real life. But, again, came a surprise for while it was the same Mary Philbin who has smiled so wistfully, or brought tears of sympathy as the case may have been in other vehicles, it was yet a different Mary Philbin who lived the part of Mitsi, orphan girl suddenly removed from a placid life into a turmoil of danger and heart-breaking experience.

This production furnishes many varieties of entertainment; there is humor, longing, cupidity, unjustified wrong committed, humiliation among the emotions summoned for display, and the machinery of the story that summons them is in the hands of more than usually competent operatives. And this applies not only to the actors and actresses but to the scenic settings as well.

A tax on bobbed heads to assist the municipality of Bath, Eng., in balancing its budget, is proposed by city counselman S. R. Lewin. Quite an income was derived by a tax on the powdered hair of the ladies of the Seventeenth Century, he pointed out. The money derived from the bobbing tax, he suggests, might be considered a kind of "poll tax."

Calomel To-night

HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST

No more headaches, indigestion, foul breath, constipation, kidney pains if you will but follow a doctor's advice by taking two Tanol Calomel Tablets tonight and a good drink of hot water in the morning to wash from the system all the previous day's poisons and wastes before more food is taken in. Tanol Calomel is harmless, acts on every organ of the body, stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, no salts or seidlitz are necessary, does not nauseate like ordinary calomel. Get a few of these tablets from your druggist and you will be surprised how much better they will make you feel. These inexpensive tablets can be obtained at McKeowns Drug Store.

Open up Hospital In North Ontario

C.N.R. Carries Out Unique Work; Helps Scattered People

Nakina, Ont., Feb. 26.—The first Red Cross Frontier Hospital to operate in the Thunder Bay district was officially opened Tuesday at Nakina, a divisional point on the transcontinental line of the Canadian National Railways, when Mr. C. G. Bowker, general manager of the Central Region, acting on behalf of the Canadian National, formally turned over the outpost hospital to the representatives of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Association, under which jurisdiction it will be operated. The function itself was a pleasing one and despite a heavy snow fall a large number of Nakina citizens were present to witness the opening formalities. In handing over the key to the Red Cross officials, who had journeyed from Toronto to be present, Mr. Bowker in a brief address, pointed out that the hospital had been built by the Canadian railways and was turned over to the Red Cross to be operated at the nominal sum of $1 per year. While its not the policy of Canadian National railways in any way to assist hospitals on account of it being an impossibility to meet demands which would be made upon the system at various points, in Nakina the situation was a peculiar one and the need of a frontier hospital was acute. It is a recognized fact that every large organization must to a certain extent be paternal in its dealing with employees and in Nakina not only did this enter largely into the situation but there was also the humanitarian view-point further to be considered.

Nakina virtually is a railway town. Its inhabitants are those who are Canadian National employees or those who depend upon Canadian National employees for their trade. With the last week or so there have been medical cases which required hospital treatment and the new rest hospital, on the west was at Fort William, or Port Arthur, 230 miles away, on the east at Cochrane 273 miles away, and on the south at Sudbury, 450 miles away. It will easily be appreciated just how acute the situation was when hospital attention is required usually it is required urgently and cases have been on record where valuable lives were lost which could have been saved had there been adequate hospital facilities at Nakina. There fore, when the matter of the Canadian National erecting a hospital at Nakinia was brought before us by the Red Cross Association, the president and the directors of the railway did not hesitate to authorize such an enterprise.

Handsome Building

The new hospital is a handsome building of red brick and concrete and is fully equipped to commence active work. The ground floor contains an operating room, two wards of five beds, a maternity ward and dispensary. The first floor houses the nurses quarters and store rooms, additional supply rooms are also in the basement. Miss Wilkinson nursing director of the Ontario district, came from Toronto to attend the opening and officially handed it over to the nurse in charge, Miss Nita Rathbun, of Newport, N. S., a graduate of the Toronto General Hospital. Miss Rathbun is assisted by Miss Irene Forbes, of Richibucta, N. B., who is also a Toronto General graduate.

It was pointed out by speakers that the new hospital would serve a district inhabited by 5,000 people scattered over a territory of some hundred of miles.

Springs Newest In Fashion

New apparel is rich with novel ideas of line and decoration. Suits may be ensemble or mannishly cut with long coats; wraps are fur trimmed or tailored and frocks are youthful in style, often sponsoring a flared skirt.

The New Coats

As straight and slim of line as ever are the coats which fashion has chosen as her smartest models. Some follow the mode of dresses with a slight fulness below the knee but they fit closely about the figure. Prices range

$12.95 and Gradually up to $39.50

Simple Frock Favoured For Spring

Frocks are going to be feminine—and graceful once more, yet not forgetting the slender simplicity of the last few years. Rather they have taken on those slender lines and developed with more grace and sophistication—more variation and individuality.

Prices range $19.50 and gradually to $55.

The New Millinery

Copies which, in elegance, treatment detail and character can not be distinguished from the original French and New York models, selling for extravagant prices are to be seen daily turned out from our own work rooms, really exceptional in every particular. Ours of course, are many times less in price. They range $3.00 and gradulally to $12.

Australia Goes Easy on Titles

Only One Native Peer and His is Not Begrudged

(Associated Press Despatch)

Melbourne, Feb. 26—Australia is emphasizing its democracy; the list of New Year honors was the shortest on record.

Knighthoods and more imperialistic decorations have lost much of their significance and dignity here because of the scandals attached to their bestowal. Certain wealthy political workers are still prepared to pay the price to become knights, and the British government is quite willing to grant the appointments, but the Australian state governments, wisely gauging public feeling, has practically vetoed the wholesale distribution of these gifts.

The Labor governments in Tasmania, Western Australia, Queensland and South Australia have legislated against these awards, and even the Liberal governments are going slowly in recommending the granting of British honors.

Dignified reward for meritorious service to the state is still understood but many public men who have rendered signal service have insisted on remaining plain Mister.

Australia has had only one native peer, the late Lord Forrest, who did so much work in exploring unknown Western Australia that the country forgave him his title.

KNEW MAGISTRATE WOULDN'T BELIEVE IT

St. Catharines, Feb. 26. — When charged in police court with having a bottle of wine when arrested Henry Kearnay declared somebody must have put the bottle into his pocket.

"When I have liquor I have a better way than putting it in my pocket, I drink it right away," pleaded Kearnay. "Of course," he added, "there's no use me saying anything. You don't believe me."

"Two hundred and ten dollars," said Magistrate Campbell.

KIWANIANS HELP TO FIND PROF. F. ANDRE

Kingston, Feb. 26.—Nothing definite is yet known of the whereabouts of Prof. Joseph Andre, who disappeared from his home in this city just two weeks ago today, and for whom a warrant has been issued by the Crown on a charge of stealing a ring from a local business house. The police have broadcasted the missing man's description, but are silent as to the direction in which their investigations are leading.

The Kiwanis Club are taking a hand in the general search for the missing man, and are circulating a description of Prof. Andre, together with a copy of his photograph, in every Kiwanis Club on the continent through the headquarters of Kiwanis International. Andre was an honorary member of the local club, and when he left this city was wearing the Kiwanis button and the action of the local Kiwanians is taken only with a view to perhaps finding some trace of the missing man but also to prevent him from passing himself off as a genuine Kiwanian of good standing.

SENTENCED TO WALK ON HER HIGH HEELS

Hamilton, Feb. 26— Sentenced to walk unassisted all the way from Toronto to Hamilton in a pair of crimson colored high-heeled shoes, which she was convicted of stealing, in the Toronto women's court, 19-year-old Ruth Roland, this city, broke down and wept.

The woman judge took the tears for evidence of remorse, but the girl's counsel, W. B. Horkins, declared it was the prospect of the long, long hike hitherward. Besides, he did not think such a sentence strictly within the law.

In any event the judge melted and placed the girl under suspended sentence for two years less one day, ordering her sister in this city to keep an eye on her.

The shoe heels were three inches high.

Executive clemency has been extended to Mrs. Isaac Solway, sentenced at Chatham to jail for B.O.T.A., and now out on bail awaiting the result of her appeal. Her sentence will end as soon as it starts.

St. Catharines tax rate has been fixed by the Council at 30 mills on the dollar, the same as last year.

Stuffed Heads

Cleared by a Balm

Cold in the head or catarrh means a local germ attack. Fight it locally. Don't wait for long-delayed effects.

Apply Ely's Cream Balm in the nostrils and breathe it. Send its antiseptic fumes where the germs exist. Relief comes instantly. The head is cleared, inflammation is subdued.

Don't suffer another hour. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm and all misery is ended.

Didn't Appreciate Worth of Doctor

Sir James Mackenzie Gained Famed Abroad First

(Associated Press Despatch)

Glasgow, Feb. 26.—The fame of Sir James Mackenzie, heart specialist, who died last week, had spread to the United States, and to other parts of the world, long before he became a figure in the medical world of Great Britain. In connection with his passing the story is told of the visit of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Laboratories for Medical Research, who came to London in 1911 and was entertained at the London Hospital. At a distinguished assemblage of surgeons and physicians, Dr. Flexner inquired why James Mackenzie was not there.

"Mackenzie?" every one queried, and the answer all round was: "Why, we have never heard of a doctor by that name who has accomplished anything of note."

"Well," Dr. Flexner replied, "Mackenzie is mighty well known in America, and so are all his works on the heart."

London then sat up and took notice Not long afterward Dr. Mackenzie had become the chief consulting physician for heart diseases at London Hospital and a special department was created for him so that he could carry on his work.

IRISH BREAKFAST IS THREATENED NOW

Dublin, Feb. 26.—Complaint is made in a letter to the Dublin press that American flake meal is ousting Irish meal from the shops in large and small towns alike. It is argued that whatever may be said of the advantage in quality and price of foreign wheat flour, Irish oatmeal ought to be able to hold its own, since it is cheaper than American flake meal.

Nevertheless, says the complainant, "American flake meal is being asked for by the public and pushed in the shops, and every packet bought prevents the sale of as much Irish oats."

Plans for a modern hotel, to be erected on London street, in the heart of Windsor's business section, are under consideration.

CONAN DOYLE IS NOW SELLING HIS BOOKS

London, Feb. 26—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle not only writes books nowadays but he sells them. Sir Arthur opened a bookshop across the street from Westminster Abbey and has taken over active management of the stock which consists entirely of psychic literature. Not even the "Sherlock Holmes" best sellers will be stocked.

The shop has been called the "Psychic Bookshop and Library" and will be used principally as a distributing house for pamphlets and books dealing with spiritualism.

HE CUTS OUT ADS OF UNDERTAKERS

London, Feb. 26—In an endeavor to brighten his parish magazine, the Rev. Cyril R. Brown, Vicar of Littleover, Derby, has banished undertaker's advertisements from its pages

"While undertakers are excellent fellows in themselves," Dr. Brown writes in publication, "we do not wish to be reminded of them and when three such firms blandish us in one magazine, it is in danger of becoming the most depressing of journals. I would rather think about living, and I wish the undertakers would join the doctors and dentists in refraining from advertisements."

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 472 L. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N.J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

Safe Fat Reduction

Why be fat? The answer of most fat people is that constant dieting is hard, continual exercise is tiresome and exhaustive—and then, too, it might be harmful to force weight down. That was the old-fashioned idea. Today in Marmola Prescription Tablets all these difficulties are overcome. Just a pleasant little tablet after each meal and at bedtime causes fat to vanish. This modern method is easy, entails no dieting or exercising and has the added advantage of cheapness.

Get a box of these tablets and start taking them now. Within a short time you will be getting rid of fat steadily and easily without starvation diet or tiresome exercise. You will be comfortable and able to enjoy the food you like and want. Even after taking off many pounds, there will be no flabbiness or wrinkles remaining. You will feel 100 per cent. better. All drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar for a box, or the Marmola Company, General Motors Building, Detroit, Mich., will gladly send them to you on receipt of the price.

BELLEVILLE TO JOIN OTHERS IN ROAD PROTEST

Alderman Graham Selected Representative by City Council

HIGHWAY ACCOUNT

Relief Sought From Burden Of Provincial Costs to Municipality

On Tuesday next at Toronto, a delegation from urban centres will confer with the Provincial Government for the purpose of securing relief in the matter of the provincial highway account. This year, the sum charged against Belleville, as its share of cost of building and maintaining provincial highways leading into the city, amounts to several thousand dollars.

Ald. Graham will represent Belleville at the conference it was agreed at the civic committee meeting last evening. Ald. R. Gowdy was present at the meeting being his first appearance since his appointment as a member of the Council.

The recommendations agreed upon and passed on to the Council were as follows:

That Ald. Graham be appointed to represent the city of Belleville on the delegation to confer with the Government at Toronto on Tuesday March 3 regarding the matter of the Provincial highway accounts now being charged against urban municipalities.

That this Council join with the Councils of the cities of Toronto London and other municipalities in petitioning the Provincial Government to investigate the recent rise in the price of gasoline and oils with a view of ascertaining of conditions justifying their increase.

That all correspondence, the by-law and all papers in connection with the Marsh Engineering Co's. payment of interest and sinking fund on debentures be referred to the city solicitor with a request that he advise the council what procedure to take in the matter;

That tenders be asked for the leasing of the market tolls for a period of one year, commencing on the 1st day of April, 1925. Tenders to be in the hands of the city clerk by the hour of noon on Thursday, March 12th.

That a suit of clothes be provided for the city messenger, the same to be procured by the chairman of market and city property.

Sergeant E. A. Rae Has Been Promoted

Belleville Officer Given Temporary Charge of Hamilton District

Sergeant E. A. R. Rae of Provincial Police Headquarters here has been given temporary charge of Hamilton District O.T.A. Inspectorate, and left last night for Hamilton to take charge of his new work.

Sergeant Rae, who came to Belleville from Ottawa when Sergeant G. Atkins was transferred to Niagara Falls last autumn, is regarded as being a very efficient officer in the Provincial force not only in O.T.A. work but also in criminal work.

Inspector C. E. Gurnett of this district Provincial Police, was unable to say whether or not the vacancy caused by Sergeant Rae's transfer would be filled, when seen this morning.

LINER MONTLAURIER IS RE-FLOATED NOW

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 27.—A despatch to Lloyd's from Queenstown, Ireland, this afternoon stated that the Canadian Pacific liner Montlaurier, which went aground near Roche's Point, Ireland, this morning has been refloated and that tugs were standing by. When she ran aground, the Montlaurier was proceeding slowly to Queenstown after damaging her steering gear yesterday while enroute from Liverpool to St. John, N.B., with more than four hundred passengers aboard.

Big Brothers Will Stage Passion Play

Five Hundred Chicagoians Agree to Play For Ten Years

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Feeling that no efforts at an adequate characterization could escape some unavoidable sacrilege, the Big Brothers, an organization of Chicago business and professional men, in their production of the Passion Play the revenue from which will be diverted to their work among delinquent boys of the juvenile court, decided to use a statue of Christ in portraying that role.

The first performance will be given March 15 with a cast composed of nearly 500 Chicagoans, each serving without pay and selected to play his part yearly through the next decade.

A sculptor has been employed for months contriving to give the statue supreme beauty, dignity and life-likeness that would better express the reverential spirit of actors and producers. Through the use of German prism glass which, when used as a lens, imparts a seeming movement to the statue, and through the use of moveable limbs, it has been possible to make the statue, under the lighting arrangements of the production, indistinguishable from real life.

A voice will issue from the stage, speaking the words of Christ, and the words will seem to come directly from the statue of Christ itself. But no one outside the cast will know what actor is speaking the words.

The cast has been rehearsing for more than a year. No member will be permitted to capitalize on any reputation made in the play and all are pledged to refrain from professional stage work during the decade. The Big Brothers, casting about for new ways and means to meet the suddenly rising criminal activities of boys in Chicago, hit upon the plan of dramatizing some religious work. They decided upon the Passion Play, which will be produced in utmost reverence to obtain money for boys' work.

In the Temple scene, a recreation of the actual structure has been planned. Jewish art and religious worship of that cal data, lending gigantic candlesticks, altars, curtains and fittings that have been preserved as exact copies of the Jewish art and religious worship of that time. The rending of the Veil is to be accomplished by an ingenious electrical arrangement whereby a bolt of lightning will be seen to strike, while Judas prostrates himself on the floor.

The Crucifixion with its three Crosses in silhouette against a blinding light and the kneeling women, has been rehearsed to obtain complete perfection.

A choir of 150 male voices, who will take the place of an orchestra, will sing and chant throughout the play.

ABOUT ONE THOUSAND LICENSES ISSUED

In round numbers, one thousand 1925 motor vehicle licenses have been issued at the offices of H. F. Ketcheson Company Limited to date, and many are being issued each day yet.

In conversation with H. F. Ketcheson this morning, he told the Intelligencer that each day for the past two weeks between 50 and 125 licenses had been issued, which means that his staff has been kept real busy.

Of course the rush for licenses depends upon the weather conditions, and the recent Springlike weather has caused an early rush here for licenses.

Commerce Chamber Has Busy Session

Taking Keen Interest in Varied Activities of The Community

At a general meeting of members of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held last night such important topics as motor traffic regulations, parking by-laws, tourist camps, street sign, filtration system, power rates, trading at home rural relations and other themes of great interest to the city were given attention. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather condition the meeting was well attended.

The following applicants were formally received into full membership The Chamber of Commerce is incorporated under Dominion Statute and it is therefore necessary that those who desire to enter the organization must be regularly proposed at a general meeting of members and accepted by a majority of two-thirds of those present. At last night's meeting there was unanimous acceptance of all those who desired to become members These are: Messrs. J. A. Borbridge, E. T. Austin, Harold Bateman, W. J. Carter, A. B. Collins, Frank Domenico S. Domenico, B. C. Donnan, A. E. Donahue, N. E. Edwards, F. B. Foley, E. A. Geen, J. F. Hinchey, G. L. Jenkins, R. H. Ketcheson, T. E. Ketcheson, G. A. Bonisteel, C. A. Cronk, Dr. J. M. Wilson, Harold Holton, F. C. Lee, Lloyd & Evans, R. D. Macaulay, J. C. McCarthy, P. Moores, C. A. Mott J. C. Panter, W. E. Schuster, J. E. Walmsley, C. H. Wilmot, F. R. Wotten, Geo. A. Lee, B. W. Brown, A. F. Stillman, Dr. J. A. Faulkner, S. J. Fisher.

Parking Regulations

The subject of parking regulations for motor cars called forth a vigorous discussion and there was considerable divergence in the opinions expressed. Mr. Fred B. Smith intimated that a petition was about to be circulated among the business men on behalf of the Retail Merchants Association virtually calling for a rescinding of the present parking by-law.

Mr. Scott, the president, inquired if the present regulations were done away with what did the Retail Merchants have to propose to take their place. It was inconceivable that Belleville should have no parking regulations whatever in its central business area. His own opinion was that the increase in motor car traffic would compel more stringent regulations than had hitherto been in effect and he thought the sooner these were put into force the better it would be for all parties concerned.

Ex-Mayor G. A. Bennett concurred in the view expressed by Mr. Scott. He would like to see the time for parking of cars along Front street reduced from thirty minutes to ten or twenty minutes and more use made of the yards for parking along the river bank. For a nominal fee it was possible for motorists to place their cars in yards and have their safety guaranteed. Mr. C. F. Wallbridge suggested the use of Pinnacle street for parking purposes. He believed that the cars could be parked along the one side at right angles to the sidewalk and the remaining part of the street left free for traffic.

A motion finally prevailed, appointing Mr. P. H. Wills chairman of the Transportation Committee, and Mr. C. F. Wallbridge a special committee to consult with a similar committee representing the Retail Merchants' Association and any others who might be interested or have suggestions to offer and report recommendations to the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce at as early a date as possible.

Street Signs for Belleville

The question of nomenclature for streets and proper signs at the intersections was given brief consideration This matter had already been taken up by the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, President Scott stated, and a recommendation sent on to the City Council. He believed that the City Engineer was now working out a plan on instructions from the Council. A motion was carried endorsing the action of the directors and of the reported action of the City Council.

Securing New Industries

A more vigorous policy to bring about the location in Belleville of new industries was advocated by Mr. W. A. Parker, manager of the Royal Bank Mr. Parker's opinion was that there should be a more extended campaign and personal visits paid to the head offices of some of the more important American corporations that were known to be considering the establishment of Canadian branches. The personal relations that could be thus brought about between the industrial commissioner and the chief executives of great American industries would have a most important bearing on inducing them to consider Belleville favorably as a Canadian location. Mr. Parker said that Belleville had been doing splendid work but he believed that still greater results could be achieved if a more liberal policy in this regard were pursued.

Mr. W. C. Springer, president of the Lock Mfg. Co., intimated that negotiations were proceeding with an important American industry that was looking very favorably upon Belleville.

New Collegiate and Technical School

Belleville's proposed new collegiate institute and technical school caused a brief discussion. Ex-Mayor Bennett as a practical builder, expressed the opinion that it was altogether impractical to remodel the present high school building. He was also averse to the erection of a collegiate on the present high school grounds. While these were centrally located they were altogether inadequate in area and it was impossible to extend them without prohibitive cost.

There seemed to be a general opinion among those taking part in the discussion that it was better to have technical education connected up with the public schools rather than with the high schools.

Beautifying the City

The objectionable nature of the dump along the Bay Bridge road was vigorously pointed out by Mr. R. J. Wray. Mr. Wray stated that two or three times the area could be covered if the policy had been pursued at the dump of extending the dumping at the sides rather than creating a hill in the middle which it would be necessary later to level off. The extension of the dump would have the double value of blotting out the stagnant pools where mosquitoe had their breeding places and would in time provide an excellent industrial area.

As a result of Mr. Wray's representations a motion was carried to request the City Council to level off the present dump and place signs directing that in future dumping of garbage or refuse should take place beyond the present limits.

Tree Planting

The subject of planting trees to replace those now being removed was considered at some length and a recommendation was made that the Parks Board be requested to introduce a proper system of replacement where trees have been taken down because of old age or for other causes and also to extend the planting into new areas of the city.

Mr. Greenleaf suggested that a campaign be carried on to bring about more general use of the city parks, particularly Victoria Park for picnic parties from outside the city.

Taxing of Peddlers

This question was given some consideration but it was thought it was the more immediate concern of the Retail Merchants and no action was taken.

CITY'S SUPPORT IS ASKED FOR A FOOT-BRIDGE

Chamber of Commerce Passes Motion Along to Aldermen

BY RAILWAY BRIDGE

Citizens Would Be Protected At Small Cost

The following communication to the council which is self-explanatory, was read at the civic committee meeting last night:

"There has been a considerable agitation among the residents of the southern part of the city for the erection or placing of a foot-bridge across the Moira River in connection with the railway.

"As a result of requests that have been made the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, have given to the matter serious consideration. On Tuesday, the tenth instant, the place was visited by Mr. Mayne, Division Superintendent, Canadian Pacific Railway, and for purposes of consultation he invited Mr. W. A. Walshe and myself. The superintendent went carefully over the plan suggested and did not seem to think there were any very serious obstacles in the way as far as the railway companies were concerned.

"The plan suggested is, briefly, as follows: to place a wooden walk in the space between the two bridges and at the easterly end to have a stairway leading from the walk down to the subway that leads to Victoria Park, at the westerly end of the bridge to construct another subway wide enough for foot passengers to pass out beneath the Canadian National track and from that point to Riverside Park.

"It has been pointed out that this will be used by a great many people who work in the factories on one side or the other and live on the opposite side and who now cross the bridge very frequently at great personal risk to themselves and who violate the law against trespass in so doing. It is believed that the cost of this work would be small as compared with the convenience and accommodation it would provide for a large number of citizens.

"On motion of Messrs. W. C. Springer and F. S. Deacon I have been directed to bring this matter to your attention with the request that you have the City Engineer look into the matter and report on the feasibility of the plan outlined and an estimate made of the cost of carrying it out.

"If the Council sees fit to approve of the plan upon receiving the Engineer's report it would then be necessary to take the matter up with the two railway companies and later with the Board of Railway Commissioners to secure final approval. Trusting that this matter will receive your serious attention,

I am,

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. O. HERITY,
Manager.

The following recommendation was adopted that the council concur in the request and that the city engineer look into the matter of having a wooden walk placed in the space between the two railway bridges across the mouth of the river and report to the Council as to its possibility and costs.

Mr. T. N. Phelan, K.C., who has been elected president of the Ontario Motor League. He is an ardent motorist.

Belleville Listed As Busy Centre

Employment Service of Canada Optimistic; See Turn For Better

Toronto, February 27.—The mills of the Algoma Steel Corporation will reopen on 2nd March.

The firm has secured sufficient business to keep its mills runing for four months, and has prospects for a steady run into the fall, according to the weekly bulletin of the Employment Service of Canada, containing reports from its offices throughout Ontario.

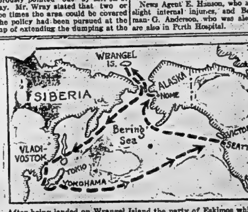
The opening of the mills of the Corporation, which will appreciably improve conditions in Sault Ste. Marie and employ entirely local labour, is the feature of the report, which, in dealing with conditions throughout the Province, says: "Factories are working in most cases with full staffs, and indications are that within a short time greater activity will be noticed in work in factories."

Some of the cities reporting improved conditions are: Belleville, Hamilton, where there is a decided improvement in textiles, with the possibility that the industry will return to normal in the spring; Kingston, where industries are on full time, one of them employing eighty men more than it did last year at the same time; Oshawa, where the "manufacturing has improved a great deal since the first of the year"; Peterborough and St. Catharines.

FOUR INJURED IN WRECK NEAR PERTH

Montreal, Feb. 7.—No lives were lost and it is expected that the four members of the train crews who were seriously injured when the Chicago to Montreal passenger train, No. 20, crashed into freight train No. 909 in front of the Glen Tay station, near Perth, Ontario, yesterday afternoon, will recover, according to a report from the Canadian Pacific Railway head-quarters here to-night. The seriously injured men are Engineer Norris and Engineer Bourne, both of whom are in the Perth Hospital.

News Agent E. Hanson, who suffered slight internal injuries, and Baggageman G. Anderson, who was also hurt, are also in Perth Hospital.



After being landed on Wrangel Island the party of Eskimos which recently arrived in Victoria, were taken to Vladivostok by the Soviet, where they escaped, making their way to Yokohama, where they were shipped to Victoria. The map shows the route taken.

SUPPORT MOVE FOR A TOURIST CAMP IN CITY

Chamber of Commerce Sends Recommendation For Central Location

PARKS BOARD AWAKE

Are Seeking Satisfactory Solution Ex-Alderman Greenleaf Declares

At a general meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held last night, that body went on record in support of the Parks Board in providing a tourist camp in Belleville this year.

Ex-Ald. H. W. Greenleaf, Secretary of the Parks Commission was asked what steps, if any, were being taken by the Parks Commission to provide a camp for motor tourists for the city of Belleville. Mr. Greenleaf in reply stated that the Parks Board was giving earnest consideration to the matter and he had strong hopes that a satisfactory solution would be found. There were serious difficulties in the way, such as the finding of a suitable area for the purpose near to the central portion of the city. There was also the question of expense in providing for maintenance and there were people who asked if the establishment of a camp was worth while, it being pointed out that tourists arrived at such places late in the evening and took their departure early in the morning and therefore gave no financial returns to the city where the camp was located. Mr. Greenleaf maintained, however, that if a camp were established at Belleville it should be well equipped and looked after and of such a character as would be a good advertisement for the municipality.

Would Pay Well

Mr. W. A. Parker believed that the financial returns from a camp would be such as to justify its establishment. Not all the tourists by any means came late and went away early. Every business man along Front St. knew that dozens of them came and shopped and secured other services here at all hours of the day. He thought a proper camp would be a fine paying investment.

Capt. Ruston and others concurred in the opinion. Several sites were discussed such as Coleman Flats, the Murney Ward Flats, the Bridge St. East Playground and the Dundas St. cemetery but no definite recommendation was made.

Mr. J. A. Cokers told of the pleasant experiences he had had in American tourist camps and found them of great value while making motor trips through that country. They were usually equipped with running water and similar services, but others went so far as to provide electrical stoves, washing machines and irons, that tourists could use for a nominal fee by the nickle-in-the-slot system.

A motion was carried that the Parks Board be supported in its effort to provide a tourist camp for Belleville and that the Board would be recommended to secure grounds located as near as possible to the central business area.

"I AIN'T A BAD BAY!"

"You see, judge, this is the way it happened. I couldn't have any fun any more when I got too old for the Boy Scouts. I never had no time for the girls, ain't got no home, so the only place I could loaf was in the pool rooms and down in that cellar joint, and the toughs finally got me mixed up with them. But honest, judge, I ain't a bad boy. I just didn't have anything else to do."

This is the defense that won for an 18-year-old New York City boy a suspended sentence, following a plea of guilty to the charge of acting as a "runner" to an old dope peddler. Read between the lines, if you will, the terrible indictment it contains against our social conditions.

Between boyhood and young manhood in the life of every youth there is a twilight zone dangerous to all, fatal to many. Just how many may be gleaned from statements that 80 per cent of crime now committed in this country is the work of youths between the ages of 17 and 23. This twilight zone, this age of adolescence as we call it, is the real formative period of a boy's life, the years when habits are acquired, when friendships are made, when decisions are reached that will turn him either to the right or to the wrong. At no other time is intelligent, painstaking guidance more needed; at no other time is the lack of it more fraught with peril. Yet at no time, we must admit to our shame is so little attention paid him.

Organizations of men, notably the social service clubs and the Y. M. C. A., have come to realize the importance of this youthful twilight zone, but what they are accomplishing is so pitifully small in comparison to the opportunity offered that their imprint for good is scarcely discernable. The manhood of the entire nation needs awakening to this criminal neglect of the boyhood of the land, for only as we train the youth of today are we safe-guarding the nation of to-morrow.

The youth who stands before a court and says: "Honest, judge, I ain't a bad boy," is a pitiful by-product of present day civilisation.

CLEAN BOOKS

What is moral or what is immoral is very difficult to determine. A book that is moral in the estimation of some people, will be regarded as immoral by others. On the other hand, a book that is immoral to some people, will be moral to others. It all depends on the viewpoint, the viewpoint on the state of mind, and the state of mind largely on the home training the individual has had. Thousands of books are not allowed to enter orthodox families that elsewhere are regarded with more or less favor.

What is more to the point, it is almost impossible to compromise difference. Morals are closely related to religion, and sectarian religious lines are tightly drawn. The good old orthodox will not yield a point unless he has to. It is a question, however, just how far rigid and uncompromising opinion can dictate the literature of the great mass of the people.

ASIATIC EXCLUSION IN CANADA

The popular movement in favor of Asiatic exclusion is taking more and more definite shape in British Columbia.

In its earlier stages, this exclusion sentiment was confined to the strictly coastal portions of the province. In the interior, the white population was content to look to land tenure restrictions as a remedy against Asiatic penetration. Now the provincial parliament formally requests the adoption of a federal exclusion policy. A multitude of civic and professional organizations are backing the demand.

These developments along the Canadian Pacific coast will be followed with keen interest by the people of America, says Detroit Free Press. The growth of anti-Asiatic sentiment there is rooted in economic conditions. It was in virtually identical conditions that it grew up in our own Pacific states. In both cases it resolves itself into an economic struggle; it is only secondarily an antagonism based upon racial distinctions.

The essential similarity of the movements illustrates forcibly the community of interest that exists, in this as in other matters, between the Dominion and this country. The trend of events in British Columbia—and all through the Canadian West, for that matter—should still the criticisms so frequently levelled at the American exclusion policy by Americans. Inchoate as the Canadian movement still is, its very existence goes to justify the American exclusion policy embodied in last year's immigration act.

It may take the people of British Columbia a long time to convince the Ottawa parliament that a national exclusion law is the only effective protection. Opinion here can only wish success to the British Columbians. A Canadian exclusion law would promptly benefit this country, says the Free Press by making it easier for our immigration authorities to curb Asiatic alien smuggling. Much of this is now done across the Canadian border line, especially along its western stretches. With both countries committed to Asiatic exclusion control of the smuggling evil would become a mutual interest and render effective co-operation possible.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

Pay As You Enter

On some street cars there is the sign "Pay as you enter."

It would be a good thing if that sign were pasted over every career in life.

For you get only what you pay for, and pay for in advance.

Things do not come to you, allow you to enjoy them, and then have you pay for them, but you have to pay for them first whether you enjoy them or not.

Many people would like to be great pianists. They would enjoy the applause, the fame and the praise. But the only person who will be a great pianist is the one who first pays the price, the price of devotion, study and hard work. After the price is paid they may be famous or they may not be, but in any case they pay before they get on.

In any calling of life the money, or study, or pains, or whatever it is, must first be paid before the emoluments come. If a man is to be a business success it means hard years of work before that is attained.

If a doctor wishes to succeed in his profession he must labor through years of preparation.

Perhaps this is the reason why the Master said, "If any man shall come after Me let him first take up his cross."

Even in the matter of eternal life you pay as you enter.

It would seem that you should be allowed to see the prize you have, to enjoy the goods you have bought first and ascertain whether they are of value or not before you pay for them. Such is not the case. You must pay for them first whether you enjoy them or not.

You pay for everything in this world and the cheapest things are those that you pay for in advance. All arrangements for deferred payments in time simply mean payment of a larger sum.

You must buy your ticket before you get on the train. You must get a little piece of pasteboard before you can see the show. You must pay a cover charge before you can sit down in the jazz palace and eat the food.

So in regard to spiritual things. A good many people do not believe in the Golden Rule, which is "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you." They claim that it does not work out.

The Golden Rule only works out with those people who do their part first. If you wait till the other fellow does his you will be still waiting. Many an individual, as well as all the nations of the earth, are waiting for the other fellow to do it first.

In the matter of international peace, therefore, as well as of individual benefit, we must pay as we enter.

Press Opinions

NEWSPAPER ACCURACY

(Kingston Standard)

Accuracy is regarded by newspap-

to be as accurate as can humanly be very obvious reasons; one is that if the news could not be depended upon possible, they would soon have to other cause; but we should like to close down; the public would not stand for them. We need not refer to other causes; but we should like to mention a tribute which has been paid to their accuracy by the principal of a school in New York. He said that he clipped 3,06? stories on biological subjects from 429 newspapers in 17 months; out of that number only 14 articles contained an inaccuracy. This he declared was a better record than most books can show. The press will thank him for taking this trouble and thus giving proof of the attention which it pays to accuracy.

To-day's Smile

HAD FAIR DAY

Feeling in unusually good form one day, an English sportsman who prided himself on his accuracy with the gun said to the boy who had the job of reloading his guns:

"Look here, my lad! For each bird I miss I'll give you a shilling!"

At the end of the day's shoot, when the boy had rejoined his pals, he was asked what kind of day he had had.

"Well, fair!" was the reply. "I've made seven bob. I should have made a quid, only I had no more blank cartridges."

Thirty Years Ago

The old proverb says that wherever the wind lies on Ash Wednesday it continues during the whole of Lent.

Mr. S. Barragar, of Big Island, renewed his subscription to the Weekly Intelligencer to-day. He says it is now about 40 years since he first subscribed and cannot do without his favourite paper.

Some weeks ago, we mentioned the fact that a man was swindling people by taking their clothes wringers and not returning them. He was captured and yesterday sentenced to six months in the central at Peterboro.

The latest styles in men's collars promise an unpleasant summer for men with short necks. The only fashionable collar will be a very tall stand-up shape, the popular height being two and three quarters to three inches while men blessed with long thin necks reach the correct altitude of four inches.

Farms and Contentment

As I inspected the mail yesterday, hoping to find no "please remits" and finding several, praying to discover a stray cheque and discovering none, I came across an interesting letter from Robert J. C. Stead, well-known Canadian writer and director of publicity for the Department of Immigration and Colonization.

Mr. Stead is engaged in the worthy effort of helping to keep farmers on Canadian farms and of persuading outsiders to come in. Realizing the good effect they may have upon public confidence in Canada, he has sent along three stories of Canadian farmers who were lured to the United States by tales of prosperity and who came back to their first choice, sadder, poorer but wiser men.

Twenty-one years ago says Mr. Stead, Tony Hulskamp, of New Ulm, Minn., came to Canada, and after working for Foley Brothers, Railway and General Contractors in Western Canada, bought some farm land near Moose Jaw, Sask. on which he made a good living, but not a great deal of money. Hearing of the glowing accounts of the prosperity in the United States he decided to leave Canada and sold his farm at a sacrifice in July, 1924. He went to Montana, but he did not find much prosperity there among the farmers and could obtain no work. He then went to Minnesota and visited relatives in Brown and Redwood counties. He found no evidence of great prosperity; the farms were heavily mortgaged; work also difficult to obtain; there was a general feeling of discontent. He and his wife, therefore, decided, before what little money they had left was gone, to return to Canada and stay for the rest of their lives.

Mrs. Hulskamp declares that in their poorest days in Canada they always had enough to eat, sufficient clothes to wear, plenty of good friends and good schools for the children.

Here's another one:

"In the Spring of 1910 Adolph Slen, of Minnesota, and his brother came to Canada. Each had a capital of about $40 in cash on their arrival in Western Canada. They worked for a few months at odd jobs and then took a homestead near Lloydminster, on which they did very well. Adolph made more money than his brother, but with his prosperity gained he had a longing for the "Good Old U.S.A.", as he termed his native country, and as his wife had never been content in Canada, he sold out and returned to his former home in Minnesota in 1919. There he bought a farm, and to use his own words, he lost almost everything he had ever had.

"In February, 1924, he evidently had a desire to return to Canada for he wrote to the Department of Immigration and Colonization for a copy of the "Canada West" booklet and asked for general information about the opportunities in Western Canada. His letter was referred to the St. Paul, Minn., office of the Department and the agent there at once got in correspondence with Mr. Slen. He was visited at his home and last May he returned to Canada leaving his wife and two children at his old home until he got a second start in the Lloydminster district. Towards the end of October, 1924, his family joined him and he is now doing well. It is of interest to note that the brother, who remained in Canada, came to the assistance of Adolph and made it possible for him to get his second start."

Along this line we see the Chatham News declaring that every man thinks his job is the hardest.

"Last fall," says the News, "a city man was driving through the country, on his way to attend a function in a neighboring town. He was passing through a beautiful valley and observing a farmer and his sons out working in a field of golden grain, he remarked to his automobile companion, "There's the life! Free, healthy and full of enjoyment."

A short time afterwards he met the farmer in his home town, and he recalled the incident. The farmer also recalled it. He had reason for remembering it from a different angle, for, as he related, one of his sons saw the automibile go by, and remarked: "There's the life! Nothing to do but drive around the country in an automobile!"

So it works both ways. The other fellow's job is always the most attractive.

It has always been the city man's opinion that life on the farm is the carefree healthy existence—yet few of them give up the cares of business hustling, to till the soil. Probably if they did one would hear less about the glories of the farm.

The secret seems to be that a man has to be trained for his task. Each man has his own particular mission to perform in this world, and the man who is continually longing to change places with the other fellow is usually the man who is looking for a job with nothing to worry about.

Boy Saved Life Of Motor Driver

Warned Kingston Man of Hole Just in Time

Kingston, Feb. 27—The prompt action of an Amherst Island lad certainly saved the life of Ronald Vanluven, of the firm of Vanluven Bros., Ford automobile dealers, on Wednesday afternoon, when he drove into open water near the Amherst Island store.

Mr. Vanluven, in company with one of the mechanics from his shop, was on his way to Amherst Island for the purpose of delivering a Ford tractor, when the front wheels of the car went into open water about one hundred yards from shore.

Mr. Vanluven had gone up the main Bath road and had taken to the ice at Millhaven, which is directly opposite Amherst Island. On the trip over from the main shore, Mr. Vanluven encountered considerable water on the ice. He was driving a Ford sedan, which was tightly closed in. When about one hundred yards from the shore, Mr. Vanluven saw a lad running out on the ice and shouting to him to stop his car at once. He responded to the request of the lad, and just as he applied the emergency brakes, the front wheels of his sedan had dropped into a water hole. Only for the lad's warning, Mr. Vanluven would have driven into the hole and might have been drowned.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Adams took tea Sunday evening at Mr. A. Lloyd's of Tweed.

The cars on the roads once more.

Fell on Saw

While at work around a circular saw at his home at Parham, Earl Cornwall, about twenty-five years of age, had the misfortune to stumble and fall on the saw and suffered terrible injuries to his right arm. He was brought to the Kingston General Hospital, and Dr. Bogart, who is attending him, has hopes of saving his arm.

Cornwall's arm went right into the saw to the elbow, severing the lower end of the upper bone. The accident happened at ten o'clock Tuesday morning but he did not arrive here until four o'clock in the afternoon. He was brought here by Dr. Scott of Parham in the latter's coupe. This was a long trip for a coupe with the roads in such condition but good time was made.

Picton News

Picton, Feb. 27—Mrs. C. E. Hadden went over to Belleville on Monday to visit her sister, Mrs. Clark.

At the semi-monthly Board of Trade Club luncheon at the Globe Hotel on Friday evening a debate was staged by four Collegiate students; "Resolved that Canada has a brighter outlook for the future than the United States." Those taking part were Ronald Church, Vernon Zufelt, John French and Bill Rorke.

Ewart Jones was soloist at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening.

H. S. Colliver, M.P.P., was home from Toronto for over the week-end, returning to the city on the early train Monday.

Miss Helen Kerfoot of Ottawa is supplying on the public school staff during the illness of Miss Dunkley.

W. W. Cole is on a business trip to the maritime provinces.

Send Many Invitations

Over a thousand communications have now been addressed to Kingstonians who do not now reside in the city, inviting them to attend the Old Boys' Reunion to be held during the first week of August and Dr. W. W. Sands the Secretary of the Re-union Committee has still a great number of names to deal with.

Wall Blown Down

The high wind which was blowing yesterday morning partly demolished the west wall of the old building of Robertson's, Limited, Kingston, which was recently destroyed by fire.

After the fire the walls on each side of the building still stood, practically intact, and towered over the adjoining buildings some thirty or forty feet. At about ten-thirty this morning the upper part of the wall standing between the ruins and the business premises of Mr. T. H. Stewart suddenly fell with a crash, which could be heard for several blocks, falling inwardly and breaking its way to the ground through what remained of the floors and beams in the Robertson building.

Nominates Moderator

The Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew has nominated Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon of Toronto, as moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Lansdowne Deaths

Lansdowne, Feb. 27—An old resident passed away in the person of Riley Moore, aged eighty-three years. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Samuel Snider, and one son, Byron. The funeral will be held at the house on Friday and the remain will be placed in the Ebenezer vault. Rev. G. W. Dustin, pastor of the Methodist church will conduct the service.

A very sad death occurred on Monday when Peter Beaubien, aged nineteen years, second eldest son of Mr. Zene Beaubien, passed away after a short illness of pneumonia. Deceased was very highly regarded by all who knew him, and his untimely end is keenly regretted. To make the circumstances even harder his sister and mother are also seriously ill with the same disease, and much sympathy is felt for the family in their deep trouble.

Abby Rockefeller, reputed to be the richest girl in America, whose engagement has just been announced to David M. Milton, a young lawyer. Miss Rockefeller is the daughter of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Celebrated Silver Wedding

Reeve Ben. Willis and Mrs. Willis celebrated their silver wedding at their home in Lanark by entertaining a large number of friends to a six o'clock dinner progressive euchre, dancing, etc. They received numerous beautiful gifts to commemorate the event.

The National Railway Lines of Mexico have been placed under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Communications and Public Works. They were formerly operated by a general manager employed by the Government. The decree effecting the change, announced in Mexico City, says the purpose is to permit the President to consolidate the administration's economic policy.

Suffered for 15 years with constipation— Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brings relief in 3 weeks

Tried everything. Even operation. Only Kellogg's helped him.

Constipation paves the way to many harrowing diseases. But Mr. Williams' letter carries a message of cheer:

I have been using your ALL-BRAN for the past three weeks and it has done more for me than anything I have tried in the past fifteen years. . . I was troubled with hemorrhoids for years. About 18 months ago I was operated on with very little relief. I tried everything under the sun. Then my wife suggested Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and I say truthfully that it is the only thing that ever gave me relief.
Yours truly,
L. T. WILLIAMS.
(Address on request).

Cleanse your system of constipation's devastating poisons with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—a bulk food that passes through the system, sweeping the intestine clean, stimulating normal, healthy action.

Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring permanent relief or your grocer returns the purchase price. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is made in London, Canada. Sold by all grocers. Served in leading hotels and restaurants.

STARTS ON 3,000 MILE JOURNEY

Mr. Abert A. Thorne left Thursday for his home in Georgetown, South America, where he has a good position in the employment of the Government of British Guiana. On the way he will remain in New York City with relatives for a short time.

For some months past Mr. Thorne has been attending Ontario Business College and completed the Bookkeeping and General Business Course at O. B. C. this week.

The round trip from British Guiana makes a total distance of over six thousand miles. Mr. Thorne (like many other students from South America) found the thoroughly, efficient training at O. B. C. well worth the long and expensive journey to secure it.

IN MEMORIAM

RITCHIE—In sad and loving memory of my dear husband, James Duncan Ritchie, who died suddenly at Mallorytown, Ont., Canada, February 27th, 1924, aged 39 years; also our dear son, (wee Jim), who died at Peterhead, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, October 8th, 1916, aged 7 years. Both sadly missed by Mother and Bennie. 27-1td

KERRIGAN—In loving memory of my dear husband, William Dean Kerrigan, who departed this life so suddenly on February 27th, 1924.

DANCERS IN RIOT DURING HOME WALTZ

Brooklyn, N.Y., Feb. 27—Two persons were seriously injured and ten others received slight knife wounds in a free-for-all fight, which occurred while the orchestra was playing Home Sweet Home, at a dance given by the Oberdam Social club at the 14th Regiment armory here.

Bottles and chairs were thrown and daggers were brought into play, when a fight between two dancers divided the 1,500 guests into two factions and developed a riot.

Girls fainted and some were trampled upon as noncombatants rushed for the exits. When police reserves arrived they found nearly 1,000 young men and women milling about the street outside. Investigation failed to reveal the cause of the original quarrel that started the big battle.

According to a dispatch from Buenos Aires, Argentine, Mount Aconcagua, the highest peak in the Andes, towering 23,290 feet above sea level, has been scaled by M. F. Ryan, and English railway engineer, who had made two previous unsuccessful attempts to conquer the peak. The summit of Aconcagua has been reached by only two other climbers.

One Thin Woman Gained 10 Pounds In 20 Days

Skinny Men Can Do The Same

All weak men and women
All nervous men and women
All skinny men and women
Can grow stronger, healthier and more vigorous and take on solid needed flesh in 30 days just by taking McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets four times a day—as easy to take as candy.

And what a hit these flesh producing tablets have made. One druggist tripled his sales in one week.

Everybody knows that nasty-tasting evil-smelling Cod Liver Oil is a wonderful vitalizer, flesh producer and health creator.

But who wants to swallow the horrible stuff, when these wonderful tablets—McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, are just as good and so easy to take.

A box of 60 tablets for 60 cents and if any skinny man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days—money back. Ask Dolan's Drug Store, McKeown's Drug Store, Doyle's Drug Store, or any good druggists anywhere in America.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine, and don't forget there is nothing on earth so good to make backward, listless, underweight children grow strong and robust.

He was in his 74th year and a member of the Methodist church Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves to mourn his loss five daughters and three sons.

THE LATE FOREST S. McLEAN

(From Orillia Times)

Another promising young life was cut off in its prime when death claimed Mr. Forest S. McLean, second son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. McLean, Dunlop street, in his thirty fourth year. Mr. Wm. McLean was summoned to Saranac Lake N.Y. on Thursday of last week owing to the serious condition of his brother who was receiving treatment in the Trudeau Sanitorium. He arrived there at 12.30 Friday noon his brother's death occurring next morning at 8 o'clock. With the remains he returned to Orillia on Sunday accompanied by Mrs. Forest McLean, her parents and sister who had joined them at Belleville. The late Mr. McLean was born in Coldwater and came to Orillia twenty-five years ago. Twelve years ago he was married to Miss Neta McCaskie of Belleville, and for eight years they made their home in Belleville. Then failing health compelled Mr. McLean to seek relief in the Adirondack Mountains, where he remained until his death. Besides his young wife and his parents, Mr. McLean leaves four brothers and one sister: Messrs Harold McLean of Cincinnati; L. E. McLean, Belleville; William and Howard and Mrs. R. Greer, Orillia. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from the family residence, 100 Dunlop street, to St. Andrew's cemetery. Service was conducted by the Rev. J. R. Patterson assisted by the Rev. J. J. Black and the pallbearers were Messrs. Harold, L. E. and William McLean, brothers of the deceased, Mr. Robt. Greer, a brother-in-law; Mr. Gordon Cameron, a cousin, and Mr. Jack McDougall, of Toronto. Amongst those attending the funeral from out of town were, Mrs. T. D. Dodds Mr. and Mrs. H. McCaskie, Mr. L. E. McLean, Belleville; Mr. Harold McLean, Cincinnati, Ohio Mr. John McDougall, Toronto; Mr. Wm. Smith, Belle Haven, Ontario. Many beautiful flowers were received including pillows from the family and his wife; a cross from Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Dodds, Belleville; wreaths from Mr. and Mrs. H. McCaskie, Belleville; the Springer Lock Mfg. Co. Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. C. Townsend Ludington, Ardmore, Pa.; the L.O.B. A., Orillia; and sprays from Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McBrien, Dunnville; Mrs. C. CHICAGO MARKET

Chicago Feb. 27.—All deliveries of wheat scored sharp early upturns in price to-day with July continuing to lead the advance. The lack of rain in Texas together with more or less unfavorable crop reports from some other sections of the winter wheat belt are strengthening the influence on values and so too did word of liberal new export buying. Heavy profit taking sales led at one time to pronounced reaction but the effect failed to last. Opening prices which varied from unchanged figures to 1 1-4c higher were followed by numerous rapid changes and then by rise all around to more than two cents above yesterday's finish, July touching $1.09. Corn and oats advanced with wheat, although at first inclined to lag. After opening 1-8c off to 1-2c up corn underwent moderate general set back and then made good gains. Oats started at 1-8c decline to 1-4c advance later all months showed something of a rise. Provisions were higher, sympathizing with hogs and grain.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows too well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm Try laying aside all digestive aids, and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach and inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

KILLED POLICEMAN, SENTENCED TO LIFE

Welland, Ont., Feb. 27—Charged with the murder of Police Constable Joseph Truman at Thorold on December 22 1923, John Trott was found guilty of manslaughter at the assizes here and was given a life sentence in Portsmouth penitentiary by Mr. Justice Logie. In passing sentence, His Lordship informed Trott that the jury had taken a merciful view of the case in that he was only found guilty of manslaughter. The same evidence would have fully justified a verdict of murder. The jury was four hours in arriving at their verdict, which was received by the crowded courtroom in silence.

CHILDREN TO SET TEST FOR PEER

London, Feb. 27—The child to draw up the best set of questions suited to the mentality of a 14-year-old boy (but to be asked the 58-year-old Lord Rothermere, often called the world's most powerful newspaper magnate) will take his choice of a shelf of books, a bicycle or a wireless set.

The Daily Herald, Labor organ, has offered the prize, in backing the wager of $1,000 to $5,000 made by Labor member Cove with Lord Rothermere by the terms of which the peer must answer correctly 25 percent. of 25 questions to be set.

The wager was brought about by an attack by Lord Rothermere against the English public school system, because applicants for a position as junior clerk had failed to answer a list of questions he considered simple.

Cove declared Rothermere would be equally nonplussed and the challenge was accepted.

The Duc de Nemours, a descendant of Louis Phillippe of France, will leave Paris in April to visit Lord and Lady Rodney, who have a ranch at Fort Saskatchewan, Alberta. It is stated that the Duke expects to acquire a ranch near that of the Prince of Wales in Alberta.

Turkey has refused to discuss the expulsion of the Ecumenical Patriarch of the Greek Catholic Church with the League of Nations. The refusal went forward to the League, in a note in which Turkey asserted that the expulsion was an internal question in which foreign interference would not be tolerated.

Gold Tips

You do not have to get used to a Waterman's. You simply select the proper model to fit your hand and it works satisfactorily the instant it touches the paper.
In addition to buying the pen you buy a service such as Waterman's alone maintains. It is world-wide. It is thorough. It assures satisfaction.

Any fountain pen's usefulness depends upon three things—the nib, the ink supply and the flow.

The nib must conform—the ink supply must be generous—the flow must be steady and continuous.

There is a Waterman's nib to suit every possible style of handwriting. The ink supply in every Waterman's is greater than that of any other pen of similar size. The "spoon" feed—exclusive to Waterman's—is the one method by which a steady flow of ink is assured.

It is because of these features—because of its ability to write properly at all times—that there are more Waterman's in use than all other makes of fountain pens combined.

BOOSTERS 9, PLUMBERS 1; GRIMSBY AND NIAGARA FALLS LEAD; BOWLERS ACTIVE

Boosters Beat Plumbers 9 to 1

When City League Schedule Was Continued Last Night

With the return of the cold snap comes the re-opening of the arena, and last night at nine o'clock a city league hockey fixture was started between the Plumbers and the Boosters. The outcome was a win for the Boosters by 9-1.

The Plumbers were headed all the way and the game was never in doubt for their opposition. Lacking combination which the Boosters had aplenty, the Plumbers were unable to break through and were kept busy staving off the rushing opposition. Too much solo work and lack of concerted action beat them. On one of the best combination efforts of the night, Lorne Cook sunk the gypsum for the lonely counter, which saved them from the blanking.

The period scores were 3-0, 5-0 and 1-1.

The ice was very fair considering the short time at the disposal of manager Arnott to get it in shape after the premature spring floods, but the crowd was small last night because the game was not advertised extensively, and few knew there was ice.

The game was fairly clean, but two or three penalties being handed out by referee Ken Colling, who handled the game very satisfactorily.

The Moguls and Wolves of the North were supposed to have played a first game between the hours of 8 and 9, but when the Moguls did not put in an appearance, the Wolves disported themselves on the ice for an hour's good workout and then claimed the game.

The boys are rushing the city league games through, fearing another break in the winter weather and two games are to be played at the arena to-night.

Niagara Falls Has Lead of Four Goals

Outskated Peterboro And Are Favorites For O. H. A. Title

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Proving better goal getters Niagara Falls defeated Peterboro by 3 to 1 in the first game of the senior O. H. A. finals at the Arena last night, and even the most rabid of the Petes' supporters conceded the winners of group No. 2 the championship. The return game will be played in Niagara Falls on Monday, and Peterboro's task of winning by five or more goals to take the round appears an almost hopeless one. But it is not impossible, and the Petes think that they will succeed. They went into last night's game with Irvin Bailey, their star right wing player, weak from an attack of flu, from which he is just recovering, and not until the last period did he play the hockey of which he is capable. Last night's hockey was brilliant throughout and was witnessed by an immense crowd. Peterboro sent about 500 supporters up for the game, while nearly 1,000 came came from Niagara Falls.

But led by the veteran Gene Fraser, the Falls played grand hockey from start to finish. Contrary to expectations they showed more speed than the Petes, and at times fairly skated their opponents off their feet, both going and coming, Kitchen, Herrington, Siebert and Kelterborn when on the attack leaving the Peterboro checkers far in the rear, and defensively they repeatedly swept in from behind to intercept the pass whenever their opponents attempted combination, which wasn't very often.

Petes' Team Play

Peterboro on the whole played a selfish game, their team play, so prominent in the majority of the games they have taken part in at the Arena, not being in evidence to any extent last night, but that may have been because of the close checking by Herrington and Kelterborn along the wings. Ranger and Bailey could never get going, except during the first fifteen minutes of the final period, and Bert McLeod, who was easily the star for Peterboro, was the only member of the team who appeared able to make any headway against Niagara Falls' strong defensive play.

The Petes also tried to work in too close on the Niagara Falls net before shooting, and even when they found Fraser and Kitchen almost unbeatable they kept boring in, but without success, invariably always losing the puck before they could shoot or getting knocked off their stride just as they were letting go, with the result the puck generally went wide. Against the style of hockey that Niagara Falls played the Petes failed dismally to show any punch. Bert McLeod scored the Petes' only goal, and it was the best of the night, the defence player stickhandling his way through the whole Niagara Falls' team, and though bodied hard managed to hold possession of the puck and flip it over Mayo as the latter went down to block the shot.

Played Heady Game

Niagara Falls played a fast, careful and heady game, and always appeared best except in the early part of the last period, but on the play there was hardly a four-goal difference. The Falls superiority was in their ability to get goals and Mayo, in the winners' net, outplaying his rival Joe Dwyer, who appeared to have an off night though the Falls players masked their shots, giving the veteran little chance to see the puck. Mayo never played better. As a matter of fact there have been very few better exhibitions of goal tending at the Arena this winter.

Mayo, who is not much higher than the net, prevented the Petes cutting Niagara Falls margin in the third period. The Petes ripped right through time after time, but though they pelted the puck at him from all angles he turned them all aside, flopping here and there and all over to stop the shots and then get the rebounds. The Petes all took turns testing him, but all fared alike. While Joe Dwyer perhaps did not have as much to do as Mayo, the shots were much more difficult to handle the puck seldom rising more than six inches off the ice, and the Niagara Falls player often skating in behind a Peterboro player and then firing the puck between his legs.

Neglect Is The Foe Of Eye Comfort

If everyone would decide to learn the condition of the eyes, the sum total of human efficiency would be increased tremendously. Kingston Lost Their Home Game 3 to 1

Grimsby Has Edge Throughout in Intermediate Final

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 27.—Grimsby won the first game of the final round of the intermediate O.H.A. here last night, when they defeated Kingston by a score of 3 to 1. The winners were entitled to the victory, as they outskated their opponents during the best part of the game. Their stick-handling and combination play was spectacular. The return game will be played in Grimsby on Saturday evening.

For the winners, Reid was the outstanding player. He was without doubt the fastest player who has been in Kingston this year. Neither team was able to score in the first period, but in the second Grimsby landed three counters. With about four minutes to go, Hargraft registered the only goal for Kingston. Reynolds was the outstanding player on the Kingston team. The attendance was the largest of the season. The opinion of all who saw the game was that the better team won.

Joe Smith, the captain of the Kingston team, gave his best, but the speed of the opponents was too much for his men. Rogers, the Kingston net guardian, stopped some sure goals by skating out, meeting the puck-carrier. The teams were:

Kingston—Goal, Rogers; defence, Roney and Reynolds; centre, Watts; wings, Smith and Hargraft; subs, Lawlor and Johnson.

Grimsby—Goal, Fisher; defence Carson and McVicar; centre, Reid; wings, Horn and Clarke; subs, Burnside and Havhoe.

Referee—Harold Farlow, Toronto.

The Summary

First Period—No Score.

Second Period

1. Grimsby .... Reid 12.00
2. Grimsby .... Burnside 4.00
3. Grimsby .... Slark 2.20

Third Period

4. Kingston .... Hargraft 16.00
2. Grimsby .... Burnside 4.00

SOO GREYHOUNDS N.O.H.A. CHAMPS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Feb. 27—The Greyhounds took last night's game from New Liskeard five to three winning the series 10 to 8 for the senior championship of the N.O.H.A. The game was a weird contest with the Hounds breaking through almost at will, throughout the fray, but being unable to beat McCann by dozens of shots from close in. New Liskeard sprung a surprise in the second period when they put up their strongest argument, and the Hounds were put to it to keep them at a distance, Spence and Thompson appearing to best advantage for the visitors, but Thompson was a marked man throughout and came through with numerous battle scars. The two penalties received by the Soo were given on his account

Kidneys Need Lot Of Water

Drink Freely and Often, Also Take Salts if Your Back Hurts

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is cloudy, full of sediment, channels you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acid in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

The rule of three applied to the newest sheath frock calls for puff sleeves, the close fitting at the hip and a delightful color combination.

A frock of lavender-blue cashmere with puff sleeves and collar of dark-blue silk crepe was seen recently at Atlantic City with an ensemble coat of the navy cashmere lined with silk crepe to match the frock. Natural-colored kasha for a straight, sheath frock and coat a little shorter than the frock is very smart with the coat lining, dress collar and sleeve puffs of terra cotta-or-brown silk crepe. ELAINE

By CHARLES GARVICE

As they approached the bridge Elaine saw that a couple of workmen were erecting a rustic gate, and she blushed as the major stopped and leaning on his stick, said, as the men touched their hats:

"Well, what are you doing here, my men?"

"Putting up a gate, sir," replied one. "By his lordship's orders."

"A new whim of the marquis," said the major, in a low voice, as they walked over the bridge. "I suppose that he has been told that some of the townspeople cross the bridge and trespass in the grounds, and he doesn't like it. Quite right, quite right. A man has a right to do what he likes with his own."

Elaine as she remembered the promise of the key which the marquis had made her hung her head and colored still more vividly, but she said nothing. What could she say unless she told her father all that had occurred on that afternoon? And she felt that she could not do that now. She had kept silence too long.

"Beautiful place," remarked the major, looking round him as they passed up the serpentine walk with that air of approval and patronage which was habitual to him, "and charmingly kept. It must cost a small fortune to maintain a place like this; and the marquis has several like it. I'm told that Glengowrie—that's the Scotch place, is a perfect specimen of—of—I think they said Norman architecture, and is as large as a town; and there's the seat in Berkshire, where the famous Nairne cattle are bred, and the villa at Como, and the house in Park Lane—a man need be a millionaire to keep them all going. Ah!" he drew a half breath as they came suddenly in sight of the white facade of the house. "Splendid! splendid!" and he swept his hand—the major could do wonders with the small Delaine hand. "Now, they'd call that a palace in Germany or—or—any of the small countries abroad. A palace! And it is too, by gad. And all belonging to one man. Ahem, it's singular, when one thinks of it, that the marquis has never married."

And as he made the remark he glanced out of the corners of his eyes at the beautiful, thoughtful face beside him. But Elaine scarcely heard him. She too, was aroused to admiration by the noble place.

They ascended the broad steps to the terrace. The big hall doors were wide open, and the sun streamed into the great hall which would have looked sombre with its time-blackened oak and stands of armor, but for the great splashes of color which the stained windows threw on the mosaic floors and dark brown walls.

Two footmen in livery came forward to meet them, and another stood at an open door to usher them into the drawing-room.

The major looked round him enviously, and drew a long breath again. The room was magnificent—a little too magnificent for modern taste; but even as Elaine was struck by the splendor she was conscious of a feeling of loneliness and solitude which the space and vastness of the apartment conveyed. It seemed as if it had not echoed a human footstep for years, though there were no signs of neglect visible, and everything was in admirable order.

"Princely," said the major, under his breath. "What a thousand pities that it should be shut up and be so often unused!"

As he spoke the door opened and the marquis entered, and came forward with a smile of welcome and a quick step.

"This is very kind of you to take pity on a bachelor's solitude, Miss Delaine," he said, and he held her hand while he made his greeting. "But come into another room," and he laughed shortly. "This is our 'company room' and not remarkable for comfort. I never enter it if I can help it and when I do I invariably knock something down and break it."

He led them into the hall again, and the major stopped and looked up at the vaulted roof, and round at the magnificent oak panelling.

"You have a very fine old hall, marquis," he said, shaking his head with solemn approval.

"Yes," said the marquis indifferently; then, seeing Elaine looking at one of the tattered flags which was suspended from the roof, his manner changed to one of deferential attention.

"You are looking at one of the old bannerets, Miss Delaine," he said. "Please don't stand quite underneath it; I'm always expecting it to come down with a run. Heaven knows how long it has been there, a home for the spiders and the dust. One of my ancestors—Rupert Nairne gave his life for the rag. They found it wrapped round his dead body on the battlefield. You can see the hole the sword cut through the flag to his heart. It scarcely looks worth fighting for now, does it?" and he smiled. "Men did that kind of thing in those days."

"And do still," said Elaine, in a low voice, and with a touch of color on her face at her temerity.

He looked at her.

"Yes. But no Nairnes!" he said, and for a second a cloud seemed to sweep over his handsome face. "That is Rupert's suit of armor. He was a fine fellow, and it was a pity that the enemy's sword should have found a crevice. Those others were worn by his forefathers. That black suit was Harold the Norman's. He was not the only black Nairne," and he smiled grimly.

They had crossed the hall while he had been speaking, and the major paused before an air-tight cabinet with thick glass doors, behind which was arranged a collection of objects—fans, scent bottles, caskets, a gauntlet of bright steel. The marquis took a key from his pocket and unlocked the doors, and handed a fan to Elaine:

"The fan carried by Queen Elizabeth. It has been mended; she broke it over the head of one of her privy councillors. Here is the gauntlet Walter Nairne flung in the face of the Duke of Breganz. Of course, Walter was in the wrong, the Nairnes always are and were."

"And what is this?" asked the major taking up an oblong article about six inches in length by an inch in thickness. It was encrusted with jewels, and appeared to be solely for ornament.

"Can you guess what it is?" said the marquis, putting it in Elaine's hand.

She turned it over and shook her head, smiling.

"I do not think you would if you tried for a week," he said. "It looks very harmless, doesn't it?"

"Quite," she said. "But it is very beautiful. Is it hollow?"

"Not quite," he replied, evidently pleased by her interest. "There is a secret attackd to it, a secret which I think I alone know. See here——" He took it, but paused a moment as a footman crossed the hall with a salver of tea things, and ascended the stairs. "You would not guess that there is not in all the place a more deadly weapon than this harmless-looking piece of jeweled wood. Not even that battle ax there can deal a more deadly blow," and he nodded to a stand of ancient arms on his left.

Elaine glanced in the direction, and as her eyes were returning to his face she saw something move across the open space of a portiere behind him. She caught sight of a woman's dress, but not her face, and neither then nor afterward, in the time when every incident of that afternoon stood out vividly, thought anything of it.

Whoever it was, she had passed swiftly across the opening, and was hidden by the thick plush curtains.

The marquis looked round.

"Take it in your hand again," he said. "Can you see any opening, any sign of a crack or crevice?"

Elaine examined it closely.

"No," she said. "It seems quite solid, and to be just one piece of wood."

"Then look!" he said, and raising it aloft he shot from it a blade of steel which glittered in the colored rays of a stained window.

Elaine shrank back slightly.

He smiled and handed it to her.

"Take care," he said. "It is as sharp as a razor. There is a history attached to it. That lady"—he nodded to the portrait of a handsome woman with dark, flashing eyes—"slew her rival with it, outside there on the terrace. They would have hanged her, but—well, you see there was no evidence, no weapon found, for who would suspect anything deadly in this harmless-looking article and it was the only thing found upon her? She confessed on her death-bed, and the secret of the spring has been handed down from Nairne to Nairne. I will show it to you," Elaine colored and then turned pale.

"I—should you?" she faltered, possessed by a reluctance, a shrinking which seemed altogether too great for the occasion.

He laughed.

"Why not?" he said. "There is no danger. We don't stab our rivals in that way nowadays, Miss Delaine. If we stab at all we do it in the back with a weapon about which there is no secret, and which is common to all—the tongue. Let me show you the secret of the Nairne dagger. Do you see that rose? It is prettily gemmed, isn't it? And on the other side exactly opposite it is a lily; simple, harmless flowers of the garden, one formed of ruby, and the other of a pearl. But you press them both at the same moment with finger and thumb, and the toy becomes a weapon in your grasp. No, hold it so—the rose upward, or it will not work. There," and his fingers guided hers into the proper position. Elaine pressed the embossed flowers, and the blade sprang out wickedly, threateningly. "Take care," he said.

Elaine shuddered, and laughed, and dropped the dagger to the ground.

"Oh, I'm so sorry," she said penitently. "Have I broken it?"

"No, no," he said reassuringly. "And it would not matter if you had."

He closed the blade, and tossed the thing into the cabinet.

Elaine, as he turned, looked at her hand. She could feel the quaint dagger-handle against her palm still, and yet more acutely the gentle pressure of his fingers.

For Cleaning Jewelry

When Diamond Cuts Diamond

IN this season when Fashion decrees that the simplicity of the costume be accentuated by a subtle display of jewelry, it is more than ever imperative that one's jewelry be kept brilliant and sparkling.

It is quite a simple matter to clean it yourself. Simply dissolve in one quart of hot, soft water (rain water or melted ice) ½ oz. Ivory soap. When cool, stir in 2 oz. ammonia. String the jewelry to be cleaned on a wire and immerse it in this solution for 15 minutes only. Rinse in clean water, then in alcohol, and dry it in boxwood sawdust or on a piece of old, worn cotton cloth. Even pearls, so easily damaged with other cleaning compounds, may be safely cleaned in this manner.

Ivory Cleans Ivory!

If diamond cuts diamond, then surely let ivory clean ivory! Ivory chains, necklaces, or statuettes may be cleaned with plain Ivory soap and water, using a small brush for the carvings, and then placed, while wet, in the sun. Wash them in soapy water several times a day for two or three days, still keeping them in the sunshine, wash them again, and they will be perfectly white.

NOTE—Our readers may obtain free an interesting booklet on Unusual Uses of Soap by addressing the National Household Service, 863 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

"Women often ask me — says Mrs. Experience — how I get my table linen so immaculate"

"I take it as a real compliment, because most women do try to excel in their table linen.

"Of course, I tell them the way I've found easiest and best is with Sunlight—just rubbing the linen lightly with Sunlight, rolling it up and putting it to soak. After soaking, perhaps a light rubbing here and there may be called for, then just rinse, and the linen is spotlessly clean. Fine linens should be protected and never come into contact with anything but the purest soap.

"As a household soap there is nothing better or more economical than Sunlight. Every particle is pure soap, with no wasteful 'filler'. Sunlight is mild and easy on the hands, too." Lever Brothers Limited of Toronto, make it.

FLY BELOW SEA LEVEL

Los Angeles, Feb. 27—The lonely wastes of Death Valley, end of the trail for a legion of hardy emigrants in the days of gold and the grave of many an adventurer even today, recently witnessed the turning of a page in the history of aviation when three Rock Field, San Diego, aviators, under command of Col. Harry Graham, piloted their planes over the valley 265 feet below sea level. At times the planes traveled long distances about 40 feet above the ground, and at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

Story Told How Film Was Titled

"Hot Water" Griffin Feature One of Five Hundred Suggestions

The way of a title is long and devious. Especially those titles that are selected for original stories. Of course it is different with titles of stage plays and books. They have a certain commercial value and to change them would be ridiculous although it is a frequent occurrence in the motion picture industry.

Harold Lloyd is one of the toughest customers of title writers. He always has been very successful in selecting snappy appealing titles which fit in perfectly with his story. Consequently, his demands are a little more severe than the next.

For his new picture, which he has called "Hot Water," Lloyd waded through nearly five hundred suggestions, out of this mass he first picked the title "Hubby," which remained virtually throughout the production of the picture. In fact, two previews were held under that name.

Then one day, John Grey, of the Lloyd scenario staff and one of the best title writers in the country, hit upon "Hot Water". He was discussing some subtitles with the comedian, when he said:

"Harold, what would you think of "Hot Water" as a title for one of your pictures?"

Lloyd thought a moment.

"What would I think of it? That's the title of our new one," responded Harold, "I think it's a peach, and it admirably fits the story. Our principal is certainly in nothing if it isn't hot water."

And thus was born another new and appealing Lloyd title. "Hot Water" now at Griffin's.

MRS. MARGARET PHIPPS

Chatham, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription did me a wonderful lot of good and to women who go down in health during motherhood I would advise its use. I was very sick, especially did I suffer from 'morning sickness.' My stomach was so upset that I could not retain anything. I was afraid to eat. I grew nervous and weak and my back ached. I just seemed to suffer with all the ills that come to prospective mothers. I saw Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription advertised and began to take it and this medicine just kept me up fine, relieved me of all suffering and distress, and I was able to be around right up to the last. I have the greatest faith in 'Favorite Prescription.'"—Mrs. Margaret Phipps, 126 Inches Ave. All dealers.

New French Star With Mary Philbin

In "The Rose of Paris" Showing at Belle Theatre

Mme. Carrie Daumery, virtually a new face in the cinema world of the United States, but famous as an actress on stage and screen in France, is one of the big cast supporting Mary Philbin in "The Rose of Paris," Universal-Jewel to be shown in the Belle Theatre To-night and Saturday.

Mme. Daumery has been noted in France for years as an emotional star and has played triumphal engagements on the stage in Berlin and in London. After the death of Sarah Bernhardt she was noted as one of the greatest stars of the Parisian stage.

She entered motion pictures in Paris some months ago and then came to the United States where she appeared in "The Conquering Power" and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." In "The Rose of Paris" she plays the part of mother superior of the convent in which Mitsi, the character played by Miss Philbin, was placed when an infant, immediately after the death of her mother, disowned by reason of her marriage.

Mitsi, the novel from which the screen version of "The Rose of Paris" was made, was written by a brother and sister who collaborate under the pen name of Delly, and was a best seller in France. It was adapted for the screen by Bernard McConville, editor of Universal-Jewel productions, and many weeks of research ensued before the script was finally approved.

Irving Cummings who directed Miss Philbin in "Fools Highway" directed the picture, and especial attention was given to the selection of the cast to the result that some of the best known characters actors and actresses in filmdom are supporting the winsome star.

Norma Talmadge Discusses Lovers

Tells How Leading Men Acted During 1923

Four leading men made love to Norma Talmadge in 1923.

And every one, says Norma, had a different manner.

First came Jack Mulhall in "Within the Law." Then Conway Tearle in "Ashes of Vengeance." Tearle was followed by Joseph Schildkraut in "The Song of Love."

Last came "the perfect lover," Eugene O'Brien, who appears as Norma's leading man in "Secrets" which, it is expected, will excel even "Smilin' Through", as a popular and artistic success.

Norma should be the best of all judges of the capabilities of leading men, so her comments are interesting.

"Jack Mulhall," says Norma, "has a boyish, good-natured camaraderie in his screen love making. Sincerity marks all his efforts as well as a certain ingenuousness. Jack is the lov-

"Conway Tearle has an entirely different manner. He is deadly serious. He is the type of lover who would go through fire and water to win his lady love of the films.

able lover of the films.

Devoted and unwavering in his affection, Conway Tearle would please any screen lady's heart.

"Joseph Schildkraut is still another distinctive type. His manner is quite Continental. Polished, graceful and insinuating his photoplay love making should be hard for any maiden to resist. There also is an element of blase sophistication in it with just a hint of deviltry. However, Schildkraut is neither a Von Stroheim nor an Adolph Menjou. His lovemaking is unique.

"Last of all, there is Eugene O'Brien. Newspaper and magazine critics and the thousands of representative 'fans' who constantly write in to the studio proclaim O'Brien 'the perfect lover.'

O'Brien is the rugged, commanding masculine type of lover. He is paternal, husbandly, a shade domineering (and every woman secretly loves to be domineered), but he is always kind.

"It may be the Celtic strain in him which enables him to laugh and caress one moment and rage the next in his screen performances. Gallant, thoughtful, a 'good fellow,' O'Brien is the type of screen lover that women adore just because he does not know his own attraction and devotes himself to pleasing others."

"Secrets" will be the attraction at Griffin's next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday."

Eight of the survivors of the colony of thirteen Eskimos which winter ed on Wrangel Island a year ago under the personal command of the late Charles Wells, are shown above as they appeared on the liner Iyo Maru on it s arrival at Victoria, B.C. The party was removed from Wrangel by the Soviet armed transport, Red October. In the group of five the centre figure, with hood, is Mr. Abraham, now leader of the party. Also in this group are John Adams and his two sons, Max, 9 years, and Curtis, 6 years. The group of three on the right of the illustration are Mr. and Mrs. Peters and their daughter, Isit Aster.

A PARTNER OF SUNLIGHT

Cod-liver oil has aptly been called the partner of sunlight. Both out of Nature's storehouse of energy are of supreme importance to a child with rickets.

Scott's Emulsion and sunlight have been used for decades to give strength to weak-bones. A little of Scott's Emulsion with each feeding does wonders for a malnourished child or adult.

Keep your boy or girl out in the sunlight and give them Scott's Emulsion everyday—regularly!

Should Eat Less To Keep Tempers

Noted London Actor Experiments on Mice to Prove Point

London, Feb. 27.—People throughout the world would be able to keep their tempers and be endowed with better dispositions generally if they did not eat so much, in the opinion of Dr. Leonard Hill, an expert on dietetics who advocated fasting as an aid to health.

The great virtue for most persons was in abstinence and even in fasting, Dr. Hill told members of the People's League of Health at the Medical Society here recently. It was fallacy, said the doctor, to believe that it was possible to feed people into strength; what was more apt to happen was derangement of the digestive organs.

Dr. Hill explained this had been proven by various experiments in the laboratories of the Medical Research Council, where mice were fed on various diets. Given liberal amounts of food they became sleek, lazy and inert. Forced to fast for two days a week they became very active.

Dr. Hill said he was in favor of imposing a tax on white bread on the theory that whole wheat or whole grain bread was superior to the other kind, and because it would add 20 per cent. to the national food supply of Great Britain. Much less meat should be eaten, the doctor asserted. The reason so much meat was being consumed everywhere was because it appealed especially to sedentary workers, as it gave them a feeling of warmth.

REPORT PAIR DEAD IN SCHOOL HOUSE

Winnipeg, Feb. 27.—Provincial Police were last night investigating a report that a young school teacher and a man had been found dead late yesterday in the Westwood Schoolhouse, near Wheatland, Man., in the Brandon district.

Police headquarters here had no details of the tragedy, but a brief press despatch from Rivers, Man., said that Miss Marguerite Anderson and a man named Wallace were found dead in the schoolhouse at 5 p.m. A gun was found near the bodies.

Wallace is not known in the Wheatland district, the report said, having arrived there only Tuesday night from Glenboro', Man.

WAR WIDOWS TRY TO SAVE PIRIE

Otawa, Feb. 26.—A deputaton representing a number of war widows in Canada will wait on the Minister of Justice next week to ask commutation to life imprisonment of the death sentence recently passed on John B. Pirie of Ottawa, convicted of the slaying of his wife and two children. Pirie served in the British Army for more than 20 years, and it will be urged that he was suffering mental unbalance, following war injuries and during a period of unemployment and financial strain when he put his family to death. C. G. McNeill, Secretary-Treasurer of the Dominion Command of the Great War Veterans has promised the spokesman of the war widows, Mrs. D. J. McKenny of Ottawa, the support of the G.W.V.A. in the appeal.

MUSSOLINI HAS RECOVERED WELL

Rome, Feb. 27.—It is stated that Premier Mussolini has completely recovered from the attack of grippe which has kept him in bed for the past eleven days. His temperature has returned to normal and all other symptoms have disappeared. His doctor, however, has advised him to remain in bed a couple of days longer in order to avoid the danger of a relapse, the weather having turned cold and uncertain.

Mussolini, who throughout his illness continued to keep contact with affairs of State, is now able to devote even more time thereto. One or another of his secretaries is with him almost constantly, while he keeps in touch with his Ministers on the telephone, which stands at the bedside.

He is expected to get up for the first time the day after tomorrow, and will return to his office shortly afterward.

FORGER IMPROVED HIMSELF IN JAIL

London, Feb. 27—While Ernest Everett was serving a sentence at Camp Hill prison for forgery he was taught engraving by prison authorities as part of their scheme for the rehabilitation of prisoners. Recently he was arrested and found guilty of uttering spurious treasury notes cunningly engraved.

Lord Hewart, the lord chief justice, has demanded an explanation of why a forger, of all persons, should be taught engraving in prison.

Probabilities—Colder Sunday Night

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT HANDED PRAISE FROM ALL SIDES OF ONTARIO HOUSE AT TORONTO

Unusual Situation Apparent Midway in Life of Parliament

MANY COMPLIMENTS

Virtually Every Department Comes in For a Share

(Special to the Intelligencer)

Toronto, Feb. 28—Closing days of the debate on the Address have brought an unusual if not precedented situation, in one respect. There has been a number of noteworthy and sincere expressions by Opposition members in approval of the Government's activities and policies along various lines. At the first session of a new Parliament good wishes are sometimes lightly spoken. In a pre-election session there is a tendency to seek political capital. Midway in the life of a Parliament expressions of commendation from across the floor may well be marked and appreciated by any Government.

During this week, words of praise have come in this way with regard to virtually every department. Hon. Manning Doherty approved the Government's action to aid unemployment in the province, and also Hon. Mr. Martin's marketing investigation overseas. Hon. H. C. Nixon acknowledged assistance given by the department in finding an export market for turnips. E. Proulx, (Lib., Prescott), spoke appreciatively of highway work in his constituency. Approval has been expressed of the programs of the departments of education, of lands and forests and of mines, and also of the Attorney-General's efforts in behalf of law enforcement. The important recommendations regarding marketing tabled in the report of the agricultural enquiry committee have already met with approval in all quarters and have been specifically supported in a statement to the press by the late minister of agriculture.

Capable Business Men

Tributes from the Government side such may be quoted here. Major J. F. R. Belford, East Northumberland, speaking in the debate on Thursday afternoon had this to say: "I want to compliment the Minister of Mines upon the work he is doing. The great railways of this country have been built chiefly by Ontario. We have supplied the sinews of war to develop the West. It is time we got some return from these illimitable resources in the north country. All it needed was a business man at the head. To-day we have two business men in the Minister of Mines and the Minister of Lands and Forests, who are in touch with those who can help build up this country, and I want to congratulate the province in possessing two men of such business capacity who are willing to lend their services. I can see that Northern Ontario is going to be one of the grandest parts of this province, and bring back to us tenfold and a hundred-fold all the money we have expended upon it."

Interest in northern development was also indicated by other members from other than Northern Ontario constituencies, and J. A. McCausland (S.W. Toronto) declared the north would soon be "our one best bet." This member also paid a high tribute to the ability of Col. W. H. Price, saying, "The provincial treasurer has done well; there is no need of a man to look after sale of bonds or any advisory board to look after him."

O. T. A. Question

Even on the matter of the proposed Temperance Act amendments, which, by the way, are not yet before the House, there has been a lack of vigor in the criticisms offered from the Opposition. W. E. Raney, Progressive leader, delivered a speech almost entirely shorn of vindictiveness; the Liberal leader, Mr. Sinclair, pretty well side-stepped declaring himself, and his amendment to the address, charging breach of faith on the part of the premier in proposing to permit sale of 4.4 percent beer, has not even the support of his own party. Ed. Tellier, North Essex; E. Proulx, Prescott, and Z. Mageau, Sturgeon Falls have all announced that they will support the bill, and Mr. Proulx even proposes a vote against his leader's amendment. On the other hand, there is every indication of Conservative solidarity, and the Government caucuses, according to the prime minister, have been fully unanimous on all items of the legislative program. Because one Toronto evening paper predicted that Major J. F. R. Belford (Con., East Northumberland) would not support the Government in the division on the address, it will be of interest to quote his own words, delivered in the House on Thursday afternoon. Pointing to the Government's fine record and deprecating the suggestion that it would deliberately seek to mislead the House, Major Belford said he proposed to vote against both the Raney and Sinclair amendments, and added:

"There are enough good points about this Government of ours without worrying over 4.4 beer. What I would suggest to those uncertain how to vote is this: We have two amendments, introduced for purely political partisan purposes, taking this temperance issue and making it a football in the hope that it may further political aims. I ask that my friends of the Conservative Party shall vote against each of these amendments and support the Government in the division on the address. When the matter comes before the House, discuss it on its merits. It is your own opinion that must guide you, and if you consider the amendments and regulations attached to be beneficial, vote for them. You will have full facts and particulars."

TRAMP RANG BELL TO GET ATTENTION

Tillsonburg, Feb. 28.—A knight of the road bent on obtaining a night's lodging at the expense of the town did a novel stunt totally unknown in the history of Tillsonburg. He wandered into town shortly after 11 o'clock at night and proceeded to the office of the chief of police in the town hall, who unfortunately was down Broadway on business. Evidently the visitor desired prompt service and rang the fire alarm at the town hall. The fire laddies, however, were saved a trip and a few minutes later the chief had his visitor in the town jail for the balance of the night and he departed on his way in the morning happy and unaware that he had caused any commotion in the daily life of this smart little town.

Family Believed Policeman A Cat

Community is Puzzled by Strange Actions of Neighbors

Brantford, Feb. 27.—A strange story is told by High Constable Fred W. Kerr, after a visit to Kelvin, a small village in Brant County, where he went to investigate rumors of unusual occurrences that had the village in an uproar. He reports that a family, consisting of father and mother one son and two daughters, is the centre of the commotion. The father seems all right, but the others are laboring under the delusion that Indians are using some witchcraft on them that causes them to see things that are not so.

The case is puzzling the medical authorities down in that section and also has the officer worried. They claim that the Indians mixed a potion which distorts everything, and when Constable Kerr visited the place he appeared to the inmates of the house as a black cat. They even went so far as to set the neighbor's dog on him, the canine being a descendant of Fred's own special breed. They are firing off guns to ward off the evil spirits, some neighboring windows being broken in the attempt.

The case is unique, the persons being white and having always been regarded as responsible people by their friends.

RADIO CLUB PLANS SHOW HERE SOON

The Radio Club of Belleville held their meeting at the Chamber of Commerce last night, in spite of the condition of the weather a goodly number of members were present.

Mr. Davis of the Ontario Radio Company, Belleville, brought down a 5-tube Neutrodyne and loud speaker which he demonstrated to the club, these sets are assembled at their own place of business in the Belle Theatre block, Mr. Davis explained the different tubes used, wiring, etc., of the Neutrodyne. Avote of thanks was tendered Mr. Davis by Charles J. Symons, vice-president of the club.

Committees were appointed for Radio Show which will take place very shortly. Mr. J. Owen Herity, Manager of the Chamber of Commerce was made an honorary member.

Support Measure To Be True To O.T.A.

Declaration of North Hastings Member in Ontario Legislature

A statement that men who refused to support the Government policy in preserving the temperance act of Ontario, were not true to the ideals of temperance and an enthusiastic review of the results of the Hydro enterprise marked the speech by Hon. J. R. Cooke of North Hastings in the Ontario House.

Mr. Cooke dealt first with the burden of debt at present resting on the people of Ontario. On each family of five, he showed there was an indebtedness of $2,000. In addition there was an annual charge of $300 for municipal, Provincial and Federal taxes. There was, however, a brighter side to the picture—that of the vast natural resources of the Province. Last year, Ontario's mineral production was $75,000,000; timber production $150,000,000, agricultural production, $500,000,000 and other industrial production nearly $1,000,000,000. Then there was the Hydro enterprise. In 1910 it started with a thousand horsepower, while today 22 water powers were being operated with a distribution of 700,000 horsepower serving 400,000 homes. To Sir Adam Beck and Chief Engineer F. A. Gaby, the speaker gave chief praise for the building up of the Hydro enterprise. A reserve of $6,000,000 a year, he stated, was now being set aside.

Insincere Criticism

Mr. Cooke then dealt with the recent Settell investigation and stated that the Liberal leader's utterances had not been characterized by kindliness, sincerity and friendship in his criticism of the Hydro and the charges levelled against its officials.

Mr. Sinclair wished to know what charges he had made, stating that he had merely been quoting the findings of Judge Snider.

To this Mr. Cooke replied that although no charges might have been made it had been sought to create an atmosphere of suspicion.

Several exchanges on this issue took place between Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Cooke and finally S. Clarke (Lib. Northumberland and West) inquired when Liberals had ever opposed a Hydro vote.

"Since 1905 it has not mattered which way the Liberals voted," was the retort.

With regard to the O.T.A. Mr. Cooke said that when the time came when outside organizations could dictate the policy of the Government it would be a bitter day for the province. The Conservative party was willing to submit its record, as opposed to the Liberal record, before the great jury of the people. The Liberals had always been the sworn enemies of prohibition. He was amazed at the brazen hypocisy of the member for West Northumberland, who had supported the various Liberal Governments and who now declared his conversion to the cause of prohibition. The Liberals had practiced "black-hearted flattery and deceit" as opposed to the record of fidelity and square dealing of the Conservative party.

In particular, Hon. Mr. Cooke cited the failure of Hon. Mr. Nickle to secure the co-operation of the Liberal Government at Ottawa in the enforcement of the O.T.A.

"I say," Hon. Mr. Cooke concluded, "that any temperance man who refuses to support the Government in its present measure to preserve the Temperance Act is false to the ideals of the temperance cause."

CITY WOMEN MARK DAY OF PRAYER

The Women's Day of Prayer was well attended in spite of the inclement weather yesterday, when a good number of the women, representing all the Protestant church of the city, including the Salvation Army, met in the Parish Hall of Christ church. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Hurst, assisted by Mrs. A. Brown, who read the Scripture lesson. Prayers were offered by the representatives of the various churches, missionary work being the special subject for petition.

Presbyterian congregations of Fletcher and Valette decided against joining the United Church of Canada. The vote was: For union 70, against union 105.

F. EBERT, FIRST PRESIDENT OF GERMANY DEAD

Victim of Peritonitis Following on Appendicitis Operation

A STRONG LEADER

He Guided His Country well In Dangerous Days

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Feb. 28.—Friedrich Ebert, first president of the German Republic, died at 10.15 this morning, succumbing to the ravages of peritonitis, following upon an operation for appendicitis five days ago.

The former saddle maker, whose skill in guiding the infant republic through the first turbulent years of its existence was acknowledged even by bitter enemies, made a gallant fight for his life, but his heart was unequal to the burden imposed by poison.

President Ebert was first of all German leaders to forget party lines, when it became necessary to check extremists either in the radical or conservative camps. His attitude won the confidence of Ambassadors and ministers accredited to Berlin, and he was a powerful factor in bringing about the acceptance of the Dawes plan which promises to calm the storm that has raged about the reparations problem for many years.

Herr Ebert started life as a saddle maker, but years of experience as a labor leader and organiser developed him. He was described as a hard-headed, tactful leader who made a gallant fight in behalf of the German Republic and German masses under heart breaking conditions.

The death of Ebert will probably result in a new election date in advance of the one scheduled for June.

Was Poor Market for Change To-day

Butter Was Plentiful and Sold as Low as 38 Cent

Owing no doubt to the cold weather prevailing the attendance upon the market this morning was by no means as large as is usually on Saturday. A feature was the scarcity of dressed fowls and the price asked for same. Chickens sold from $1.50 to $2.50 a pair, and as high as $1.50 was asked for a single fowl.

Fresh dairy butter was fairly plentiful and reasonable in price ranging from 35c to 38c per pound. Fresh eggs were also plentiful and in consequence were obtained at a moderate figure, namely 35c to 40c per dozen; the latter price being for special. All baskets were labelled either specials or fresh eggs.

Cream was sold at 25c per pint. A considerable quantity of saurkraut was disposed of at 10c per quart or three quarts for 25c.

There were no changes to note in the price of vegetables excepting potatoes which showed a slight increase in price, namely 85c and 90 cents a bag.

A number of stands where meat was cut up was noticed on the market square. Beef sold from 10c to 18c per pound and pork 15c to 22c per pound according to cuts.

A few quarters of beef were offered for sale the general price being 9c per hind quarters and 8c for forequarters.

REV. DR. E. N. BAKER SPEAKS IN CHATHAM

Dr. E. N. Baker M.A. D.D., of Albert College was the visiting delegate and speaker on the recent occasion of the Rotary clubs international birthday at the Chatham club where Rotarians and their Rotary-Annes heard Dr. Baker as the speaker of the evening following a banquet in the club rooms.

Telling how he became a Rotarian, Dr. Baker explained he had been invited by the President of the Belleville club to attend a luncheon and hear a speaker on education. There he beheld Protestants, Roman Catholics, Grits, Tories, rich, poor, laborers and capitalists, side by side working for the common good with one aim in view. Then he said, "This is the sort of club I would like to be a member of. It is just my style." He was accepted for membership and after due consideration of the expenses involved, accepted and has never regretted his decision.

"You are benefitted according to what you put into Rotary, how much of self, not what you get out of it."

In explaining Rotary principles, Dr. Baker said, "Rotary is a philosophy of life that undertakes to reconcile the conflict between the profit for self and the duty and impulse to serve others and is based on the principle, "he profits most who serves best". Primarily Rotary was to study the theory of service as a true basis of success and happiness in business and in life, to give practical demonstration to the community, and to practice service in daily life in the hundreds of various walks, and by precept and example to spread this new good will, over the world.

FLAMES LICKED AT BEDSIDE OF WHOLE FAMILY

Campbellford Man's Hair Burned in Saving His Children

EARLY THIS MORNING

Ran Half Mile Over Frozen Road in Night Clothes

(Special to the Intelligencer)

Campbellford, Feb. 28—Having all hair burned off his head in his brave and successful effort to save his wife and two children from flames which razed his home at three o'clock this morning, Charles McCoy of Campbellford then ran over ice and frozen ground barefoot and in night attire for a distance of one half mile to Benore's Mills, shrieking a fire alarm which brought neighbors to the scene too late to save the house which was a mass of flames.

McCoy and his wife, whose face is badly burned, with his two daughters aged two and eight years, are resting at the home of a neighbor named Graham, where physicians and neighbors are doing everything in their power for their comfort. The children were carried to safety by the father as soon as he was awakened by the fire, when flames which were consuming the bed scorched him. Luckily all four slept in the one large bed.

The house which was owned by Dr. West of Campbellford was completely destroyed but was fully insured. The contents and all worldly possessions of the McCoy's is a total loss without insurance however. McCoy, who is a hard working man with the McKelvie and McCook Lumber merchants is up against it now, and Mayor Meyers with kind hearted citizens, will take up a subscription for him and his family.

The Campbellford fire fighters answered the alarm very promptly but were powerless to save anything so far advanced was the fire.

Defective stove pipes caused the fire in the home which was situated on the Grand road, last house inside the town limits on the sixth concession boundary line.

"Quo Vadis" Film Has 30,000 Actors

Italian Motion Picture Production is Titanic Achievement

New York, Feb. 27.—To weld and wield 30,000 people in a motion picture as was done in the Italian production of "Quo Vadis," is a titanic achievement. And like all gigantic things, it lumbers heavily—its very proportions at times dragging the drama roughly behind it as the Roman chariots of Sienkiowicz's tale trailed Christian martyrs around the arena.

In spectacular scope it probably never has been exceeded. It whacks the spectator with sledge-hammer blows, exhausting the nerves with a terrible climax in Nero's maniacal perversions. And more than any picture I have seen the staccato of movement suggests noise, great surges of sound, increasing its brusque vitality.

Its faults—and there are enough—are mainly due to the size of the production.

Portrayal of Nero

Its strength largely is Emil Jannings in the role of Nero. Jannings exhumes the monstrous paranoiac with an understanding and a rendition which places him among the great actors of all time. Here, one feels, is the authentic tyrant weak, vain, terrible in his casing of flabby flesh surmounted by a coronet of flowers, whipping women with silken cords, casting victims into the horrid pool of lamprey eels, consigning folk of a threatening faith to lions and aurochs—then, praying to his Christian servants to save him in the hour of doom.

The picture teems with incidents of barbarism, leavened perhaps insufficiently for the popular taste with episodes of heroic beauty. It may well be pondered, in its apparently valid representation of the Roman decadence, by those who believe the world of men is on the down grade.

One of the striking scenes, showing the reaction of his sycophants to the sixth Caesar, is Petronius' revulsion at the emperor's abominations—Petronius, the dandy of the court, who reads his scathing denunciation, which he knows also to be his death warrant, and then has a surgeon open his veins.

Plenty of Realism

Realism is overwhelming to the squeamish in some spots, especially where the beasts snarl over the fallen Christians in the torture arena, and in the atrocities that accompany Nero's burning of Rome. To balance these is one memorable scene where to save her threatened child, a Christian mother, with some of the elder Roman spirit, mounts a chariot and wins a race and the upturned thumbs of mercy from the populace.

One whelming scene follows another throughout the gamut of the major passions. And with a unity that is surprising for a piece and a crowd so unwieldy all lines of action spoke in to Nero as the hub of the tragic wheel.

From the standpoint of entertainment, there is too much to "Quo Vadis." It is like an overdose of a powerful stimulant. It sends one exhausted emotionally from the theatre.

The picture was made by the Unione Cinematographica Italiana and is presented by First National Pictures.

City May Be Faced By Filteration Plan

Chamber of Commerce Member Hints Province May Require It

At the well attended meeting of the city Chamber of Commerce, the president told of his experience in an industrial plant in Belleville, where water had to be filtered before it was used and he stated that even during the winter season the filters had to be cleaned several times a day thus showing the impure nature of the water that came from the taps.

Mr. Bennett said that filtration was certain to be forced upon us in the no distant future by the Provincial authorities and it should be given immediate and earnest consideration.

Are Power Rates Too High

A considerable discussion took place over power rates, Mr. Wray and others maintaining that the profits from the Hydro System at Belleville were being used to make up for deficits in Peterborough and other places. No action was taken.

Gasoline Tax

Mr. Bennett, Capt. Ruston and others took strong exception to the proposal by the Provincial Government to place a tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline without any compensating reduction in motorists' licenses. Some of those present think this was placing altogether too heavy a burden upon the motorist.

Mr. G. A. Reid took the opposite ground and expressed the opinion that the tax was one of the fairest that could be imposed. He was willing to pay this or more if necessary as long as the proceeds were applied to the upkeep of roads. After some further discussion a motion was carried to endorse the stand taken by the Ontario Motor League that the tax on gasoline should be accompanied by a reduction in motorists' licenses and that the City Council and the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce be asked to concur in this resolution.

Started Literally On A Shoe String, Now Head Of Jewish Theatre Managers

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 28—Starting literally on a shoe string, thirty-five years ago, Max Gabel, Yiddish playwright, actor, producer and president of the United Hebrew Actors' Booking Agency, was recently the recipient of a further honor when he was elected president of the Jewish Managers' Association.

Thirty-five years ago Gabel earned his first dollar in America selling shoe laces on the Bowery. There he came in contact with many of the Yiddish Thespians and slowly drifted into the East Side playhouses, finally obtaining a menial position in one of them. After several years he was given a small role in a fourth rate travelling company and commenced his climb to the top of the Yiddish theatrical world.

He finally landed in Montreal where he played for a long time at the old Bijou Theatre on Vitre St. There he eventually organized his own company and produced the first play of his own authorship. It was the beginning of his rise as a producer.

Mr. Gabel before leaving for Toronto recently for a short appearance here, announced plans for extending his producing activities. He is negotiating for a theatre here in which to feature productions.

Gabel acts as well as writes and produces his own plays. He is one of the most prolific of Jewish playwrights, having written over a hundred plays himself. Gabel's versatility at all angles of the theatrical world has earned him frequently the appelation of the "Jewish George M. Cohan". Two of his plays have been bought by Al Woods for English production.

His wife, Jeannie Goldstein, is also an actress and has appeared before the footlights since childhood.

BELLEVILLE HAS BEEN SELECTED FOR CONVENTION

Urban School Trustees to Meet Here Next Year

ARTHUR McGIE BACK

Study of Music in Public Schools is Commended

Urban School Trustees' Association of Ontario will convene in Belleville in 1926 it was decided at the close of their London convention. Arthur McGie, this city, was appointed a member of the executive.

The convention concurred in a resolution to have the Department publish in comparative detail, the results of annual examinations held in Collegiate Institutes and High Schools. A Health committee for Urban School Boards was recommended and resolutions of interest which carried were, disapproval of any Act whereby any extra taxation burden will fall upon urban centres by reason of establishment of metropolitan areas; decision that a moderate amount of homework for pupils of public and secondary schools develops initiative, promotes discipline and gives vigor and impetus to ther growing faculties. The study of music in schools was recommended to be on the staff of notation and the Department will be asked to recommend suitable text books in the staff notation. It was resolved that the University extension plan shall not apply to cities where sectorian Universities are already established. The cadet movment was enthusiastically endorsed in public and High schools.

Junior University classes in Collegiate Institutes throughout the Province was favoured by the convention for placing better educational facilities within the reach of the general mass of children. The Department of Education will be requested to take steps to arrange for the Inter-provincial exchange of teachers.

Joseph O. Elliott of Kingston, is the new President and was presented with a highly polished gavel made by pupils of Hamilton Techinal Institute, from Canadian woods.

Among the highly entertaining addresses, two were heard from Prof. R. K. Sandwell of Queen's.

Toronto, Guelph and Belleville extended invitations to the association for the 1926 convention, but Mayor W. C. Mikel, K.C., and the Belleville trustees were the successful contenders.

MAGAZINE GIVES BELLEVILLE BOOST

That Belleville Chamber of Commerce is doing a splendid work in the prevention of a recurrence of investments of money by citizens in worthless, wild-cat schemes arranged by promoters in city and district, is vouched for by February number of the "Dry Goods Review". Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been left by people in this city and district, and Belleville merchants are sponsoring this salvation idea, in their interests as well as the interests of the community, especially in the cases of widows and orphans.

Their plan has been the printing of four-leaf pamphlets for distribution. The catch word of the pamphlet is "Warning" and a series of warnings in the form of pertinent queries should serve as sufficient reminders.

A MUCH NEEDED PROGRAM

The time for trifling with the conservation of Canada's forests, the greatest of all national questions, is passed, declares Frank J. D. Barnjum. "Definite, radical and constructive steps are of transcending importance," as the Pulpwood Commission warns, and he proposes the following reforms are not as "radical" as they are imperative:

1. Prohibit the export of unmanufactured wood. This would immediately save thirty-five million trees annually to Canada (constituting a pile of wood four feet high, four feet wide, two thousand miles long) without the expenditure of one dollar of the taxpayer's money. It would merely entail the passing of a simple order-in-council, for which authority was voted by parliament nearly two years ago.

2. Appoint a permanent trained uniformed force of well paid fire rangers, under a non-political military head with full power to enforce all fire protective measures.

3. Place the cutting on all forested areas, whether publicly or privately-owned, under the supervision of government foresters and limit the cut to not more than the gross annual growth. (Our stock is now so low we cannot longer afford to live on our capital.)

4. Withdraw all forested lands from settlement. ((Settlers in wooded areas have been the cause of greater loss through forest fires than all other causes combined. Why send people out into our small remaining wooded areas to clear up more land when Canada already has such a vast surplus of vacant land devoid of all forest growth which is much more suitable for farming purposes.)

5. Provide for universal slash disposal and eliminate the present wasteful logging methods.

With the above regulations put in force throughout the Dominion no one, not even the operators, would be injured. The cost of forest conservation would simply be passed along to the consumer on whom it should rightly rest. The land owner would be immeasurably benefited for while he would be restricted as to the volume of his cut, the price obtained would be proportionately greater. He would also be living on his interest instead of consuming his capital as a present.

The alarming situation in our remaining forest area calls for the immediate adoption of all of the above remedial measures and any party or any class of people who would undertake to block them would lay themselves open to the charge of despoiling their country for their own selfish ends.

The life of our wood-using industries is at stake. The existence of our water powers, upon which millions have been spent and further hundreds of millions are to be expended, depends upon the adoption of the above measures. The very fate of our richest remaining inheritance, our mines, is also at stake since wood and water are vitally necessary for their development.

The immediate adoption of the above enumerated measures is the only means by which Canada can be saved from forestial bankruptcy within less than ten years.

ON THE RIGHT ROAD

T. L. Church, member for North Toronto, popularly known in his riding as "Tommy", made little progress last session with his resolution which states, "The time has arrived for Canada to have a national policy in relation to its coal supply.", and that "no part of Canada should be dependent on the United States for such supply."

"Indominatable" is an apt description of the member for North Toronto. For he is putting the same resolution to Parliament again.

There are times when a man should know that he is beaten. But Mr. Church does well to press his point in this instance when an issue so vital to the interests of Canadians is at stake.

THE NEW WEMBLEY

Wembley, by this time, is a household word the whole world over. It stands in the eyes of the British Empire for a great concerted effort to tell the world what the British Empire is. It stands in the eyes of the rest of the world for a definite attempt on the part of the British Empire, the first made by any nation or group of nations since the end of the war, to start afresh the slow-moving wheels of commerce.

Wembley in 1924 did much to fulfil the aims with which it was started. But much yet remains to be done. That is the reason for the holding of the new Exhibition this year, an Exhibition with all the attractions of the old Exhibition and many fresh ones of its own.

The objects of the Britisht Empire Exhibition, 1925, may be briefly summarised as follows:—

1. To continue the work of Empire education begun in 1924.
2. To show to the people of the home country the almost illimitable possibilities of the Empire Overseas.
3. To seek, in the development of the raw materials of the Empire, new sources of Imperial wealth.
4. To foster inter-Empire trade and to open up fresh markets both for Dominion and home products.
5. To make the various races of the British Empire better known to each other.
6. To serve for six months as the social centre of the Empire.

In the new Exhibition practically every part of the British Empire will be represented in the pavilions specially erected last year to house their displays. The British Government will again be at home in the concrete pavilion guarded by the six concrete lions. Home industries will be displayed in the Palace of Industry and Palace of Engineering and in numerous smaller pavilions and kiosks throughout the grounds. The art of the Empire will find a home in the Palace of Arts. The Stadium will be the scene of numerous athletic events and spectacular displays, and the Amusements Park will again attract the attention of the young and the frivolous.

Dr. Frank Crane's Daily Editorial

The New Nakedness

CIVILIZATION at first is a matter of putting on clothes.

As civilization advances, however, the process is reversed and people take them off.

The new styles for women show that they are wearing less clothes than ever.

The era of the enormous hat and stays and bustles and all sorts of fads seems to have disappeared.

Nowadays women wear as few clothes as possible and no corsets.

The trend is symbolic. As civilization advances our privacy is being decreased. Time was when our letters had to be sent by messenger. Now everyone can telephone and get us out of bed or out of the kitchen at any time.

The radio exposes still more. Our souls are becoming nude. When a device is perfected for transmitting scenes by radio the instrument will be much more deadly than it is.

The fundamental reason why people leave the country and come to the city is the urge for privacy.

In the country everybody knows your business. They mark your goings out and your comings in, and if you come back on the five-five train instead of the four-fifty they want to know why. Your least act is subjected to the scrutiny of the community and sometimes its censorship.

In the city you know nobody and want to know nobody. You may live in an apartment house with thirty other families and not known one of them You can go to ruin in forty ways and nobody cares.

Some people object on paper to the isolation of the crowd in the city. They say they have no neighbors. This may be very pretty talk, but most of the people do not want neighbors. They want privacy. And they come to the city to get it.

When Wordsworth went up into the country to write, the countryside people did ot know what he was doing. He appeared to be doing nothing. Consequently they employed a spy to see what he was up to. They resented a man doing as he pleased.

The newspapers and the reporters are also a bar to privacy. One never knows when he is going to get on the front page.

Some people make use of this fear of publicity to extort blackmail from the victims.

Thirty Years Ago

Yesterday being the last day of the festive season, was taken advantage of by many of our citizens to entertain their friends. Mrs. Norman Phillips, Mrs. G. W. Walker and Mrs. P. J. M. Anderson entertained their friends with afternoon teas, whilst Mrs. U. E. Thompson entertained in her graceful manner, a large number of friends in the evening with a progressive pedro party.

W. S. Cook, cheese buyer, left at noon today for England on business in connection with the coming season's operations.

Mrs. Fred Butler gave a pedro party to a number of her friends last evening at her residence, Yeoman street. A very pleasant time was spent by all.

Dutchy's Diary

In Cold Water

Every once in a while a newspaper picks up an interesting item of news which it does not publish. Sometimes it happens to concern a man who would lose his job if the information were published. Often it is obtained indirectly, traced to its source, found to be correct but not used; a reporter hears that a city man is to start a new business for example and on approaching him learns it is true, but for business reasons not to be made public property.

There is another class of newspaper story that quite frequently fails to appear in black and white and that is the kind that, if published, will turn the laugh on an individual for no good purpose. Such an item reached my ears yesterday.

The title for this story might appropriately be called "In Cold Water", as sort of a sequel to "In Hot Water", Harold Lloyd's laugh producer at Griffin's' now.

A well-known business man of Belleville took a camera with him yesterday to shoot a few scenes of the ice piled up in the bed of the Moira south of Bridge street. To make sure of getting the best pictures possible, he tried an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" stunt of crossing the blocks of ice.

You can pretty well guess the rest and picture him sliding gracefully into the cold, cold water with nothing for a bathing suit but perfectly good business clothes. You can imagine his grin of delight as he bobbed up in the cool sparkling water and shouted,

"Come on in boys! The water's fine!"

It is said that this hardy citizen walked very slowly to a convenient place on Front street just to show common people what an every day sort of a stunt he pulled off. At any rate, he couldn't have proceeded at a very fast gait, for by the time he reached his destination his clothes were as stiff as Mrs. Newly rich when she happens to meet the scrub woman, her former neighbor.

They say it took almost a ton of coal to undress him.

He's a thoughtful photographer though. As he made his slide off the ice he hurled the camera to safety.

I've kept faith. The identity of this individual has not been revealed. And if he should go around boasting that he was the first to go swimming in 1925, he will have no one to blame but himself.

While we are on the subject of bathing I am reminded of another painful scene in Douglas on the Isle of Man.

We were on the beach and decided to go for a swim in the briny. My companion was a University of Toronto graduate who was planning to take theology on his return in the fall with the intention of entering the Methodist Ministry.

Clambering in the bath house on wheels we discovered that the attendant had left us only a half a bathing suit apiece—just the trunks.

"Hey!"

The attendant came across the sand on the run. He must have thought it nothing less than a murder. At least he seemed real peeved when we told him our troubles.

"That's all there is—there isn't any more", he told us in effect.

Two of us there were, with but a single question. We looked from each other to the entirely inadequate costumes. We took a peek through the little square opening in the door and saw several young ladies battling the waves.

My friend reached for his trousers pocket and produced a penny.

"Heads we do. Tails we don't," he said.

The coin said "Don't, but he said "Let's go' 'and we did.

There were many other suits just as abbreviated as ours but we kept away from the girls as much as possible.

That friend was a good sport. He would have made a most excellent servant as a Methodist Minister. But shortly after we returned, Germany overran Belgium, and he ministered to the world even as His Master did.

To-day's Smile

Prepared For Christening

A Highland minister came to a lonely house on the margin of his paris hto baptize the child of a shepherd who lived there.

"Are ye prepared?" he asked.

"Aye," said the shepherd, "I got a grand ham, ye ken, for yer dinner."

"No, no," said the minister, "I mean spiritually prepared."

"Aye, aye, meenister, I got a quart jar frae the Ian."

Bootleggers Are Jailed At Lindsay

Magistrate Gives Grim Warning to Law Offenders

Lindsay, Feb. 28—Periodically Provincial officers working in connection with the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act swoop down on Lindsay to round up men engaged in the illicit sale of liquor. Those engaged in the business have had warnings. It has happened before with invariably the same results, namely, heavy fines and sometimes imprisonment. Yet warnings have been allowed to go unheeded, with the exception that in the three cases of alleged bootlegging tried before Magistrate Bradford yesterday the Provincial Officers, more commonly termed "Spotters" did not witness the actual transaction, but had "go-betweens" who passed over the money, received the liquor and returned it to the spotters. It was just the same as if a citizen went to a hardware store and purchased a garbage can; he paid for the can at the time, but the can was delivered by the driver of his delivery rig. The actual sale was made.

In pronouncing judgment on the local men yesterday, His Worship, Police Magistrate Bradford said: "The time has come when those engaged in the illegal business of whiskey selling will be punished severely. Substantial fines or prison bars are about the only way to discourage bootlegging. The law is there and must be respected as it is law."

Two were fined $650.00 with one month in jail and in default of payment of fine, an additional four months in jail.

Organize School

Bancroft, Feb. 28.—Those who have advocated a school Fair for North Hastings, can now rest assured that their pleas have not been in vain. Last evening Mr. Ray Atkin, District Agricultural Representative for this district was here to assist in organizing the School Fair. A public meeting was held in the Community Hall where the objects and the benefits of school fairs were outlined and the distribution of seeds to the children who are willing to plant and culture same, took place.

Buying Kingston Theatre

It is learned that a company is being formed in Kingston to purchase the Grand Opera House. The Grand was purchased from the late Ambrose J. Small, Toronto theatre magnate, by the Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, some years ago, but this company went into liquidation and the theatre is now being controlled by R. E. Meagher, liquidator, Montreal.

It is the intention of the new company, which will be composed of Kingston men, to get the deal through as soon as possible so that some of the big road shows can visit Kingston this spring.

Suing For Damages

A case of unusual interest will be heard at the sitting of Division court in Napanee next Wednesday morning when Judge H. A. Lavell will preside. J. Burns of Kingston is being sued by Gordon Henderson, who resides on the provincial highway about a mile out of Napanee for damages amounting to $175 to his automobile for which he claims Mr. Burns is responsible.

Lost His Toe

Mr. P. Cook, 30 Simcoe St., Lindsay, was seriously injured Thursday morning about ten o'clock, when a shot gun he was cleaning preparatory to going on a rabbit hunting trip was accidentally discharged, the shot entering his foot. Dr. J. A. White was called and after rendering first aid took the injured man to the hospital, where an operation was performed.

It was found necessary to amputate two toes on one foot and to remove part of the other.

Y.M.C.A. Friends Hear Inspiring Talk

J. W. Hopkins Tells of Mission of Famous Institution

Wherever the Y. M. C. A. is established, yesterday it was commemorated as "Religious Emphasis Day," and Belleville was right in line. Yesterday forenoon a conference was held with several ministers of the city churches which was led by Mr. J. W. Hopkins, Metropolitan Secretary, of Toronto. The object was to have ministers, if possible, take a deeper interest in Y. M. C. A. work.

At 12.15 members of the Association Board ministers and others partook of dinner at the Y which event was presided over by Mr. T. D. Ruston.

The after dinner speaker was Mr. J. W. Hopkins who in his opening remarks referred to the conception of the Y. M. C. A. some 81 years ago and its originator the late Sir George Williams who was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Casting Sunshine

The Association has through these years been casting sunshine over the pathway of many young men he said.

The Y. M. C. A. was based on Christian ideas and to-day there are 9,000 branches in the world with some millions of membership. In China there were 216 branches with a membership of 78,000. The movement, motive and missionary, of the Association were minutely dwelt upon by Mr. Hopkins. The Y. M. C. A. was a great movement, had a great motive and a God given mission. That mission was to develop a high type of Christian character in a young man and train him for christian work. It is a great challenge, to help boys to be the kind of men Canada needed to-day to develop true citizenship. Young men who who were true to Y. M. C. A. work would also be true to church work, he said. The challenge to-day was not to go away to fight an enemy but for the young men to stay at home and fight for the kingdom of God and make sacrifical endeavor; catch the spirit of the life of the Saviour whose mission it was to go about doing good; comfort men with the living Christ and do all in their power to induce young men to take the Saviour as their leader.

At the close of the address the chairman expressed the appreciation of all present of the address given. Benediction by Rev. D. C. Ramsay brought the gathering to a close.

OLD SECRET KEPT FOR YEARS, RELEASED

Chicago, Feb. 28.—John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Abraham Lincoln, whose burial place has been a mystery, was buried in the basement of a warehouse at Portsmouth, Va., Colonel Hamilin Davison formerly attached to the United States army post at Portsmouth, has revealed. Booth's body was covered with acid and the grave filled with limestone and dirt, Colonel Davison said.

Seven men attached to the United States secret service buried Booth and were sworn never to reveal the burial place. The last survivor of this burial squad died recently without telling the secret. Colonel Davison says he was told of the burial place by Colonel Baker, head of the United States Secret Service at the time of Lincoln's assassination, who had charge of the burial. Baker is dead.

CANADIAN DENTISTS

(Montreal Herald)

Four Canadian dentists at work 2,000 miles from the coast in China are building up a large practice and a still more promising force of native dentists. In their dental school at Chentgu there are eight pupils and one Chinese has graduated and is on the staff. All are working under the Canadian Methodist Mission.

Press Opinions

LIQUOR SMUGGLING

(Detroit Free Press)

The people of the United States will not support an effective movement to destroy it. The majority are indifferent about the matter or are actively hostile to the suppression of liquor smuggling. If this were not so, the government would require no big appropriation to enable it to suppress smuggling. The besieging fleet would dwindle of itself to insignificant proportions, because the big market it now supplies would be gone. Rum row will disappear the moment people of the United States really want it to disappear. But while it may be harassed considerably by government agencies, it will not disintegrate as long as the country is almost openly hostile to the efforts that Washington puts forward against it.

INVITING STAGE CENSORSHIP

(Ottawa Citizen)

So degrading and vulgar have become the plays currently produced on Broadway that a leading lady, Miss Helen MacKellar, has revolted and threatened to withdraw as the star of a piece because she believes the words she has to speak and the actions she has to simulate are damaging to her character as a woman. The result has been a storm of protest from press and public against these "gutter orgies" which invariably picture aspects of the lives of prostitutes. "Clean up Broadway" is now the cry.

THE SOVIETS LEARN SLOWLY

(Baltimore Sun)

Piecework payment, condemned in the early years of the revolution by the bolsheviki, is reported to have gradually crept in since a campaign was begun a year ago to spur workers to greater production as the only means of bringing prices down and saving soviet industry from total ruin. Wages depend upon productivity. The more the worker produces, the more he can earn. He not only helps to enlarge for every one the supply of the particular goods which he makes, but he must in the long run secure for himself a larger wage, which will enable him to buy more for himself. State factories with day work, supervised by political jobholders, must inevitably have a low rate of output. These lessons, at enormous cost, the soviets seem now to be slowly learning.

MEDDLESOME BORAH

(Detroit Free Press)

Borah undertakes to compare Bolshevist propaganda in Great Britain with the non-interference of the British government towards the private bootlegging activities of British subjects.

It is ridiculous for Mr. Borah to suggest that Great Britain is "a party to a conspiracy against our constitution and the maintenance of our law" because it does not turn in and help us obey our constitution and enforce our statutes.

As well accuse this country of conspiracy against Great Britain because we do not help it settle its Egyptian problems, and its Indian problems, and its Irish problems by instituting a press and rostrum censorship and forbidding the export of monetary contributions to trouble-making movements in those lands.

KEEPING PRICES UP

(London Morning Post)

If people invariably insist upon having the best of everything the price of the unsold inferior article will be added to the price of the best. Thus the housewife will be paying both for what she gets and for what she rejects. Purveyors of meat, fish, and vegetables must cover their losses somehow; and, indeed, one of the standing mysteries of life is the ultimate destination of perishable articles of food, which are no longer saleable. The economical housekeeper is advised in marketing to buy stuff which although not technically the best, is quite good enough for all practical purposes. There need be no hardship nor scarcity.

A WELL-KNOWN ART

(Montreal Herald)

"The art of love-making," says a Baltimore preacher, "should be taught young men and women." If so, then grandmother should be taught to crochet—which is proverbially impossible because the grandmothers of the proverb already know all that os to be known about it.

If there is one thing in which the youngsters do not lack knowledge, it is proverb already know all that is to be royal road to that knowledge which young hearts have no trouble in finding and travelling. The first man and woman were created with proficiency in the art, and since creation men and women have been born with it.

PROGRAM REPAID MANY AT HOLLOWAY

A very pleasing entertainment was given in Holloway St. Methodist S.S. Rooms last evening by the Silver Glee Club, composed of the following members: Mr. Colclough Sr., Mr. W. Colclough, The Misses Eva, Edith and Ethel Colclough, Mr. H. Howard, Mr. W. McIntyre, Miss M. Rose, and Mr L. Woodley.

There was a very good attendance, those braving the weather elements being amply repaid by the quality of the program presented. Some of the numbers were given in character costumes and were exceptionally interesting. The Glee Club excell in their chorus work, very pretty effects being accomplished by the quality and harmony of their voices. Mr. R. Woodley teacher of the Excelsior Young Men's Club, under whose auspices the entertainment was held, acted as chairman. Following is the program:

Part Song, "Hail Smiling Morn", Silver Glee Party; Solo, "My Open Fire", Mr. H. Howard; Trio, "Dickory Dock", Misses Colclough; Humorous Song, "Father's Name Was Brown", Mr. W. Colclough; Part Song, "The Belfry Tower", Party; Reading, "Selected", Miss M. Rose; Solo, "My Wee Little Hut", Mr. L. Woodley; Character Duet, "Pretty Polly Hopkins", Misses Eva and Edith Colclough; Solo, "Flight of Ages", Mr. W. McIntyre; Solo, "The Songs My Mother Sang", Miss Eva Colclough; Part Song, "In This Hour of Softened Splendour", Party; Chairman's Remarks; Character Trio, "Urchins We" Mr. W. and Misses Colclough; Solo, "All Joy Be Thine", Mr. H. Howard; Part Song "Music All Powerful", Party; Reading, "Selected", Miss M. Rose; Solo, "The Lilac Tree", Mr. W. McIntyre; Humorous Duet, "The Milkmaid", Misses Colclough; Humorous Solo, "Robin Adair" Mr. W. Colclough; Part Song, "O Happy Eyes", Party; Solo, "I Dream I Hear You Singing", Mr. L. Woodley; Part Song, "Comrades Song of Hope", Party; Part Song, "Goodnight!", Party. God Save the King.

If Your Skin Breaks Out Use Sulphur

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

FINDS HIS LIQUOR ALONG THE TRACKS

Searchers along the C.N.R. tracks on Pinnacle street today may or may not find a bottle full of whiskey. That is of course on condition that the story of an inebriated one in police court this morning, is to be believed. He told the court today of finding a bottle half-filled with the precious liquid which makes the "glad" come. He found it Friday, sitting beside a railway car on a siding.

Regarding the tale as another version of the O.T.A. cock and bull story, the accused was remanded to the county jail for one week by Magistrate Masson.

Accused who was well intoxicated was arrested on Victoria Avenue Friday forenoon.

FINALLY ACCEPT FARMER'S STORY

Last Monday a young Thurlow township farmer told the court that a kind motorist who gave him a lift into the city one week ago to-night, and who produced a bottle of liquor, caused him to be in the condition which police officers found him—lying face downwards, in an icy puddle of water on Dundas street. He was remanded to jail for one week as the court did not believe the story.

This morning when he was again placed on the stand, he again stated that his story was correct and he could not change it.

His story was very reluctantly accepted and he was fined $10 and costs of $14. He had but five dollars, but the telephone placed him in communication with a "friend in need".

Big Turnover Ot Real Estate Here

One Firm Alone Handles Third of Million in Three Years

Belleville isn't dead. She is very much alive. There may be a few skeptical citizens who believe activity has lost some of its hum, but if there are any persons who honestly believe the old city is less hopeful than it should be they should keep right on reading in this column and be otherwise convinced—that is if cold, honest facts will convince them.

This will introduce the reader to an explanation of facts which show why Belleville is not dead, speaking in terms of real estate transactions which have occurred over a period of three years, from March first 1922, until March first 1925.

To arrive at the facts, the Intelligencer spent one hour with J. L. R. Gorman, manager of Belleville Locators, who by the way has been in business as manager of Belleville Locators here since March first 1922. The value of city property alone turned over by Belleville Locators in the three years is $383,600.00—the actual figures taken from the books and supplied to the Intelligencer, and this remember, does not include several farms which have been "turned".

Besides Belleville Locators, there are three other big real estate dealers in this city. Assuming for argument's sake that the Locators did 1-3 of the business in the three year term, then the total amount of city property turned over in Belleville in the past three years must be in the neighborhood of $1,090,800.00. Then of course the smaller dealers and the transactions of private individuals have not been taken into account, in these figures.

Of the three years just passed, 1923 was the banner year for the realtors, though 1922 was very good also. Last year there was a falling off in comparison with the best year 1923. There is every prospect for a very successful year "coming up."

Many Want Homes

At the present time Mr. Gorman has in his office a list of 43 names of prospective buyers of properties and a list of 54 prospective renters. Half of the number of prospective renters are officials who have moved to Belleville but who have not yet moved their families and who are seeking for suitable houses.

In this conection it might be stated that there is a tremendous shortage in Belleville of houses to rent of 5, 6 or 7 rooms within a rental range of from $2 to $50 per month. There is a great demand for houses of this type in good location. Cold houses which are not neat and tidy and which are not desirably located however are not wanted and not a few of them remain untenanted at the present time.

When asked for his opinion of the ideal house for rent and speaking from his varied experiences, Mr. Gorman did not hesitate to explain that the crying need in Belleville is for small, well built bungalows in good location—not too far distant from the business section and on desirable streets. The call is for modestly priced houses which may and can be erected for as low a complete cost as $2,500 and ranging to $4,000. An optimist with some capital who pursued this plan in Belleville and erected houses of this type, would make a good deal of money for himself and be of real service to the community.

Chance for Enterprise

"I could rent ten, six room bungalows this afternoon," explained Mr. Gorman if they were here to rent. "They can be built for less than $3,000 complete and one is under construction in the city now. Truly they may not have hard wood floors and probably not a furnace, but they will be comfortable and desirable homes, which could be improved from time to time by the owner."

Belleville Locators do not confine themselves to homes. The company also deals in factory sites and at the present time is negotiating with one of a number of enquiries for factory sites here. Another new departure is the National Farm Agency Limited, a world wide agency for farm transfers, which has as its Belleville agency, the Belleville Locators. This agency has supplied the local agency with from 150 to 200 confidential prospects for farms who are approached by the Locators if they happen to have a property which they believe would suit the prospect. The agency keeps in constant touch with all immigrants to the country, and is very complete.

The Locators work strictly on a commission basis and refuse to go out in an endeavour to get their clients price for property "and as much above as you can for yourself". Sooner or later the buyer would hear of that method and with his little hammer would do all in his power to knock the agency and city.

Summing up then, in this department of the city's progress alone in but three years, does it seem reasonable to say that Belleville has not been sluggish, that considering the conditions, Belleville has not been stagnant nor dead. Does it seem probable that within ten years the population may be increased by 7,000 if each and every citizen proves to the peering eyes of the world that he or she is a builder along the highways of progress.

Recreations Win From The Printers

F. Domenico Had High Single of 279 at 'Y' Alleys

Last night at the Y alleys there were two games played in the men's league the first between the Recreations and the Printers which proved a win for Recreations by 415 pins. The Recreations were never headed in any of the three games and rolled a nice score of 2933. F. Domenico was the high single with 279 and Anderson carried off the three string honors with 634.

In the second game the Whistles and Y Reds met and after a battle royal the Reds proved victors by 149 pins although neither team were rolling any scores. The Whistles were up 13 pins on the first game and then the Reds were up one pin on the two games and they also came strong in the last game while their opponents fell by the way. L. Barrett carried off the single honors while L. Cook took the three string with 235 and 576.

WHIG NOTES ON KINGSTON GAME

Rogers, Rooney and Hargraft left for Montreal last night after the game where this afternoon they were to appear with the R.M.C. intermediates against McGill in an intermediate intercollegiate game.

Joe Smith was a hard worker last night, and went the route without a rest. Smith had he had any luck, would have had two or three goals to his credit.

Roy Reynolds' rushing was the outstanding work of the local team along with Rogers' beautiful goal tending, but the big fellow could not hit the twine. He was in hard luck last night for sure.

Grimsby has a wonderful machine for a hockey team and should they win the round, the Soo will find them of more than passing interest.

It was a nice clean game, and there are no scores to settle in Grimsby on Saturday night.

When Rooney was injured last night he refused to leave the ice. He showed his gameness by sticking to the game despite the injury to his eye.

The locals did well and they were up against a stronger team than they have played this season. The fans were satisfied that they gave everything they had.

Rogers played the best game of his young career last night and he made stops that seemed almost impossible. He is a great goalie and took the eye of the Grimsby officials.

Critisizing Harris For Grant Series

Argue Young Washington Manager is Doing Foolish Thing

New York, February 28.—Stanley (Bucky) Harris, youngest of baseball managers, is playing the 1925 season backwards, in the opinion of close followers of the national game.

Dollars at the gate in March may mean the wrecking of a championship club before the schedule is half played, it is argued, yet the Washington Senators, world champions, will meet the contenders in the last World Series the Giants, in a score of early season contests and then go into a bitter series with the New York Yankees, who raced them to the wire in the American League last fall.

Possibly Harris figures that he can play the spring contests with the Giants without thought of victory, but rather with stress upon the conditioning of the team. But this is not the spirit of baseball, and Washington and New York fans who will crowd the parks for this "second world series" will insist on something more than mere participation in baseball contest.

Furthermore followers of the game contend, a club that enters the regular season after simply going through the motions of training is not tuned to the fighting qualities necessary to a championship combination, such qualities as the Senators possessed in large quantity during the seething days of the last campaign.

If Harris plays to win, as he must if he is to satisfy fandom in the spring contests with the Giants—for, it must be remembered, the box scores are published in the leading papers—then he is likely to face the Yankees in th first battles of the American League schedule with a team already tired. In the Giants he tackles a club that knows how to hit in all seasons, training or otherwise, which will make the going hard for his veteran pitchers, Johnson, Ruether, Mogridge, Gregg and Zachary. The National League champions, on the other hand, have won four successive pennants without relying upon their boxman, their offense being concededly better than their defense.

Should he elect to ignore fight and hazardous play in the preparation for the arduous schedule ahead, he may have to rebuild the morale of his club and explain to the lovers of the game how he happened to win a world championship.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA

(Detroit News)

Who can blame Japan? Most nations have discriminiated against Japanese goods by a high tariff. Her people are not wanted in Canada, in America, in Australia. The Great Powers have blocked her every attempt to get control in Chinia. But there is an enormously rich stretch of the Asiatic mainland to which she can gain access by treaty, and from which the present Government of Russia is in no position to bar her.

Wolves And Tigers Won Last Night

Score For Both City League Games Was Three To Two

It was a coincidence that at the arena last night in two city league hockey games which were staged, that the score in both games were identical, namely 3 to 2. The Wolves of the North and the Boosters were the opposing teams and the Wolves devoured the Boosters to the tune of 3 to 2. The second game was between the Tiger and the National Casting teams and the Tigers were victorious by a score of 3 to 2. There was a good attendance of spectators and both games were well contested. Ken Colling was the referee.

During the first game Homer Townsend of the Booster Club was accidently struck over the head with a stick with the result that he sustained a rather severe scalp wound.

Curling

Four rinks of the Picton Curlers came over last night for a freindly game. The ice was in splendid condition and there was some very fine curling. A very enjoyable evening was spent with the visitors. The rinks and results were as follows:

AURA LEE TAKES JUNIOR SEMI-FINAL

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Aura Lee qualified for the junior O.H.A. finals by defeating Brockville 10 to 1 at the Arena last night and winning the round 12 to 2. They will meet the winner of the Owen Sound-Midland series for the championship on Wednesday and Friday of next week. It is the first time since 1922 that Aura Lee have reached the junior finals and the fourth in the last ten years. And Marsden's youngsters have won three championships.

While Brockville were outclassed as far as the scoring went in last night's game the Island City lads did not do badly at all. They are fast, and could bring the puck to the Aura Lee defence but lacked the finish to work it through for goals. Kennedy was the visitors' bright star, being about the fastest skater in the game and a pretty stick-handler. He played splendid hockey throughout, while H. Garand was also good.

Shot From Too Far Out

Sheridan and Woodcock, the Brockvill edefence pair, were nothing to rave about defensively, but they rushed and shot fairly well, but did most of their firing from away out. As a matter of fact the entire team showed this fault undoubtedly due to playing on a short ice surface. McMahon made a number of good stops, but it was impossible to get all the shots, so fast did Aura Lee drive through on him and they whacked the rebounds back at him too.

The teams:

Aura Lee—Stark, goal; McKay and Foster, defence; A. McPherson, centre J. McPherson and McIlwaine, wings; Parks and Armstrong, subs.

Brockville—McMahon, goal; Woodcock and Sheridan, defence; H. Garand centre; Kennedy and McIurue, wings; P. Garand and Walsh, subs.

Referee—H. H. Jacobi.

STRONG TALK GIVEN AT 'Y' LAST NIGHT

A stirring message was delivered last night before a well attended supper meeting of Belleville's Y.M.C.A. and Church leaders held in the Y.M.C.A by Mr. Hagerman of Toronto.

Mr. Hagerman chose for his subject, "Building Men Four Square," adn gave a graphic picture of four sources of strength or secrets of power that make Christian Young Men impregnable in their characters.

His first source of strength was that young men could fix their gaze on their invincible leader Jesus Christ, who claimed that "All power was given unto Him." The second source of strength lay in the complete equipment made available to them by their leader—Christ, who gave them adequate protection from the enemy's attack in waging their Christian Warfare against influences that assail them The 3rd source of strength was through the worthiness of the aim set by the Master namely confronting young men with Himself.

The final source of strength that the speaker stressed was in the fact that ultimate victory was certain in the cause of Christian young men, because Christ was in their every battle for the right.

The conference was brought to a close by a statement made by Mr. J. W. Hopkins of Toronto in which he suggested that a careful follow up be made by the committee looking forward to the conservation of results felt by all to have been well worth while and that would be certain to accomplish the deepening of the religious work of the Association.

Exhibit at WEMBLEY

THE Canadian Government has decided to continue its participation in the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley in 1925.

Eighteen million people visited the Canadian Pavilion last season, and an even greater attendance is expected in 1925.

The opportunities for making new and valuable trade connections are exceptional, and the Government invites Canadian exhibitors to be fully represented.

Applications for space should be sent immediately to J. S. McKinnon, Canadian Industrial Representative, 205 Royal Bank Building, Toronto.

March 20th is the last day for applications.

"THE DOORS WERE AYE STEKIT AT HALF-PAST TEN."

I mind when I courted my ain wifie Jean,
Tho aften I gaed there she seldom was seen.
Her father was an elder and like a' godly men,
He aye stekit the doors at half-past ten.

As sacrement Sabbath I saw Jeanie hame,
Ony lad wha his lassie wad ae ha' done the same.
We cracked sa lang by the cosy fire een
That the time slipped awa till half-past ten.

Then the auld man he read and reverently prayed.
And when he was done he solemnly said
It has ae been our rule, but na doot ye ken,
That we aye steek our doors at half-past ten.

Oh aye, said Jean, but the best o' the joke
Was her slippin' ben and stappin' t he clock,
I'm no gaen to tel ye the why or the when,
But the hands never pointed to half-pas ten.

But the cat very soon was let out o' the poke.
By the cacklin o' the hens and the crawin' o' the cock.
Openin the shutters, he saw plainly then
We would a hae orr parrage before half-past ten.

Ye neer heard such laughin' a' the days o' yer life,
And nane were mare hearty than auld man an' wife.
Said he: "What will the lassies no do for the men
When they'll cheat auld father wi' half-past ten?"

It was settled then that Jean should be mine,
The weddin' soon followed and we hae sin syne
Lived happy thegether and hope to the e nd,
But we ae mind the night about half-pas ten.

So now a wee bit o'advice I wad gae:
Don't stint young folks' time when they go on a spree.
I'm a faither mysel and brawly I ken
That the fun just begins aboot half-past ten.

W.C.T.U. NOTES

According to the Calgary Albertan, the people of Alberta spent more than four million dollars during the last seven months of 1924 for beer alone. The same paper says that $12,000,000 is a fair estimate of what Alberta spends on liquor in a year. These statistics are said to be causing some people to wonder what would happen if this money were spent for some good and worthy purpose.

Joseph Chamberlain, the great English statesman said: "Temperance reform lies at the bottom of all further political social and religious progress. Drink is the curse of the country. It ruins the fortunes, it injures the heath, it destroys the lives of one in every twenty of our population. If I could destroy tomorrow the desire for strong drink in the people of England, what changes we would see! We should see our taxes reduced by millions sterling. We should see our gaols and workhouses empty. We should see more lives saved in twelve months than are consumed in a century of brutal and savage war."

Answers to Correspondents

M. E.—I can refer you back further than that for the use of modern slang. In Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," he has Mrs. Page say: "I cannot tell what the dickens his name is."

"Contrary Mary"—Why the "contrary"? Mary is such a lovely name it is a shame to spoil it by unlovely adjectives. I am not a beauty specialist, Mary, but I believe you will find hot water a wonderful aid for your complexion. A tumbler of hot water slowly sipped the first thing in the morning, if persevered in, will make an astonishing change in the skin. Take a cupful after meals and one the last thing at night. It will help your indigestion, which is almost fatal to beauty, and probably the cause of the pimples. By the way have you a garden, Mary?

"Old Subscriber"—It was a great pleasure to receive a letter from a subscriber who has taken the paper for so long. It was also gratifying to have your appreciation of this Page. I have never heard of the name you mention nor the poem, but shall look them up for you.

NATURE LORE

By

Wallace Havelock Robb

Ever since little boys and big boys, little girls and big girls or even the English sparrow have noticed that birds come and go, migrating south in winter and coming north to have a home and family in summer, all have wondered why it is so and what they do it for and where they go and when do they know it is time to make the long flight and one hundred and one other questions which are not at all foolish questions either.

It is queer enough for us to not know what is behind it all but it is only natural for us to think about it and wonder if the old birds lead the young ones back and so on.

Nothing is more common in nature than the love of children unless it be curiosity. They say that an old maid is the most curious minded creature in the world, but I do not know much about old maids, unless it be that I know some very nice ones and do not believe the saying about curiosity, for almost any creature of the woods is almost curious enough to risk its life just to peek under a veranda or find out what a man is scratching about when mosquitos attack him in the woods.

Curiosity in any form is amusing. You will have a very good chance to see some of it very soon now, for the wild native birds will be passing north and will be coming into the gardens of bird loving people, to visit the bird bath, even in April, and to get some little scraps of food.

If you will watch the actions of that rat among birds, the English sparrow, you will see how very puzzled he is now that Spring is here and birds which he has almost forgotten, begin to suddenly appear out of the skies and are certainly alive and well and fat after a long hard winter.

Poor Mr. and Mrs. English Sparrow are at their wits end to know how all these birds suddenly disappear and suddenly appear. It is very entertaining to watch the English sparrows watching the native birds. The English Sparrow does not migrate and does not now what it is all about. He is like us in that respect he has to remain where he is and spend the winter and try to make the best of it.

In the Fall, Mr. E. S. is puzzled by waves of birds appearing and remaining for a day or two and suddenly vanishing. They have gone south, of course, but he does not know that. Soon he forgets about them and by the time winter is breaking up. Mr. E. S. has been telling his wife that it will be wonderful this coming summer, with everything to themselves since those beautiful singers the people favour so much have departed and must be dead and he is glad of it and will make nests in all the bird boxes.

Then, one sunny morning in Spring, when all is very quiet, Mr. E. S. hears the voice of the Robin and he rushes out to make sure and when he sees and hears the lovely red breast, he jabbers in anger and tells Mrs. E. S. that some magic must be in the air, for how else could the Robins pop up so suddenly?

Mr. English Sparrow goes to the pens to be much colder again bird bath next day, which hap- and gets another surprise, for there, in the ice cold water, splashing about is Rossignol, the Song Sparrow, the sweet and sparkling singer of early Spring and when Mr. E. S. is rushing home to tell his wife that there is something mysterious about the whole business, he meets one lonely Blue Bird, sitting on a fence post and sighing, "Oh dear, Oh dear," and Mr. E. S. chatters and remarks that it certainly is "Oh dear and what's more it is "Oh the dickens," to see all these native birds.

"Where did they go? and where do they come from again?" say the English Sparrows, and if you watch them you will see how they follow the newly arrived birds all over the place, hide near them and look at them and look at them in a way which is comical to see. The poor simp of an English Sparrow even follows native birds about and watches them catch bugs which have come out to warm in the sun, and he sometimes goes back to the place or hole the bug was pulled out of and tries to figure it all out.

We are not much better off than the English Sparrow but we know more and it is surely nice to watch for the different waves of birds, stopping in our gardens over night and going on again.

Spread the bird table generously and you will find birds swarming on some day or maybe on some days there will be none. You will perhaps see birds going north to far away places and if you miss them when passing, you will not see them again until they call on the return journey in the fall. So, spread the seeds and food and let's keep an eye on the different birds at the table or bath.

FAMOUS SPOONERISMS

Scholar Who Gave Us a New Word

The New English Dictionary thus defines "Spoonerism"—a word joyfully familiar for fifty years to students at Oxford: "Spoonerism [f. the name of the Rev. W. A. Spooner, (1844—)]. An accidental transposition of the initial sounds, or other parts, or two or more words."

The recent retirement of the Rev. Dr. Spooner, the distinguished historian, who has been successively fellow, tutor, and warden of New College, Oxford, has caused an outburst of amusing anecdotes in the press; for the fame of Spoonerisms eclipsed his very considerable fame as a scholar, much to the ironic amusement of the victim himself.

Strangely enough, however, Dr. Spooner—who celebrated his 80th birthday last July—says he does not remember ever having made a "Spoonerism" "I am rather afraid my 'spoonerisms' are the invention of the undergraduates of New College," he told a recent interviewer. One of the most famous Spoonerisms is said to have been uttered in a sermon that Dr. Spooner preached at Oxford. "Ah, brethren," he said, "are you never conscious of a half-warmed fish within the breast?" Who would recognise in that extraordinary sentence a "half-formed wish?"

It was Dr. Spooner that at the conclusion of the Oxford celebration of Queen Victoria's Jubilee called for three cheers for "our queer old Dean"—a bit of enthusiasm that did little honour to the "dear old Queen" for whom the celebration was held. It was Dr. Spooner also that in bicycling days is supposed to have dismounted "to boil his icicle."

One student of New College insisted to his dying day that the warden had rebuked him for "fighting liars" in the quadrangle; and there is a story that he took his history class severely to task for "hissing all my mystery lectures." There is also a tale of an unfortunate graduate whose waste of time led to the accusation that he had "tasted two whole worms."

Dr. Spooner is said on one occasion to have read out in chapel the first line of the hymn "Conquering kings their title take" as "Kinquering Kongs their titles take," and to have proposed the Royal toast, "Gentlemen, the K ing," as "Kinglemen, the Gent," to the mild dismay of the assemblage. Another Spoonerism that has, rightly or wrongly, been attributed to the veteran scholar, is the request that a railway porter would look after his luggage, "two rags and a bug"; and the inquiry at a wedding whether it was "kistomary to cuss the bride."

Being a kind-hearted and philosophic man the ex-Warden of New College finds quiet diversion in the gradual multiplication of anecdotes about him, nine-tenths of which, needless to say, are apocryphal, though none the less amusing for that.

In the special election for Reeve of Stamford Township, Carleton F. Monroe was re-elected over his opponent T. R. Stokes, by a majority of 603.

ELAINE

By CHARLES GARVICE

"Tea is served, my lord," said a footman approaching and speaking in a subdued tone.

The marquis locked the cabinet, and dropped the key in his pocket, then offered his arm to Elaine.

"Will you come upstairs to the gallery?" he said. "My friend—and the tea—are there."

Elaine took his arm, and they went up the broad staircase covered with thick Turkey pile; the major admiring the carving of the ballustrade and pedestals, and the marquis stopping now and again to point out a famous picture or statuette.

"That's a Holbein," he said, "but it's in a bad light. Indeed, most of the pictures are hung where one cannot see them, for there is no one to care?

Elaine half glanced at him. Why did not he care?

When they reached the stained window he stopped and pointed to some words scratched on one of the ruby panes.

"Cut with a diamond ring by Wilfrid Nairne the day before he was taken to the Tower. 'Farewell, weary life.' Can you make it out?" he asked, as Elaine bent forward, and as the red glow from the glass dyed her hair crimson, he looked down at her with an abstracted admiration from which he seemed to rouse himself suddenly to add, "He was executed on Tower Hill. I am under the impression that he deserved it; most of the Nairnes did. They were a bad lot, Miss Delaine. That is the council chamber. We had a king staying here for three or four weeks in the long ago, and he and his Ministers of State used those rooms for their councils. King Mouse reigns undisturbed there now."

As he spoke they ascended the last short flight of stairs and entered the gallery.

Elaine could scarcely repress an exclamation of delighted wonder. The long stretch of golden oak, broken at every foot or two by some noble picture, the antique tapestry which lined the lower part of the walls, the paneled roof emblazoned with the Nairne arms, all aglow with the rich, subdued light from the diamond windows, made a picture of the most impressive kind. The major stared round in silence.

The marquis did not appear to notice the effect the place had produced on them, but led Elaine up to the organ at the end of the gallery at which Luigi Zanti was seated in an attitude of attention.

"Luigi," said the marquis, "here is Miss Delaine, the lady who has graciously honored us with a visit this afternoon."

The Italian turned his pale, serene face toward Elaine who stood looking at him and feeling that he supplied the one object wanted to complete the strangeness and romance of the surroundings, and inclined her head in greeting.

But he put out his thin, white hand, and said with his pleasant, patient smile:

"Will you put your hand in mine, Miss Delaine; I cannot see it, for I am blind."

Elaine started.

"I thought I had told you," said the marquis in a low voice, but low as it was, the Italian heard it.

"You see, the marqus is so used to me that he forgets."

Elaine put her hand in his with a faint blush, and he held it gently for a second as if he were reading her by it; but still there as an expression of attention on his face as if he were waiting to hear her speak before he could really learn what she was like. The blind see by their ears, and their fingers; and often they see more clearly than those who are blessed with all the senses.

"Lord Nairne tells me that you are fond of music, and that he has asked you to hear the organ," he said.

"Yes," said Elaine in a low voice, the exquisite patience and resignation of the face had touched her, "if you will be so kind as to play."

The waiting, listening expression on his face gave way to one of satisfaction and serenity, as if her voice had relieved him of any doubts he might have had, and he nodded and smiled.

"The kindness will be on your part in listening," he said quietly. "It is always a pleasure to me to play. Indeed," and he laughed, "I do very little else. And who is that standing near you, Miss Delaine?"

He must have heard the major breathe, for he had not spoken.

"My father," said Elaine.

Luigi Zanti held out his hand and the major shook it with his genial juvenile grasp.

A little uncertain look came into the Italian's face, but he bowed.

"You, too, Sir, are fond of music?" he said.

"Certainly, certainly," replied the major in the tone of voice which persons of his class adopt when they address one they regard as a harmless lunatic who must be humored. "Always was. Ours was one of the best bands in the army. By George, you could hear 'em two miles off."

Luigi smiled and turned to the organ, but the marquis touched his arm.

"We'll have some tea first, Luigi," he said; then he looked at Elaine, and with a slight bow and a smile, drew one of the antique velvet chairs up to the carved table on which the service had been set.

"Alas! there is no lady of the house to serve you, Miss Delaine," he said, "and so we beg you to have pity on us."

Elaine sat down and poured out the tea, and as she did so she could not help being struck by the contrast between the Castle service and the one at Myrtle Cottage. She had read of silver plate, but so exquisite and costly a set as that before her had never entered her imagination; and it was with all a woman's delight in beautiful things that she touched the dainty cups of rare Sevres.

The marquis stood beside her, and having handed the major a cup, came back for one for Luigi, but Elaine had got up and carried one across to the organ before he could do so.

"Thank you, Nairne," said the Italian in his soft voice; then he looked up quickly. "It is not Nairne. It is—ah, thank you. That was good of you," he said almost inaudibly.

Elaine who had done the little kindness in the most natural, unthinking way, blushed and made haste back to the table.

"Signor Zanti's ears are sharp," said the marquis, looking down at her. "You cannot move without his hearing you, and he can tell one person from another by the sound of their breathing." He went and fetched the musician's cup. "Any more, Luigi?"

"Please. It is very good. It is better than when you make it, Nairne."

The marquis laughed shortly.

"That is a little too broad a compliment even for an Italian, Luigi," he said with pleasant cynicism. "I wish you could see Miss Delaine's blush."

"And I, too, wish I could," he responded.

LONDON'S BIRTH RATE

(London Express)

Sir Robert Blair, late chief education officer of the London county council, gave startling figures about the decline of the birth rate, speaking at a Manchester education conference "This year," he said, "the board of education is budgeting for a million fewer children in its primary classes than it budgeted for in 1910-11.

"The birth rate has fallen, and it seems still to be going down. We are losing 100,000 children a year from each age group. From a circulation I have made by the year 1932 there will be 2,000,000 fewer workers in this country."

JUST IN PASSING

No One Stands Still

Each life is better or worse than it was a year ago. Unless you can see with your own clear eyes, some growth upward and onward in the year passed and gone, you have certainly degenerated to some extent.

Shakespeare a Scotchman?

There is no doubt that the Scotch are as intellectual and capable a race as exists on earth—and they are ready, if pressed, to admit as much. I have just heard of a Scottish boy in an English school who, when he was asked where Shakespeare was born, promptly replied, "In Scotland, sir." "What makes you think Shakespeare was a Scotchman?" asked the schoolmaster. "Because of his abeelity sir!" was the reply.

Wit in Parliament

In another column you will find an article on Prof. Spooner which reminds me of a witty Spoonerism attributed to one of the sons of Charles Dickens, who was then a member of the Australian Parliament. An M.P. whose name was Willis was making a violent harangue against a measure that had been introduced by Mr. Dickens. After listening patiently to the speech, Mr. Dickens rose to reply. "My father," he said, "made famous a phrase 'Barkis is willin'.' Had he been here today the phrase would have been altered to 'Willis is barkin'.' "

Co-operation

Two fool jackasses—say get this dope—
Were tied together with a piece of rope.
Said one to the other, "You come my way,
While I take a nibble from this new-mown hay."
"I won't," said the other. "You come with me,
For I, too, have some hay, you see."
So they got nowhere just pawed up the dirt,
And oh, by golly, that rope did hurt.
Then they faced about, these stubborn mules,
And said, "We're acting like human fools!
Let's pull together. I'll go your way
Then come with me and we'll both eat hay."
Well, they ate their hay, and they liked it, too,
And swore to be comrades good and true,
As the sun went down they were heard to bray:
"Ah, this is the end of a perfect day."

STRING

"How I love string!" writes Mr. W. Heath Robinson in the "Royal Magazine" "Iron, steel, politics, wood, gold literature, sugar, wireless, psychology, silver, philosophy, coal and things like that, as I will admit right away before I go any further, are quite necessary to us.

There need be no argument about that. But at the same time I will not admit them to be necessary that each one of them may not take the place of another at a pinch. If you have no iron, you may use wood; should you lack gold or silver, there is always paper.

"How different it is with string! Nothing can take its place. You cannot lead a dog with a piece of coal; you cannot tie a knot with a piece of wood. Philosophy will not mend the broken leg of a table, nor can you spin a top with sugar. Many substitutes have been tried—dried grass, rendered tough by immersion in a solution of vinegar and tartaric acid narrow snakes, thinned out and fined down by a diet of bootlaces; slender ox tails, plaited earth worms, eels, catgut, and many other devices. These are all ingenious enough, but of no real value as a substitute for string.

"String is not merely irreplacable; it may be described as the mainstay and support of civilisation. It ties together and holds in its right position matter that would otherwise be mere clutter and lumber on the earth's surface. Without it, confusion and darkness would reign, all would be void, and life too boring to be possible

For Mothers Of Young Children

Mothers are quick to praise anything which brings health and comfort to their little ones—any medicine that will make the baby well and keep him well will always receive hearty recommendation from the mother. That is why Baby's Own Tablets are so popular. Thousands of mothers, throughout the country, not only use them for their own little ones, but are always delighted to be able to recommend them to other mothers. Thousands of mothers have proved Baby's Own Tablets to be without an equal in relieving little ones of any of the many minor ailments which arise out of a derangement of the stomach and bowels. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal laxative—easy to take but thorough in action. They banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers; expel worms and make the teething period easy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POEMS Old And NEW

THE GLORY OF THE GARDEN

Old England is a garden, and her glories are not made
By singing "Oh, how beautiful!" and sitting in the shade,
While better men than we go out and start their working lives
At grubbing weeds from garden paths with broken dinner knives.

There's not a pair of legs so thin, there's not a hand so thick,
There's not a hand so weak and white, nor yet a heart so sick,
But it can find some needful job that's crying to be done,
For the glory of the garden glorifieth everyone.

So when your work is finished, you can wash your hands and pray
For the glory of the garden that it may not pass away.
And the glory of the garden, it shall never pass away!

—Rudyard Kipling.

MY WORK

Let me but do my work from day to day
In field or forest, at desk or loom,
In roaring market-place or tranquil room.
Let me but find it in my hear to say,
When vagrant wishes beckon me astray,
This is my work, my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in my own way.
To suit my spirit and to prove my powers;
Then shall I cheerfully greet the laboring hours
And cheerful turn when the long shadows fall
At eventide to play and love and rest,
Because I know for me my work is best.

—Henry Van Dyke.

GRANDMOTHER'S TEAKETTLE

Grandmother's teakettle swings on a crane,
Crooning a ditty again and again.
Never aweary nor seeming to tire,
Grandmother's teakettle sings to the fire.

"Boil away—boil away—boil away me!
Home folks are waiting and wanting their tea."

Grandmother's teakettle, homely and stout,
Laughs with the funniest sputter and spout.
Nothing amusing at all do I see,
What is it, teakettle? Tell it to me.

"Laugh away, laugh away, little girl do;
Tea time is coming, is coming for you."

Grandmothers' teakettle swung long ago,
Singing that same little song clear and low;
Grandmother seems to have never a doubt
What the old kettle is singing about.

"Swing away, sing away, chuckle along—
Just the same teakettle—just the same song!"

—May Justus.

"Eczema on My Face Completely Relieved"

Miss Winifred Ernest, Box 46, Blockhouse, N. S. writes:

"Ever since I was a little child, I suffered with eczema on my face. At times my face was completely covered with large sores, and I tried nearly every kind of medicine that I heard of with no results. This lasted for over twenty years, until one day I asked the advice of my druggist, who bade me give Dr. Chase's Ointment a trial. After using the Ointment for a few days, the sores began to heal, and soon I was completely relieved of the disease."

Arthur Stringer's "Story Without a Name" at Belle Monday

"The story without a name", a new Irvin Willat production for Paramount, with Agnes Ayres and Antonio Moreno featured in the principal roles will be shown next Monday at the Belle Theatre where it will remain for a run of three days.

The story by Arthur Stringer, first appeared as a Radio-Prize-Title story in Photoplay Magazine. Victor Irvin wrote the screen play.

It tells of a young inventor working for the U.S. government, who has just perfected a "death ray" machine an invention destined to revolutionize modern warfare. The instrument has been successfully tested, and the scientist is making preparations for his departure for Washington to turn over the machine to the proper officials when something absolutely unlooked for happens.

What? That's the question the picture itself will have to answer for the fans. And it is said to provide as pleasant an evening's entertainment as you've ever experienced.

Playing in support of the leading players is an unusually capable cast of prominent players which includes Tyrone Power, Dagmar Godowsky, Maurice Costello, Jack Lohn, Louis Wolheim, Ivan Linow and others.

If you're looking for something in the line of gripping adventure-romance that really entertains, by all means see "The Story Without a Name".

"Secrets" To Prove Interesting Play

Is Coming to Griffin Theatre on Monday Next

Stephen Goosson, art director, and Gene Hornbostel, Joseph M. Schenck technical director, have provided sets of unusual beauty for Norma Talmadge's latest First National picture, "Secrets" The task of designing and dressing the sets was a most difficult one owing to the fact that the story of "Secrets" is laid in four different periods.

The drama opens in London in 1923, shifts to Wyoming and the American West of 1870, then to London of the same year and as it was in 1888, finishing in 1923.

Hornbostel's difficulty lay in showing the difference in architecture between the years 1870 and 1888 as well as 1923. The dressing of the sets also required much delving into old tomes and consultation of prints of bygone days.

Hornbostel also was required to round up 3,000 head of long horn steers. It was somewhat of a task to find the long horns as the bald face steers are now the favorites and not so many long horns are being raised as in the olden days.

One of Hornbostel's laughable difficulties was with the doors in the massive English sets. Although most of these doors were of fairly good size they were found to be entirely too small to permit the passage of the ladies of the cast in their billowing crinoline gowns. Accordingly the doors were changed to arches so that the actresses might make their exits and entrances with ease. Griffin's Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

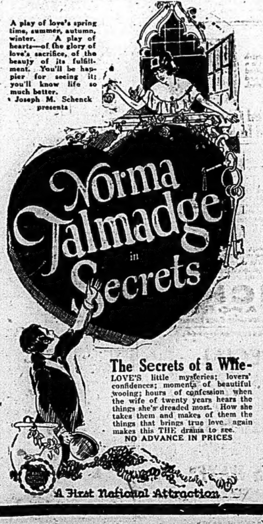
GRIFFIN'S Last Time To-night

HAROLD LLOYD in "HOT WATER"
MONDAY, TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY

A play of love's spring time, summer, autumn, winter. A play of hearts—of the glory of love's sacrifice, of the beauty of its fulfillment. You'll be happier for seeing it; you'll know life so much better.

Joseph M. Schenck presents



The Secrets of a Wife-

LOVE'S little mysteries; lovers' confidences; moments of beautiful wooing; hours of confession when the wife of twenty years hears the things she's dreaded most. How she takes them and makes of them the things that brings true love again makes this THE drama to see.

TIRED OUT ALL THE TIME

Nerves Gave Little Rest

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Harrowsmith, Ontario.—"I took your medicine before my baby was born and it was a great help to me as I was very poorly until I started to take it. I just felt as though I was tired out all the time and would take weak, fainting spells. My nerves would bother me until I could get little rest, day or night. I was told by a friend to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I only took a few bottles and it helped me wonderfully. I would recommend it to any woman. I am doing what I can to publish this good medicine. I lend that little book you sent me to any one I can help. You can with the greatest of pleasure use my name in regard to the Vegetable Compound if it will serve to help others." —MRS. HARVEY MILLIGAN, R. R. No.2, Harrowsmith, Ontario.

In a recent canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 said they had been helped by its use. This medicine is for sale by all druggists.

Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—and tell your druggist whether the material you wish to color is wool or silk or whether it is linen, cotton, or mixed goods.

PLANE NOSE DIVED INTO ANOTHER ONE

Paris, Feb. 27.—Nose-diving from the clouds, a French military aeroplane late yesterday afternoon struck another plane and sent it crashing to the ground, killing the two occupants, while the pilot of the first machine did not know what had happened. The accident took place near the military air camp at Compiegne. Three planes were flying together during the usual evening training, when a fourth suddenly shot out of low clouds and fell like a stone on the leading machine of the little flight, piloted by Adjutant Le Begue, with Observer Bocher on board. Le Begue's plane was cut in two and fell perpendicularly to the ground.

Pope Pius XI is contemplating a tour of the world according to the London Morning Post. The Post learns from Catholic sources that there is considerable likelihood of an agreement being reached soon between Premier Benito Mussolini and the Vatican. If this concordat is established His Holiness purposes a world tour.

"RUN DOWN" MEN AND WOMEN NEED

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

They Give New Vitality—and more.

The expression "run down" comes from the feeble action of an unwound clock, and the comparison is a good one. Applied to health it means a condition in which the bodily functions are enfeebled. Appetite fails, digestion is impaired, the nerves impoverished, the complexion becomes pale and fatigue is a constant symptom.

No particular organ being affected, you must look for relief through the blood, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best blood builder known to medical science. As your blood becomes rich and red, the various organs regain their tone and the body recovers its full vigor. If you are weak, begin taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to-day and see how soon improvement will show in increased appetite and renewed vitality.

Mrs. Chas. Bourdage, Five Fingers, N.B., says:—"Before taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was completely run down. I did not sleep well, my digestion was poor and I would take dizzy spells. The use of the pills changed all this and I am now a strong healthy woman."
